Letters From The Boys In Khaki

Arthur Francombe, a Barnardo ward who lived here and enlisted for the war, and who was very highly thought of by all who knew him, was wounded while fighting in Turkey, and is now in hospital at Devonshire, England. He writes Mrs. Thurston, his one time Sunday school teacher, the following very interesting letter :

I am sorry to say that I was one of the unlucky ones. I have been out to the front and got wounded and have been lying in bed for eight weeks now with a bad wound in my right thigh and cannot move my leg or my foot. The bullet went right through and I think I was lucky that it was no worse. I never saw anything like it. There was nothing but shot and shell bursting all around me. My trench was blown to pices two or three times and I got off without a scratch. I was finishing digging my trench and had just climbed out to let my mate in to clean it out when a big shell came flying through the air and fell right in the trench. I just got out in time. The trench was blown to atoms and my poor mate was wounded. I got him out and started digging it out again. Three of the chaps who were working with me were knocked out. I thought every minute my time was up. But I caught it that afternoon. We were making a charge and just as I got into it full swing a bullet caught me in my leg and down I went. I struggled to fight on but every time I tried to get up I was knocked down. After all my chaps passed the enemy spotted me and kept firing at me and drove a bullet clean through my helmet and two through my knapsack which was on my back. So you see I was very fortunate. I lay for eighteen hours before I was picked up. Nothing passed my lips for nearly three days, and water is very scarce out in the Dardanelles.

Adventure In Italy

The following article from the Calgary Albertan referred to a young man who taught school at Priceville a few years ago and was well known here. His father was a Presbyterian church minister and lived in Meaford at that time. Prof. Eastman was known here as a good sport and clever student.

Prof. Mack Eastman, formerly of the Calgary College, passed through the city on Saturday, on his way to Vancouver, to take a position on the new provincial university staff there. He is direct from Italy where he spent an eventful month or so, being arrested on suspicion every couple of days. He sailed from Naples about two weeks ago.

Prof. Eastman was informed that only 250,000 soldiers were actually at the front. No more are needed. No more could be handled along that frontier. Another million men are in Lombardy and another million some place else in Italy.

Prof. Eastman came to Canada by way of Gibraltar and the Azores. He arrived at the latter point on the day following the arrival of the St. Anne, the ship loaded with Italian Reservists, the victim of bombs in mid ocean. All were enthusiastic in praise of the conduct of crew and passengers. Everyone met the grim attack heroically and calmly. The crew started in to fight fire with their one fire fighting apparatus, in one place, and the fire broke out in 17 other places.

At Genoa, Prof. Eastman and a companion, a French student, were arrested for what seemed to the authorities taking too active interest in a fort. It seemed like a dismantled fort but there were troops in it.

They were handed from official to official and had considerable explaining to do before they were permitted to get away and ordered out of the war zone.

Later Prof. Eastman was able to get to Venice. He was one of 20 in the train to enter the city. Fifteen were sent back forthwith without excuse. They were Italians but gave as satisfactory reason, the authorities believed, that they stould enter that city at such a time. Four others were residents of Venice and were admitted. He was the other one, and his case gave more trouble.

The same rigid investigation was made.

It was suggested that he should be locked up in the station at once until further action might be taken A compromise however, was made, and he was sentenced to an hotel with orders not to move from it until called for.. The hotel was not one he desired, some distance from the depot, but the nearest one to the railway.

By some strategy he succeeded in getting an upper room in the hotel, hoping that at least he might see Venice by the bright moonlight, but that was not so easily accomplished, for on boldly advancing to open the window he saw the peremptory warning of a fine of $500 to any one opening the window. Peering through he saw some sentries below quite prepared to enforce it. However, the opening of just enough of the window to permit one to look out is not a serious offense and might be accomplished some times.

Prof. Eastman says that the general opinion is that the war will last until Dec. 1916.—Calgary Albertan.

The farmers have just as much to do in building up and improving the town as do the citizens of the town. It is to their interest to have up-to-date merchants, machinists and mechanics How can they expect these conveniences if they send to all the large cities for merchandise that should be bought from their home dealer. The few cents that can be saved by buying goods away from home is injuring your community to the extent of dollars by retarding progress and the increased valuation of all kinds of property including your own. Stand together and together we all prosper. Divide and prosperity will flee. You know what the Bible says that "a house divided against itself cannot stand".—Ex.

H. Hales of the Pioneer section of the 33rd Battalion has perhaps the best reason of any man at London camp to be more than proud of the part his family and connections have played in the present war and are still playing, Pte. Hales has seven sons, seven nephews, seven brother in-laws, and two son-in-aws at present fighting for Great Britain His youngest son, who is 17 years of age, attempted to join one of the units the other day but was prohibited on account of his age
