Why Don't You Go and Enlist?

Tune—"The Red, White and Blue"

All hail to our king and our country!
To the Britons and Allies who fight,
From the colonel right down to the sentry,
Who are standing for God and the right.
No militant foe must come nigh us,
Though the kaiser and his horde insist.
While the bullies are out to defy us,
Just now is the time to enlist.

Chorus—
Then why don't you go and enlist?
Then why don't you go and enlist?
Your king and your country now need you,
Then why don't you go and enlist?

Tho Allies are fighting for freedom,
And our country is needing recruits
To cope with the mad, cruel kaiser,
Who has gotten too big for his boots.
The fight has been worse than we thought for,
And the thick-headed Germans persist.
Young soldiers are eagerly sought for,
Then why don't you go and enlist?

Our empire is great and 'tis mighty,
Still many a thing is at stake:
Then why are our young men so flighty?
And why don't they fight for its sake?
For the sake of our homes and our honour
Britain's sons are all called to assist.
Our Country—God's blessing upon her—
Then why don't you go and enlist?

—Mrs. W. Buchanan.

Creemore

Judgeng from the number of Holstein heifers that have been brought here and sold lately it looks as though farmers around here are going in strong for dairying. The last was a carload sold on Friday by J. H. Brillinger, which brought good average prices, according to age. Yearlings sold ftom $26 to $30, and two year olds from $30 to $40.

A record job of carpenter work was accomplished recently that we think worthy of note. A day or two after Norman Day's barn was burned he purchased the old Creemore woollen mill out of which to make another. His neighbors turned out in force to assist him, and in seven days they had the mill, which was a large building, taken to pinces, teamed out the three miles to his farm, end erected into a fine barn complete, with the exception of a few minor details inside.—Star.

Private Anthony Trudgeon, who enlisted at High River, Alberta, in the overseas forces, was killed in battle. This sad news comes to friends here from the West. Private Trudgeon, who was born in Melancthon about a mile and a half from Dundalk, was the eldest son of the late Anthony Trudgeon. The brave young soldier was about 31 years of age. When his father died in 1900 the home was broken up and he afterwards went to James L. Phillips, where he worked on the farm for three or four years before going to Alberta. His brothers, Sam and Tom Trudgeon, reside at High River.—Herald.

Walkerton

A friend to whom Tony Zuber lent his gun returned the weapon to him last week loaded, and while Tony was manoeuvering around the gun it suddenly went off and blew a hole in the wall of his house.

A leaky coal stove in the home of Mr. Peter Pletch was nearly responsible for a fateful tragedy. Harvey Damm, who is boarding there, was the first to be awakened by the gas, and staggering down stairs succeeded in getting the doors opened and saving the rest of the inmates, some of whom, it seems, were badly overcome by the gas and were with great difficulty resuscitated. Although distressingly sick for a time, they all came through the ordeal without any ill effects.

Philip Weiler of Formosa was the other day fined $10 and costs for holding a raffle at a shooting match at Formosa on Thanksgiving day and disposing of turkeys, geese and ducks by games of chance. A nice point has been opened up in this case and it is possible it hasn't seen tue last of the courts yet. After Weiler had been served with a summons to appear at Kinlough, it appears that he pleaded guilty before a Formosa magistrate and paid $1 and costs for this offence. As you can't hang a man twice for the same crime, the question is whether the Formosa fine of $1 will seve Weller from cashing over the $10 punishment inflicted at Kinlough, or whether a man aleady summoned to appear at one court can annul this summons by pleading guilty in another court. The problem for the legal lights to decide is whether the first summons or the first fine prevails.—Bruce Herald and Times.

The date of opening Parliament, it is understood, has been fixed for Wednesday, January 12.

New Zealand Red Hares

New Zealend Red Hare rabbits were originally imported from the island of New Zealand into California, where they spread rapidly along the Pacific coast and soon became very popular on account of their great beauty and consequent attraction for the fancier. Their fine size and rapid development also attracted the attention of the market breeder. While little is known of this beautiful little animal in Canada, there are said to be more New Zealand hares in California than all the other breeds of hares combined The writer imported two does and a buck from California last spring and they have raised between thirty and forty young ones that are in the pink of condition. I am satisfied they will do well in Canada. I breed five different kinds of rabbits and I may say the New Zealand Reds stand very high in my estimation. One thing I like about them is that the young ones are all the same color—no culls—like little reddish buff balls. You can't tell one from another. The New Zealand Red resembles a fox in color—a dark reddish buff over the back and down the sides, and the under part a creamish white. The standard weight of the New Zealand hare is ten pounds.

On the market where the breed has been introduced it is said that it ousells either the Belgian hare or the Flemish Giant, owing to its neat, clean appearance. It is claimed rapbit meat yields 83 per cent. digestible nutriment, very superior to any other meat, whether beef, pork or mutton.—W. J. Trathen in the Orangeville Banner.

W. W. Hewitt, caught selling liquor to a 59th battalion soldier, was sent to jail for three months in default of a fine of $300.
