Letters From The Boys In Khaki

A recent letter from Lieut. A. M. Thurston in Flanders gives the following thrilling details of a couple of events :

Did I tell you about a show we put on with the 28th and 29th Battalions early on the a. m. of Jan. 31. They have been back in rest almost ever since, but yesterday I met one of the 28th boys, whom I knew quite well, Pte. Andrews. He was in that row and got a D. C. M for it—he's earned it many times. He told me something I hadn't heard before. Just as the 28th party of 30 men or so left the Hun trenches to come back to our lines a machine gun opened up a short distance down the German line and around a curve, where they had a clear sweep at the gap in our wires, you see how they had our fellows?

A private was passing a wounded sergeant over the parapet, and the first swish of bullets cut across his hand and the sergeant—well he isn't going back to Canada. Just at that instant Andrews saw it coming—a dull red streak cutting through the air in a graceful curve. It came down at a terrific rate—one of our 60's, straight for the Hun line. There was a thud which no one heard, then Andrews says, a roar above all other noise, and the machine gun stopped. There wasn't any gun then, and there wasn't any crew ; nothing but a hole—and the rest of the fellows got back safely.

You see, the machine gun was firing into the gap in the wire, only 100 yards away, which our fellows had to go through to get back. Andrews says it would have mowed them down. Of course it was pure luck—no one deserves any special credit, but the point is, that the gun went up about two seconds after it started when it had only killed one man instead of twenty five.

The Huns tried a little bombing party of 20 men on one of our trenches this week. Poor fellows!—our sentry saw them first, and his whole platoon standing to on the fire step, with their hands full of grenades and rifles and bayonets, ready. Just when the Huns got to our wire the grenades flew among them. The official report merely says "The attack was repulsed." Yes it was, but how it was repulsed and the result of its being repulsed was more interesting.

I saw part of the result outside our wire the next day through a periscope. Another part is back in a prisoners of war camp in France or England, another part our fellows buried, and another part must be in German hospitals. If any got back unwounded it's merely another case of the Lord helping those that help themselves—or some of them. We lost one man—that is, the Canadians did.

Well, I must close. There's a mouse here with a bad cold. Did you ever hear them cough?

NEITHER DO WE

We don't see what the people of Canada are thinking about, when they don't put a quick ending to the pro-German propaganda of such men as Pastor Russell, whose efforts are now being used to prevent recruiting for overseas service. On several occasions of late he has been denied the privilege of speaking in public, but a mere denial is not going far enough. The interference with recruiting now, when the country is calling for men and more men, to stamp out the Prussian military spirit, is nothing short of treason, and men like Pastor Russell should be arrested at sight and put in a safe place of keeping till the end of the war. He has no right to interfere with our business, and should be handled without gloves. He'll not carry out his plans very long before he runs up against something to interfere with his health, comfort and impudence. It's bad enough to tolerate such people in times of peace, and in times of war they should keep quiet and keep out of danger.—Durham Chronicle.
