Co-operative Threshing

ELECTRIC POWER UTILIZED ON FARMS AND COST MATERIALLY REDUCED

The benefits from modern methods of utilizing waterpowers are not confined to cities and towns or industrial centres. A recent undertaking in a Kansas rural district illustrates the manner in which the progressive farmer may secure the advantages of hydro-electric service.

Nine farmers along the transmission lines of a hydro-electric plant formed a co-operative Electric Threshing Association, purchased equipment,and are doing their threshing with electric power. The service is reported to be very satisfactory and the cost to the farmers is about one-half of that charged for steam threshing, despite the fact that the rate paid for electrical energy is 5c per kilowatt-hour, or about double the charge that would be made in many localities in Canada. The energy required is approximately a quarter of a kilowatt-hour per bushel, varying with the nature of the grain threshed. The power company, as well as the farmer, benefits from this undertaking, deriving a handsome revenue from energy which might otherwise go unutilized. It is expected that the same electrical equipment will be used for filling silos and will produce an equal additional revenue from that source.

The farmers have also utilized the equipment for baling hay,and for threshing for neighbors who are near the company's transmission lines.

Dundalk

Henry Wright, of Wareham, missed two heifers from his herd in pasture on Aug. 20. Diligent search and enquiry was made but it was not till four weeks had elapsed that the animals were discovered mired in a muck hole near where the other cattle were. One heifer was dead and the other so nearly gone that recovery is doubtful.

An assault case which was to have been heard by Magistrate Traynor on Friday evening was settled out of court by the party pleading guilty and paying a fine of$4 and costs. The party, who annoyed the Chinese laundryman, acknowledged the corn and was assessed $2 and costs. Magistrate Traynor also imposed a fine of $5.00 and costs upon a couple of young men, who raised a scrap in the village Saturday night.

John Haw, of the 18th Con., Proton, had a big barn raising on Friday. The size of the building is 50 by 60 feet on tone basement. The stonework was done by Harry Irwin, the framing by Andy Dow of Proton, and the raising by block and tackle was superintended by Mr. Haas, of Egremont. The work was carried through without a hitch by a good bunch of helpers and Mr. Haw will have a very fine structure when fully completed. In the evening bagpipe music filled the air and later piccolo and violin drove away all care and every worry.—Herald.

There are Conservatives at present who are kicking, stating that they will not vote for the party as long as Hon. Mr. Hearst is premier. They object to his temperance policy. We want to say to them that their attitude toward their leader is not showing a proper spirit. They need not expect anything but prohibition from a Liberal government. Liberals are not wanting to profit at the expense of Hon. Mr. Hearst on the temperance policy. We believe it is the best thing for Ontario and should any Liberal government or member attempt to hedge on this question they would find a large section of the party would renounce their Liberal leanings for their temperance principles. Morally Mr. Hearst is right. if that is the case, then why throw him down?—Kincardine Reporter.

While William B. Tyron was cleaning a mudcat at his home in Tamworth last week he happened to catch the fish by the head and one of the pectoral fins pierced his finger. A sharp pain was felt, but he gave the matter little consideration until the latter part of the week when the finger began to swell and the hand became very sore. He consulted with a physician, and he was taken to the Kingston General Hospital on Saturday, Sept. 9. He received careful treatment, and every means was taken to prevent the poisoning spreading. It did not avail anything, however, and on Sunday he died. The deceased was born in the township of Kennebec forty-eight years ago. He was a well known farmer in Tamworth and was married.

What might have been a very serious accident occurred last Thursday afternoon when an Overland Car containing four or five men left the road at the Catholic Cemetery and after running partly upon a stone fence, struck a telephone pole. Upon examination it was found that a pin in the steering gear had dropped out causing the driver to lose control of the car. As, it is said, the car was travelling at a fast rate of speed the occupants were fortunate in escaping injury. The front axle of the car was badly damaged.—Chatsworth News.

Each year the shooting season records a long list of accidents due to carelessness of hunters in the forest and in the use of firearms. A gun going off accidentally and killing the owner, climbing fences with the gun loaded and cocked,or shooting at a companion in mistake for an animal are stereotyped causes. With the knowledge of the danger of handling firearms,it is surely incumbent upon hunters to exercise every precaution and keep continually before them the motto "safety first."

A "yarner" in last week's Weekly Sun, referring to Markdale's former name, says, "Cornabuss got its name through the excessive drinking done there." The facts are, through the influence of the late Donald McDuff, the postmaster, the name was changed from "East Glenelg," to Cornabuss, the latter being the name of Mr. McDuff's father's farm in Scotland. —Markdale Standard.

Paint Looks Alike When It's New

You can't tell much about the quality of paint by looking at it when it is freshly applied. Colors are easy to produce, and the glisten of fresh oil gives even poor paint a temporary beauty.

But look at it a Few Years Later!

The cheap paint, that started out so bravely, has faded, cracked, and peeled. It is unsightly, and—more important still—has exposed the wood below to the destructive effect of sun, rain, wind and snow. The other, is still a good-looking, weather-tight coating, that will give years more of reliable service.

There is no mystery about the reason. It lies in the fact that B-H "English" Paint is perfectly proportioned to meet Canadian weather conditions. It contains 70% of Brandram's B.B. Genuine White Lead, and 30% of Pure White Zinc, ground to such marvellous fineness that it penetrates deep into the fibre of the wood.

Being the best, it's cheapest in the end.
