Walkerton

While coming home from John Whitehead's farm, west of Walkerton, Saturday night, James Hyslop received a very bad scare and had what he considered a horribly close call. There was a ball like fire burst about one hundred yards from the horse, and the light spread from fence to fence and lit up the road for a quarter of a mile ahead of him. A noise resembling thunder was caused from the bursting of the ball. The horse squealed and then reared up and fell, and it was some minutes before it revived again sufficient to proceed. The beast was rendered seasick by the affair and would scarcely touch fodder next day.

A Greenock township merchant, who ordered a barrel of salts for cattle, had, it seems, a barrel of salt-petre shipped to him instead, and not discovering the mistake the merchant retailed it to his farmer patrons for the harmless salts, with the result that there is considerable destruction among the cattle in that section no less than six head being reported killed to date. A quantity of the stuff has been sent away to be analyzed and an investigation is being made into the affair. —Bruce Herald and Times
