Walkerton

On arriving back from Kitchener on Monday night Joe Rau began talking like a returned war correspondent, and the story he relates of a riot on a public square in this erstwhile Berlin burg on Saturday evening last lacks none of the excitement of a tale from the front. A loud-lunged Socialist was orating on the corner against conscription to a mixed audience of loyalists and pro-sauerkrautists, when someone at the close suggested that they sing "God Save the King." The Socialist, however, opened his megaphone and wirelessed back that they should sing instead "God Save the People." At this signal an English lady came bouncing through the audience like a cat in a fit and leaping on the speaker she sent him down where he could view the ground at close range. The crowd then began to mix it up right and before they got their hands out of each other's hair many battered heads were on view. The Socialist was borne to the hospital in such a mauled and ruffled state that his own mother wouldn't have known him from the things they set out to scare the crows with. As Joe says, conscription, to a certain element in Kitchener, threatens to be about as popular as a weasel in a hen-house.

Richard Badstone, the aged inmate who fled from the House of Refuge last spring and who was captured on the Bruce Peninsula and brought back after giving the police a hard run and sticking the county for $35 to catch and return him to his own cot, skipped out again on Tuesday night, and hiking to Hanover, was waiting for the train on Wednesday morning to bear him north, when Keeper Wiles discovered his absence and set out in an auto after the fugitive. The train was steaming into Hanover when the Walkerton auto drew up, and his nibs was corralled just as he felt that the chase was done and that the winds of freedom were about due to blow through his whiskers. As Keeper Wiles is no Pharaoh from the House of Bondage, and as this gent had no kick like Moses to walk out on, it was decided that his specialty must stop, so on getting him back to the plant, the runaway was sentenced to the dark room for a few days as punishment for his folly in turning his back so often on a free board bill.—Herald and Times.

The women of this part received petitions some time ago praying for a Dominion-wide prohibition. These they filled and sent to Premier Borden. It is high time that Quebec should be stopped dumping its alcoholic products on our fair province. Quebec seems to be a blot on civilization as regards the whiskey business and recruiting as well.

Miss Mina Fawcett of Markdale is visiting this week at the Traveller's Home.

If there ever was a time in the history of our fair province that the farmers ought to co-operate for their mutual benefit it is at the present time. To get a bunch of farmers to agree on an important question is about as hard as it is to get an Ulster Unionist and a Nationalist to agree as to what is the right kind of Home Rule for the Green Isle. There have been too many Rip Van Winkles in the farming profession in the past. It is high time they woke up. The farmers should sell direct to the consumer and eliminate as far as possible the middleman. He would make a greater profit and the consumer would get his food products at a lower figure. In buying as staple soap at present is seven cents a bar. Now that can be bought from the United Farmers Co. of Toronto at five cents a bar. We could name dozens of commodities that he could save money on but must draw this lengthy epistle to a close. 'Nuff said.
