HERE'S WORLD'S FASTEST FIGHTER

World's fastest fighter plane is the "Thunderjet," pictured in flight over Republic Aviation Corporation's Farmingdale, N.Y., plant. Officially designated the P-84, the jet plane makes over 600 mph, climbs higher than 40,000 feet and has more than 1000-mile range.

SPOTS OF SPORTS

By FRANK MANN HARRIS
("A Sixbit Critic")

With sports of all varieties booming throughout the land as never before, it is rather sad having to inject a sour note into the general harmony. However, we learn on good authority that one minor branch of sporting activities is suffering from something of a slump. A young friend of ours who, for some years past, has bolstered his pocket-money allowance by searching for lost golf balls and then reselling same, reports that things in his line are by no means as they should be.

* * *

"It's getting fierce," he says. "Balls that even last summer I could have got half-a-rock apiece for, nowadays I have to let go for thirty-five cents or even two bits. The golf ball makers are turning out far too many balls these days, and somebody ought to stop them before they put business on the bum for keeps."

* * *

This 14-year-old added, however, that far more people are taking up the game for the first time than ever before in his experience; and this, from his point of view, is all to the good. "That is what I like to see out on a golf course," he said. "Plenty of these new beginners that swing with their eyes shut and spray balls over the rough, and then are ashamed to spend a lot of time looking for them. Gee, after a bunch of them have been around a guy can find balls without even trying, so I guess that even if prices are all shot, it all comes up."

* * *

We told the young gentleman that smaller individual profits and increased volume of sales was sound business procedure, and asked him if he'd ever tried to enlist the aid of his dog in the search for lost balls. "I did try a few times but it wasn't any use," he sadly replied. "The dumb pooch always thinks it's skunks instead of golf balls I want him to hunt, and he's too darned good at it so I have to leave him at home now." The kid thought deeply for a moment and then added, "Oh, brother, if they'd only find some way to perfume their golf balls with skunk oil, what a cleanup me and the dog could make." We pass the suggestion along to Messrs. Dunlop, Spalding and all the other manufacturers without comment.

* * *

We have ever been chary of trying to hand out advice to any politicians; but if some of the solons at Ottawa, Washington and London were to start a movement aimed at calling off the coming Olympic Games, in our opinion they would be doing more for the cause of international friendship than all their talk about the United Nations, atomic bomb control, and all the rest of it. Of course by so doing they would earn the eternal enmity of "the badgers" — those amateur authorities who are looking forward so longingly toward that free trip to London; but the public generally would approve.

* * *

Just let your mind travel back over past Olympics — those that took place when the world was comparatively calm ad settled — and recall all the unpleasant incidents, all the squabbling and name-slinging, all the international disputes and near-riots, and we think you'll agree that holding these Games under present conditions is just about as sensible as fooling with a gun that may be loaded. So, while there is still time, let's call the whole thing off. Why not write a letter to your Member at Ottawa? It won't do a bit of good, of course, but it will make the poor fellow think he's getting popular, receiving so much fan-mail.

U.K. Fishermen Fear Poor Season

Hundreds of small fishermen, who normally make a reasonable living from fishing in the Firth of Forth, have this year been hard hit by one of the poorest seasons on record, says The Edinburgh Scotsman. Herring has almost gone from these waters. No one knows why.

At present any boat which can make enough money to pay its crew £5 per week is doing extremely well.

Generally catches are so poor that fishermen, many of them ex-servicemen, are making only £2 to £3 for a week's work—a week in which each working day lasts for 16 hours and more.
