Sheep Versus Dogs

At the request of Ar emesia Council we publish this week some selections from the Act for the Protection of Sheep.

(9) Any person may kill any dog which he sees pursuing, worrying or wounding any sheep.

(10) The overseer or occupant of a farm, or his servant. who finds a dog without lawful permission in an enclosed field on such farm giving tongue and terrifying any sheep on such farm, may kill such dog.

(12) No dog so straying which belongs to or is kept or harbored by the occupant of any premises next adjoining such farm or next adjoining that part of any highway or lane which abuts thereon, nor any dog so straying either when securely muzzled or when accompanied by or being within reasonable call or control of its owner, or of any person having the charge or care thereof, shall be so killed unless there is reason to believe that such dog, if not killed, is likely to pursue, worry, wound or terrify sheep then on such farm.

(12) On complaint made in writing on oath before a Justice of the Peace that any person is the owner of a dog which has within six months previous worried or injured or destroyed any sheep, the Justice may issue his summons directed to such person, stating shortly the matter of complaint and requiring such person to appear before him at a certain time and place therein stated, to answer such complaint. and be further dealt with according to law.

(3) In case of conviction the Justice may make an order for killing the dog, describing the same according to the description given in the complaint and in the evidence, within three days, and in default thereof may, in his discretion, impose a penalty upon such person not exceeding $20.

Toronto Line North

The cold weather has replaced the beautiful autumn weather or Indian summer.

Our neighborhood was sorry to hear of the death of Mr. Thos. Pearson. Mr. Pearson had been ill for over a year and died at his home in Modesta, California. He was only 65 years of age. Interment took place at Oakville, Wash., where his wife was buried ten years ago. He leaves to mourn his loss, six stalwart boys and one brother, James in the West, and one sister, Mrs. Thompson, in Toronto. Mr. Pearson was a resident on this line, living with his parents on the farm now owned by J. P. Ottewell. We express our deep regret to the friends in their sad bereavment.

Misses Myrtle and Jean Atkinson of Chaatsworth, and friend of Ceylon, visited at Mr. Thos. Lever's.

Fred Mathewson purchased a piano recently.

Messrs. Fred Brown and C. Stewart attended the Liberal convention in Durham last week,

Albert and Will Stewart and wife motored to Stratford on Saturday and visited their brother, Harry. They returned on Sunday.

Mrs. Robert Richardson is visiting friends in the Queen City.

Emerson Wickens and wife left Tuesday to visit friends in Toronto.

Mr. Charles Stewart lost a valuable cow a short while ago.

Walkerton

After being missing from his home for about three weeks, during which time the whole neighborhood turned out in searching parties and scoured the adjacent woods and fields for him, Charles Russell, aged 59 years, a bachelor who had been living with his brother, Alex. Russell, near Pinkerton, was found lying on his back in the centre of a swamp about a mile and a half from his home with his throat slashed. Although he had evidently been dead for several weeks, as the body when found was almost entirely covered with leaves, yet the corpse was in a good state of preservation and the features of the dead man were easily recognizable. Russell, had been summoned to appear in Walkerton on October 23rd as a witness in a liquor charge preferred against his brother, Alex., who was acquitted by the court. The thought of having to go through the ordeal in the witness box so worked on Russell, who seems to have been of a nervous, eccentric nature, that he mysteriously disappeared the on day before the trial. An examination of the of the remains showed that the deceased had slashed his throat in two places with a knife, but as the gashes had not been deep enough to cut the wind pipe or sever any arteries, it was concluded that after thus wounding himself Russell had lain down with his head resting against a log, in which position he was found, and succumbed from exposure and exhaustion rather than from the effects of his wounds.

While hunting near Durham on Friday last, two hounds belonging to ex-Mayor Lippett and Jim Hefferman tackled a nest of porcupines, and after a fight in which the porcupines had everything their own way, the Walkorton canines beat a hasty retreat with their nostrils looking like a broom, with quills.

On Saturday afternoon, the 3rd inst., Mr. Reuben Whittig made a gruesome discovery in the bush on his farm on the 4th of Bruce, when he found the body of Malcolm, a bachelor who lives on lot 29, 2nd of Bruce, lifeless hanging to a tree. Mr. Campbell had been missing since the previous Monday. He has not been in the best of health for some time and it is surmised that in a fit of despondency he took his life. He was aboht 68 years of age and lived with his mother.

Artful Dodgers

Many and devious are the methods resorted to and the artful subterfuges employed by the eligibles and their relatives and friends to enable the former to evade service under the Military Conscription Act. Not only are these acts reprehensible and unpatriotic, but also dishonest and in some cases punishable by fine and imprisonment. An instance is quoted where an apprehensive parent glued a formidable plaster on the back of his stalwart son, which was ruthlessly removed by order of the medical examiner, who diagnosed the decorated back as a particularly capable one. But the dad had also scraped acquaintance with the examiner and confided to him that his unfortunate son was quite deaf, and on the doctor casually asking the son in an ordinary tone of voice: "Can you hear what I say say?" the stupid youth at once replied: "No, sir, I can't." It is said a member of the exemption board was also approached in the same case.—Harriston Review.

Justice Middleton has authorized the payment of $1000 to the widow of the late William Johnston Gibson of Caledon who was killed at the Cataract last winter. The Ontario Hydro Commission will pay the award and Mrs. Gibson and her four children will also receive an allowance from the Ontario Workmen's compensation Board. Gibson, it will be remembered, lost his life while attempting to save the Cataract Power Co's plant from destruction by fire when the Hydro Electric wires came in contact with the wires of the Cataract system. To prevent a fire Gibson attempted to cut the wires and was electrocuted while in the act.

Flesherton apparently has no monopoly of wrecked aeroplanes. The Orangeville Sun says:—Four aviators have come to grief in this section of the country within two weeks. On Friday an aviator on his way from the camp at Leaside to Camp Borden, lost his bearings and landed on the race track at the exhibition grounds. When he attempted to go up one of the wings struck a post, slewed the machine around, turned its nose into the fence and wrecked it badly. Many who visited the wreck took pieces of the machine away with them as souvenirs. Some one, we are told, stole the aviator's goggles, which were worth $12. A truck from Leaside took the machine back on Saturday.

Mr. George Sheppard of Toronto, motored to Wasaga Beach on Sunday and while there saw his Russell-Knight automobile go up in smoke. With his friends he left the car to go to the hotel to have dinner. At the time there were no signs of fire. A few minutes after the fire was noticed from the rear of the hotel and by the time Mr Sheppard and the others reached the beach the car was enveloped by the flames and burning like a summer beach party's bonfire. The wreck of the car was towed in to the garage of Messrs. Tombs & Smalley on Tuesday. The origin of the fire is put down to a short circuit of the electrical equipment. Fortunately Mr. Shepp a had the car insured.—Bulletin.

Dick Marshall of Shelburne was injured and Alan P. McEachern of Toronto killed, in an automobile accident at Barrie Monday afternoon. Mr. McEachern, who was a Victory Loan organizer, had hired a car at Huxtable's garage to go to Orillia, with Mr. Marshall as driver. They had gone about a mile when the accident happened where there is a slight grade and curve. Just as they rounded this curve the left hind tire exploded, which threw the car towards the ditch. To avoid the ditch the driver turned the car so sharply that it was overturned. Mr. McEachern struck the hard road on his head and died in the ambulance twenty minutes later. Mr. Marshall was bruised on the head but was not badly injured—Shelburne Economist,

The twin baby girls of Sergt. Sidney Baker were signally honored at Mrs. Baker's home in Arthur, when a deputation from the Women's Patriotic League presented the proud mother with a $5 gold coin for each baby. They were the first twins to be born to a soldier's wife in the district and deserved recognition.

The report of the Henderson Commission on the investigation by W. F. O'Conner, Cost of Living Commissioner, into packing companies, is out. and shows that the Davies Co. in 1916 made 80 per cent. on its capital.

A Haunt of Legend and Romance

Digby Basin and Long Pier, Nova Scotia.

PARRSBORO Shore with its rock bound coast of lofty crags and high walled jagged islands washed by mighty tides, the scenes of Indian legends and the struggles between the French and English, and the residence of a more modern race of hardy voyageurs, is a name little known to the tourist, but one that has an ineffable charm for him who has visited this nook of Nova Scotia.

This was the home of Glooscap, mighty god of the Micmacs. Here one finds the Five Islands, lofty and steep-sided islets in the Basin of Minas, pebbles dropped by the mighty Glooscap, so says the folk lore of the simple Redman. Attracted by their isolation, it is believed that Capt. Kidd, the infamous and successful pirate, buried here his treasure trove; and many are the deep yawning holes to be seen in these wild and eyrie islands where the bold have braved the guardian spirits of the dead pirate chieftain to find out this gold and jewels, bathed in the blood of gentle women and brave men.

Spencers Island, the Indians tell you, was formed when Glooscap overturned his melting pot; and the smaller islands near by are not common islands—they are Glooscap's dogs, turned to stone as guardians of their master's melting pot. Many are the Indians still to be found here and they believe that some day the great spirit of Glooscap will return to them; and then his chosen people will again rule over the land.

And here is Partridge Island—like lordly Blomidon opposite, rich in the beautiful amethyst—once the home of Kitpooseagunow, the mightiest fisherman of the Micmac legendary heroes. He it was who embarked in his huge stone canoe, harpooned the whale, tossed it into his craft as if it were a trout; and when he landed, he it was who split the leviathan of the deep with one blow of his great stone knife, tossed one half to Glooscap, and himself ate the other.

A Nova Scotia Limousine.

It was from the lofty cliffs of Partridge Island that a French warrior, pursued by the English, leaped to his death on the rocks hundreds of feet below. And later, it was here a blockhouse was placed when England feared the raids of Yankee privateers in the stirring days of 1812.

With such traditions, little wonder is it that here was developed a hardy sea faring folk. Sometimes the wife and her children accompanied the sea captain as he sailed his tiny schooner to the four quarters of the earth; but more often, he sailed away alone and for months the mother reared his children alone and superintended the farm.

Here one finds beautiful farms, thick forests, save for here and there a clearing where one can get a view of the magnificent sweep of the Basin of Minas, of the islands of Blomidon, and of the shores ten miles across the sea of silver, shores dotted with orchards and the white roofs of the farm buildings.

Men who have travelled the world over have come to Nova Scotia and declared the scenery along the Basin of Minas the fairest of it all, have marvelled at the mighty surge of those wonderful tides with their unique rise and fall of sixty feet, and have spent their summers in its cool, invigorating climate. A comfortable steamboat service operated by the Canadian Pacific Railway connects St. John, New Brunswick, with this land of legends, bold and noble mountains, and with the land of Evangeline.

TEN MILLION YEARS AGO IN CANADA

(1) Prof. Walcott, discoverer of the Fossil Beds at Field, B.C.
(2) Climbing into the undiscovered past.

PROF. CHARLES D. WALCOTT, of the Smithsonian Institute, has discovered a deposit of extremely valuable fossils of early marine life on Mount Field, overlooking Emerald Lake Chalet and the beautiful Yoho Valley in the Canadian Pacific Rockies. Far up over Burgess Pass, at an altitude of nine thousand feet, where the tourists in the fashionable summer hotels and camps can barely hear the boom of the blasts as he quarries down to the fossil bearing shale, the professor has been securing some wonderful specimens of sea life of over ten million years ago. These are of the period when life was just emerging from the jelly-fish stage into an era where a bony structure was becoming apparent. Dying, they were deposited in the mud of the ocean bottom that has since hardened into rock, and been raised to the snow-covered mountain top.

The strata of fossil-bearing rock discovered by Professor Walcott is of much earlier age than any in the surrounding mountains, and has, he says, been pushed up over the newer formations for a distance over twenty-five miles.

The fossils were discovered by Prof. Walcott while travelling over Burgess Pass, a peculiar formation in a piece of shale attracting his attention. He followed up the shale slide almost to the top of Mount Field, and finally located its source, far above the timber line. The workings are very peculiar, because of their height, and are probably the only ones of their kind in the world. Some of the specimens taken out are so perfect that Prof. Walcott has been able to determine what they ate just before they were buried in the mud over ten million years ago.
