He tells us that several of his customers are Durham County folk who also take The Statesman.

A church opened again after forty-nine years that is the record of the edifice on the corner of Queen and Division Sts., Bowmanville, which will begin a new lease on life next Sunday, June 2nd. That day it will once more open its worshipping congregation. Over the front door has been erected a sign "Evangelistic Tabernacle." The Pastor, Rev. C. A. Harris, who has been in town the past six months, is in charge.

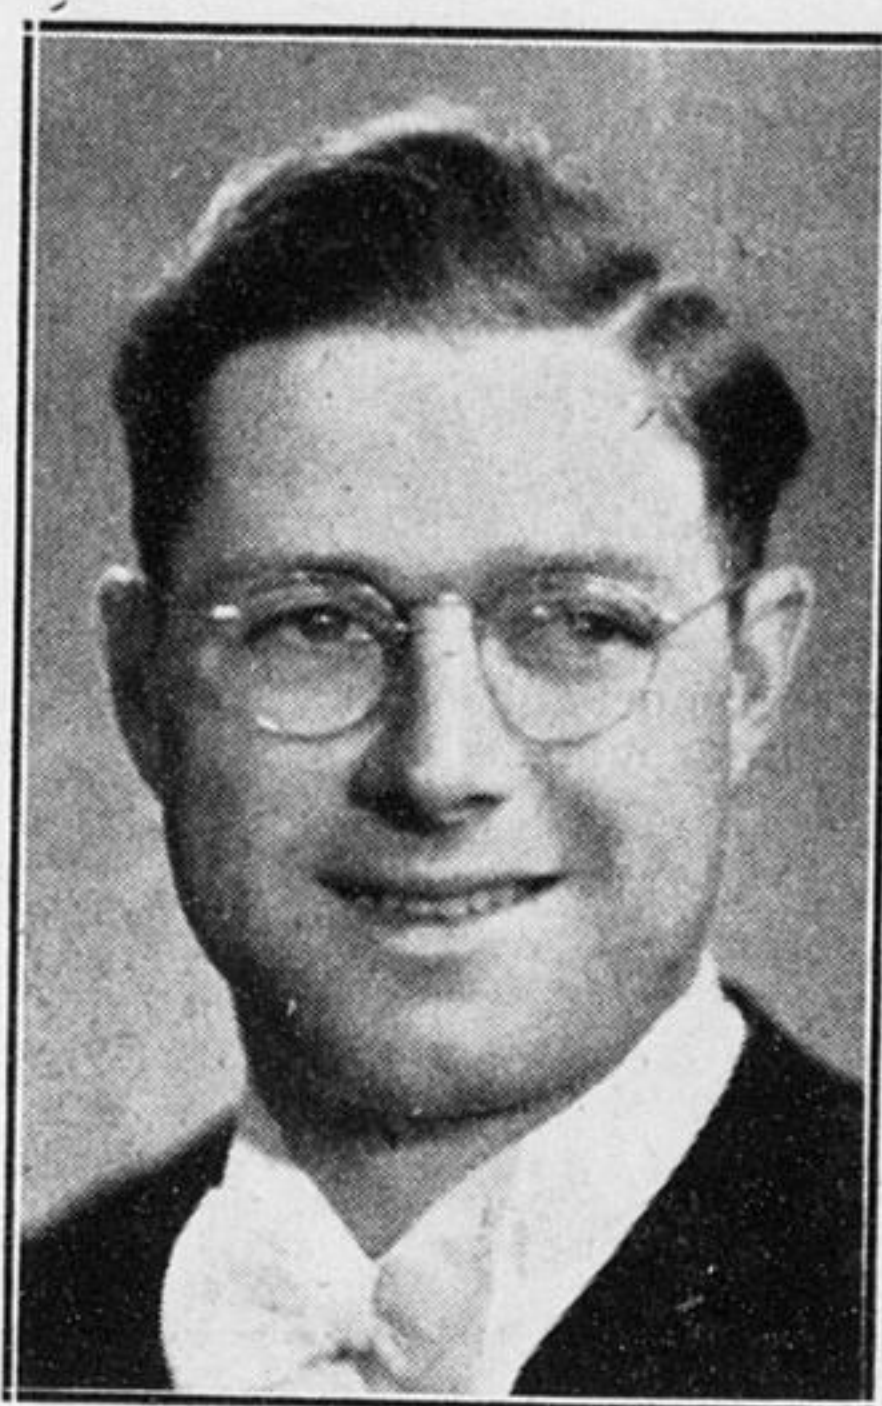

Mr. Harris is giving a special invitation to any who used to attend in the same building to come to his meetings. Not only sentimental ties will connect them but also his type of service is much the same as formerly. The simple gospel message and energetic songs of praise will be the same as heard within those walls years ago.
