PRICEVILLE

An all night rain last week delayed the "harvest home" on a number of farms.

We were sorry to find Pte. Hector McDonald's name and number in the list of wounded last week, but Painsville is mentioned in error for Priceville.

Died—At the family residence, Old Durham Road, one and a half miles east of the village, Daniel McDonald, in his 88th year. Deceased had been a hale and active man for many years, and during the last few years, although bodily strength and some of the senses became visibly weaker. yet his great vitality kept body and soul together until four score and eight years ripened and whitened him for the harvest of life. Mr. McDonald was born in Nova Scotia in 1830 of Scotch parentage. When a young man he lived for some time in Bruce county, and then came to this vicinity to assist in the construction of the gravel road across Grey county. He married Miss Flora Cameron, who proved to be an amiable and industrious helpmate. He was a member of St. Columba Presbyterian church and a staunch Liberal in politics. Their family consisted of five sons—Hector and Alex. in Montana, William who died some years ago in British Columbia, David has the homestead, and A. B., our tax collector, who lives nearer the village; and one daughter, Maggie, Mrs. Mino of Owen Sound. The family have the respect and sympathy of a host of friends, neighbors and acquaintances, almost innumerable. The family pastor, Rev. J A. Matheson, conducted the funeral service at the residence and at the grave in Priceville public cemetery. The pallbearers were P. Muir, W. Meads, Joseph Oliver, A. Currie, D. White, and L. McArthur, all neighbors who grew up around the deceased old gentleman.

Rev. A. J. Leece, a former Methodist pastor, and wife, are spending a portion of their holidays among admiring friends in Methodist, Presbyterian and other denominations, and will preach in the Methodist church next Sunday at 11 a.m.

The Orangemen, of which Fred was a member, marched in a body to the church, accompanied by members of other lodges from a distance. The Red Cross lawn social held Thursday last on George Binnie's grounds passed off pleasantly. The interesting ball game between Dundalk and Ceylon teams resulted in 5 to 2 in favor of the latter. The program, presided over by Rev. Mr. Blackwell, was furnished by home talent. Tickets were sold for an overseas box packed by the society. Mrs. (Capt.) Ray held the lucky ticket and received the box, which she will send to her husband in France. At the close of the program a two months' old pig, donated by George Binnie, was put up at auction. John Carson was the highest bidder and the baby porker brought the Red Cross Society the sum of $9.50. The proceeds for the evening amounted to nearly $100.

The Incomes of Farmers

The Income War Tax Act was never expected to be very popular, and probably it will live up to the expectation. So long as it touched only the men with incomes of $50,000 a year and over, the average man simply chuckled and thought everything was all right, but now that it is reaching out after the smaller fry it is getting a little more exciting. The determining of a man's salary is often an easy matter in the city, where the man receives yearly a stated amount, but throughout the rural sections a farmer's income is not so easily determined. In not a few cases a farmer has counted his income as what he was able to place in the bank after all expenses had been met; but this is clearly an untenable contention, and the government has issued slips to be filled out by each farmer specifying the quantity of his product, the price at which he had sold, the quantity consumed at home or exchanged at the store, income from other sources, the cost of feed, labor, machinery, and and estimate of depreciation. Of course the individual must sign this document, and from it the government will determine what his net income for the year really was, and whether he is liable for income tax. We venture to say that when the items are all filled in many a farmer will be surprised to find how much his income really is, and he will wonder how his preacher succeeded in living on half of it.—Christian Guardian.
