Notice to Subscribers

For the past four years The Advance has been working against heavy odds with the all round increase of everything that goes to make up a paper and living in general. Notwithstanding this great loss we have consistently set our face against raising the price of the paper to our subscribers, and it still remains at one dollar per annum, but unless a lower trend in prices comes within a reasonable time the price will have to go up. In the meantime we have decided to place a premium for prompt paying subscribers—who are many—by placing an additional fifty cents on all who allow their subscriptions to run six months or over. Hereafter all subscriptions six months or more overdue will be charged at $1.50 per annum. This leaves everybody the chance to get in on the dollar rate. A number of subscribers this season have paid two and three years in advance, which is good policy, as it insures them the dollar rate for that length of time. Remember, The Advance is one dollar per annum or one dollar and fifty cents if not paid within six months. Better be prompt and not run the risk of forgetting.

Annual Meeting

Lieut Joe LeGard Returns Home

Lieut. Jos. LeGard returned from England on Saturday noon train and was met at the station by a number of citizens and escorted to town. He went directly to his own home to greet his mother, who is an invalid.

Joe was foreman of The Advance office when he enlisted in the fall of 1915 with the 147th Battalion. With that battalion he went overseas as Sergt. in November of the following year. In July, 1917, he reverted to the ranks and went to France where he remained on duty until this summer, when he was sent to England to take out a Lieutenant's commission. After getting his commission he returned to duty on August 13, 1918. On Sept. 28, while leading his men on the outskirts of Cambrai, he was shot in the left abdomen by a machine gun bullet, after which he was sent to England to recover and returned home from there on the S. S. Carmania. The soldiers in this boat were put on two trains, Lieut. LeGard being on the first section which preceded by only ten minutes the train which was wrecked with such serious consequences.

Joe has a grim relic of his wound in France in the form of a shirt with a nasty hole in it where the bullet entered. When taken to the clearing station the bullet was extracted without the administration of an anaesthetic. The action in which he was wounded took place on the afternoon of Sept. 28, the day after the Canadians had smashed the Hindenburg line and crossed the Canal du Nord—an historic action—which left the Canadians two miles beyond Germany's strong position, where the Boches expected to remain all winter.

Lieut. Legard was leading his men in an attack when a machine gun bullet struck him in the left side and whirled him around a couple of times, but he did not think he was badly hit. After advancing a hundred yards a gas attack came over. When he attempted to put on his mask he found a portion of it shot away and had to make his way to the rear to get another. He returned to his men, with assistance, to make a report as all the officers were casualties, and continued the attack on a machine gun position which he bombed and took 39 prisoners, four of whom he then made carry him back to the clearing station on a stretcher, while the remaining 35 marched ahead.

In describing the Hindenburg Line Lieut. Legard says it was merely an unusually strong trench position with concrete dugouts and 200 yards deep of barb wire in front. The attack on this position was made by the Canadians in broad daylight without any artillery preparation whatever. The men went at the wire with their cutters, while machine guns sprayed them like hail The wonder is, according to Lieut. LeGard, that a single man was left alive in that hail of bullets, but they won through gloriously and never stopped until they had placed the Hindenburg Line two miles behind them. This was the line the Germans boasted was impregnable, but the Canadians smashed it and many of our Grey County men were in that glorious drive. The casualties were heavy and scores of them made the supreme sacrifice.

Suggests A Hospital

Editor Advance,—May I, through the medium of your paper, make a suggestion to the public? Do you not think that instead of erecting a monument to look at, in memory of our departed soldiers, it would not be so much better to purchase the late Mr. Richardson's residence and convert it into a hospital? Look how many of our loved citizens for miles around have to be taken to Owen Sound, away from all they hold dear because there is no other way for them to have treatment by which they may recover. It seems to me that everyone would vote to instal Mae Jamieson as head nurse, and it could be supported by the Khaki League, Red Cross, Institutes etc, for miles around Then, when our boys come home they could find a resting place until they were well enough to be in their own homes. I should very much like to hear other people's opinion on this matter. Yours Truly,

—MAY DINNICK.

A Family of Heroes

Sergt. Jamieson ,returned home from overseas on Thursday, December 26, and was with his mother, Mrs. M. Jamieson, who is in Toronto, for a week before visiting his Flesherton friends. He was one of the first who enlisted at Flesherton in the fall of 1915 with the 147th Batt. He accompanied the battalion to England in November 1916, and was an instructor with the 8th Reserve Battalion at Witley Camp. In July 1917 he, with Lieut. LeGard and others who reverted, went to France as a private and joined the 58th Batt. He was with that battalion for two months when he was stricken with trench fever and was invalided to recuperate, and for the past year has been with the 8th Reserve Batt. Sergt. Jamieson is an expert shot with the rifle and a promising career was cut short after only two months' service.

Sergt. Jamieson was the fourth member of his family to take part in the greatest of wars. Two other brothers, Sergt. Bert Jamieson and the late Pte. Edward Jamieson and one sister, Nursing Sister Mae Jamieson, served in the war with distinction. Sergt. Bert Jamieson was in that memorable 2nd Battle of Ypres with the 15th Batt. in 1915, when the Canadians showed the kind of mettle they were made of, and was frightfully gassed, but returned home over two years ago. Pte. Edward Jamieson enlisted at Kingston with the Highlanders and was killed in action on November 9, 1017 at Hill 70 in Belgium. Nursing Sister Mae Jamieson spent a year at Malta, in the Mediterranean, and there she was taken seriously ill with enteric fever, and came home a year ago. She is now nursing in Toronto.

All his friends were glad to see Sergt. Jamieson back again after his long stay of over two years overseas. Few families have voluntarily sacrificed as much for the cause as the Jamieson family.
