ONCE our newspapers were divided into three classes---"Grit," Tory," and "Independent." In the case of "Grit" and "Tory" papers, if you knew what the party policy was, you always knew what they were going to say. The "Independent" paper usually died. Then came with its slogan, "A Newspaper, Not An Organ." That slogan used to cause smiles. But, as the years passed, its significance was appreciated.

The Star does not care much about who wins elections. It cares a great deal about winning causes. And it is a noteworthy thing about the causes advocated by The Star, that most of them have been adopted and incorporated into the laws of the community.

Here is a paper that, if it is giving a Government general support, does not wait to see what that Government is going to say or do on any particular issue, before expressing itself. The anxiety is sometimes on the part of the Government, to know what The Star is going to say.

In buying The Star you may be sure you are getting exactly what the phrase says—"A Newspaper, Not An Organ." You are getting a live paper full of news, full of ideas, entertaining, informing, stimulating—in short you are getting
