Hereditary

From Home and Country

The strictures are numerited,
Our follies are inherited
Directly from our gran'pas they all came;
Our defects have been transmitted,
And we should be acquitted
Of all responsibility and blame.

We are not depraved beginners,
But hereditary sinners,
For our fathers never acted as they should;
'Tis the folly of our gran'pas
That continually hampers;
What a pity that our gran'pas were not good!

Yes, we'd all be referend senators,
If our departed progenitors
Had all been prudent, studious, and wise;
But they were quite terrestrial,
Or we'd be celestial
Instead of being tenants for the skies.
