MILLINERY.

Modish millinery prepared for late summer's wear is quite different, both in outline and in trimming, from that brought forth and worn so gladly in the early summer days. The shapes are more than a little different, some former favorites have disappeared entirely and new ones have come forward to take their places.

Turbans maintain all of their hold upon the popular fancy, and many are the changes that are rung upon this almost universally becoming model. There is simply no type of face, no fashion in coiffure which this all-embracing style cannot be made to meet.

The extremely pointed torpedo turban, however, has run its course, and the newer turbans follow the lines of the smaller toque. They show a distinct crown and brim, the flat all-over top being abandoned, and quite a novel fancy has the crown of one material and the brim of another. A very smart model just imported shows the crown covered with a Spanish lace scarf, the pattern being small and fine. The brim projects but moderately in front, is close at the sides and fits snugly to the head in the back. There is no bandeau, for the crown tably. The brim of this importation is in Manila rush straw, in the natural unbleached tint, and the entire is intended to fit the head comfor- outer part is covered with crushed velvet roses in many shades of yellow, running from the pale primrose tint to a warm burnt orange. The lace scarf which drapes the crown is so arranged that the scarf ends come in the back, where they cover the brim, but do not hang in curtain fashion. On the left side there is a hussar double knot of a medium shade of yellow velvet, which makes a smart finish, and the whole effect of this turban—one which will undoubtedly be popular—is almost that of a flat toque.

Another old friend returned is the short-back sailor, but in name only, as it is altogether different from what has been known under that title. The new sailor has a fair larger crown, and is conspiculously wider from side to side, while the front is either bent into a very becoming curve above the face or else left with the straight round line.

There is quite a marked revival of the shape which was termed a walking hat. It has a medium crown and brim turned up at both sides, the back short and setting close to the hair. There is a certain air of smartness in the lines of this hat that has always appealed to those who consider both style and lines when selecting a hat, and there is little doubt but that it will attain all of its former cachet. Especially will it take the fancy of the tailor-made girl, for the lines are of the severely simple order.

FOR SHIRT WAIST WEARERS.

A safe and neat skirt and waist fastener is an absolute necessity to the shirt waist girl or woman, as no matter how pretty the waist, if not carefully adjusted, the wearer looks actually slovenly. Too many women still resort to the unstable safety pin as a fastener, but all too often the weight of the skirt drags this out of place, and instead of being safely hidden from sight, it makes itself conspicuous in a very unpleasant fashion. Far worse than this, however, is the appearance of the girl who depends upon the tightness of her skirt belt to keep her trim, and does not trouble to pin skirt and waist together at all.

A safe, neat and invisible fastening may be very simply and easily made. Sew a piece of strong, narrow tape to the shirt waist exactly as the waist line in the back, and make it just long enough to hook tightly in front. On this tape, in the back, sew securely four strong eyes rather more than an inch apart. On the inside of each skirt band sew four hooks exactly in position to meet the eyes when skirt and waist are correctly adjusted. Unless one is apt to be moving the arms a great deal or reaching above the head, two hooks and eyes will prove sufficient to make the union perfect. Some women prefer the eyes sewn on a strip of tape separate from the waist, but this is not always as reliable. Strong hooks and eyes should be selected, but they should be as small as is consistent with strength.

A belt a trifle wider at the back than the sides should be given the preference, as even when the bodice and skirt are neatly united it is not at all pretty to see hooks or eyes projecting above or below the belt. A few minutes' walk on any prominent thoroughfare will convince anyone of the necessity of this warning.

THE NEWEST GIRDLE.

Paris sends word that the embroidered linen girdle is the correct thing for wear with tailor made linen gowns. It certainly has one advantage over the kid belt—it can be sent to the tub and come out as good as new, while the kid belt has to be dry cleaned. The daintiest of these girdles has clover leaves and blossoms wrought in white, or forget-me-nots in their natural color. Large brass buckles are used on all wash belts, and are easily removed.

Miss Dressington (to little boy who is sidling up to her)—"What do you want, dear—to give me a kiss?" Little Boy—"No; I wants my bread-'n'-butter that you'se sittin' on!"

WHEN SICKNESS COMES.

Dr. Williams Pink Pills Should be Used to Bring Back Health.

Sickness comes sooner or later in the life of everyone. Many who for years have enjoyed the best of health are suddenly seized with some one of the numerous ills of life. Most of the ills result from an impoverished condition of the blood; thus if the blood is enriched the trouble will disappear. That is why Dr. Williams Pink Pills have had a greater success than any other medicine in the world in curing sick and ailing people. These pills actually make new, rich, red blood, strengthen every nerve in the body and in this way make people well and strong. Mr. Alphonee Lacoussiere, a well-known young farmer of St. Leon, Que., proves the truth of these statements. He says:—"About a year ago my blood gradually became impoverished. I was weak, nervous, and generally run down. Then suddenly my trouble was aggravated by pains in my kidneys and bladder, and day by day I grew so much worse that finally I was unable to rise without aid. I consulted doctors, but any relief I obtained from their medicine was only temporary and I began to despair of ever being well again. One day I read an article in a newspaper praising Dr. Williams Pink Pills and I decided to try them. I got six boxes and before they were all gone my condition was so greatly improved that I knew I had at last found a medicine to cure me. I continued the use of the pills for a while longer, and every symptom of my trouble was gone, and I have since enjoyed the best of health. I think so much of Dr. Williams Pink Pills that I am never without them in the house."

It is because Dr. Williams Pink Pills make new blood that they cure such diseases as anaemia, rheumatism, kidney and liver troubles, neuralgia, indigestion and all other ailments due to poor blood. But you must get the genuine bearing the full name "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People" on the wrapper around every box. Sold by medicine dealers everywhere or sent by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by addressing the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

RUSSIAN SUPERSTITION.

Sacred Emblem Suffered in Storm and Gloom Results.

A disastrous cyclone, which recently devastated Moscow and the surrounding districts, has added to the gloom in Russia occasioned by the reverses in the far east.

By a strange stroke of fate the cyclone caught the carriage and horses in which the most sacred emblem in Russia, the "Iversky Mother Goddess," was being carried. The horses were blown away from the carriage, the roof of which was torn off, and the driver and the image, along with the priests who accompanied it, were pitched into the dirty road. The image was recovered, but the Russian, who venerates this emblem above all others, sees in the accident the most evil omen. It has had a very distressing effect upon the peasants, who regard it as possessing supernatural powers.

Strange to relate, the censors, who are usually quick to supress undesirable news, have permitted accounts of the accident to appear in the press, so that what has occurred is known throughout the whole of Russia.

PRAYING BY MACHINERY.

"To the Yellow God, the Black God, the White God, and the Green God.—Please kindly take us all up with you, and do not leave us unprotected, but destroy our enemies."

Such a prayer is to be found on a Tibetan praying-wheel, says Mr. A. R. Wright.

The Tibetan is a martyr to folklore, conceiving, as he does, his spiritual life to be a struggle against demons, which are just as hard to conquer as the passes and deserts of his country.

A novel feature of this prayer-wheel, which the Tibetan spends much of his time in turning, is that if turned the wrong way everything done before is undone.

When news was received that the British expedition had invaded Tibet the natives imitated cries of animals, thinking by this means they would be able to dispel our troops. No doubt, said Mr. Wright, the cries were an incantation by the superstitious Tibetans.

CHILDHOOD DANGERS.

How the Heavy Death rate Among Children May be Reduced.

The death rate among infants and young children during the hot weather is simply appalling. For example, in the city of Montreal alone in one week, the death of one hundred and six children was recorded. Most of these deaths were due to stomach and bowel troubles, which are always alarmingly prevalent during the hot weather, and most, if not all, of these precious little lives might have been saved, if the mother had at hand a safe and simple remedy to check the trouble at the outset. As a life saver among infants and young children, Baby's Own Tablets should be kept in every home. These Tablets prevent and cure diarrhoea, dysentery, cholera infantum and all forms of stomach trouble. If little ones are given the Tablets occasionally they will prevent these troubles and keep the children healthy. The Tablets cost only 25 cents a box, and a box of Baby's Own Tablets in the home may save a little life. They are guaranteed to contain no opiate or harmful drug, and may be given with safety and advantage to a new born babe or well grown child. If your dealer does not keep the Tablets, send the price to the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., and a box will be sent you by mail post paid.

FEATS ON CHURCH SPIRES

DARING PERFORMANCES IN MID-AIR.

Steeple-jacks Who Risk Life and Limb in Their Hazardous Calling.

Though possessing but one arm, a Bologna tinker ascended a few days since the tower of Asinelli, a height of 350 feet, by means of the lightning rod, thereby gaining the plaudits of the onlookers and the censure of the police, by whom he was haled before the civic authorities.

Similar, but even more hazardous, feats were formerly not infrequent. St. Paul's Cathedral was often the scene of some intrepid gymnast's daring. Edward VI. was present at the exploit performed by a Spaniard on a rope stretched from the battlements of St. Paul's steeple to the Deanery. Having slid down the rope and made an obeisance to His Majesty, the gymnast again mounted until he had attained a considerable elevation, when he executed a series of clever tumbling feats, to the wonder of the vast concourse that had assembled below says London Tit-Bits.

A like performance was given some years later before Elizabeth, but in this instance with an unfortunate result, for the gymnast lost his footing and sustained a fatal fall. Such feats, however, continued in vogue, and as late as 1731 we read of a sailor descending a rope, fastened to the summit of Hackney Church steeple, in less than half a minute, holding

A STREAMER IN EACH HAND.

Robert Wootton, who in 1789 repaired the steeple of St. Peter's, Nottingham, seized the opportunity, on his reaching the summit, to entertain with a performance on the drum the numerous onlookers, whose applause he acknowledged by drinking a bottle of ale to their health. Chichester Cathedral, too, some years previously afforded John Whelbe, a steeplejack engaged in making repairs, the opportunity of displaying his knowledge of some half-dozen instruments, on all of which he is said to have played with much taste and skill.

Gastronomic feats would appear to have been a speciality of Salisbury Cathedral's spire, on the summit of which, in 1665, a plumber named Handley roasted a shoulder of mutton and a couple of fowls. Again, in 1762, to celebrate the erection of a new vane, a steeplejack, one Grist, prepared, and afterwards ate, a dish of beans and bacon at the dizzy height of 400 feet.

On the anniversary of the birth of reigning Grand Duke of Baden five marks and a sumptuous dinner are offered to anyone who climbs the spire of Freiburg Cathedral, the tower's aloft to the height of 400 ft. A year or so back three men successfully essayed this task, and one, more temerarious than his companions, made use of a projecting iron rod as a bar whereon to give an acrobatic display to

THE HUGE CROWD BELOW.

At the commencement of the seventeenth century one Pierre Cousin, a roving mountebank, obtained permission from the civic and clerical authorities of St. Lo, a small Norman town, to give his show on one of the towers of Notre Dame. Halfway up he erected a small platform, on which in his own person he represented the people of all nations, changing his costume with each role, and giving in pantomimic gesture the characteristic peculiarities of the country he delineated. His performance would seem to have resembled closely that of the quick-change artistes we meet with nowadays.

Some years since, at Schemnitz, in Hungary, the writer witnessed a bird charmer display his skill from the summit of the church. The birds employed were pigeons, which went through their various feats with marvellous docility and precision, their evolutions and gyrations around the tower calling forth enthusiastic plaudits. It transpired subsequently that the performer was attached to a circus touring in the neighborhood, and had undertaken this unusual entertainment for a wager.

A unique entertainment had for its locale the church of St. Maclou, Roden—or rather the spire thereof, to the summit of which, in 1660, ascended a relation of Rouen's most celebrated son, Pierre Corneille. On to a small stage that had been there erected the young man stepped, and in a voice that could be distinctly heard by all below declaimed from memory the great poet's "Cid."

PRAISER TO THE KING.

In a recently published book on the "Kaffirs of South Africa" the author tells of the practice of the native chiefs of keeping a Sourt praiser—which might be translated poet laureate—whose business is to go before the chief and sing his praises. Sometimes it happens that this functionary is apt to be embarrassed for lack of matter, as in the case of the Swazi King Bunu. One day he went out hunting with a hundred warriors, and after a whole day's effort he managed to kill only one miserable little hare. Yet the Court praiser ran in front of the king, calling out:

"Bunu, the King of the Swazies, the chief of chiefs, has killed a hare. Let all the people listen. It was as big as an ox, as fierce as a lion, and as swift as a buck! The brave King Bunu killed the hare all alone! He killed it with his assegai. Listen, ye people! Bunu has killed a hare! Without any help the king has killed the hare! It was as terrible as a tiger, as large as an elephant; its eyes were flames of fire; and yet Bunu, the great king, has killed the hare!"

This long rigmarole was repeated over and over, while the king followed behind with great gravity.

A sign of politeness in Tibet on meeting a person is to hold up the clenched hand and stick out the tongue.

CURE THE MOST EXTREME CASES

STONE IN THE KIDNEYS CANNOT STAND BEFORE DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

Mr. S. A. Cassidy, of Ottawa, Permanently Cured After Years of Suffering by the Great Canadian Kidney Remedy.

Ottawa, Ont., Aug. 15—(Special).—While all Canada knows that Dodd's Kidney Pills are the standard remedy for all Kidney Complaints it may surprise some people to know they cure such extreme cases as Stone in the Kidneys. Yet that is what they have done right here in Ottawa.

Mr. S. A. Cassidy, the man cured, is the well-known proprietor of the Bijou Hotel on Metcalf street, and in an interview he says: "My friends all know that I have been a martyr to Stone in the Kidneys for years. They know that besides consulting the best doctors in the city and trying every medicine I could think of I was unable to get better.

"Sometime ago a friend told me Dodd's Kidney Pills would cure me. As a last resort I tried them and they have cured me.

"I could not imagine more severe suffering than one endures who has Stone in the Kidneys and I feel the greatest gratitude to Dodd's Kidney Pills."

If the disease is of the kidneys or from the kidneys Dodd's Kidney Pills will cure it.

FREE BOOTS.

In Melbourne, as in Sydney, the "free beet" system is developing rapidly. The conditions are simple. You go to the office and purchase a book of five coupons for $1.50. Each of these coupons has to be sold, the price, being 25 cents each. Each purchaser takes his or her coupon, with $1 to the office, and in return receives a book with five coupons, and the process is repeated, this time by five persons instead of one. The five sellers in due course represent twenty-five purchasers, who in their turn give way to 125, and so on. Each seller of five tickets is entitled, on the presentation of the tickets, accompanied by five payments of $1 each, to a pair of boots valu $5, or boots and shoes to that amount. The idea has caught on wonderfully. In New Zealand the regular boot and shoe trade was so injuriously affected that the promoters of the new system were offered $17,000 to leave the Colony. In Sydney they have been offered $5,600, but to no purpose.

DOLL SOLDIERS.

The "doll army" in the Paris Army Museum contains 19,000 figures of soldiers about 2 inches high in five great cases. The armor and uniform of every military branch are represented with the utmost exactitude. The picturesque work occupied the lifetime of an old Alsatian, who fought under the "Little Corporal."

The chairman of a well-known South African gold-mining company has just greatly amused the shareholders at a meeting by announcing that a certain resolution was "carried unanimously with one dissent."

JUST ONE DAY.

From the Slugger Brought out a Fact.

"During the time I was a coffee drinker," says an Iowa woman, "I was nervous, had spells with my heart, smothering spells, headache, stomach trouble, liver and kidney trouble. I did not know for years what made me have those spells. I would frequently sink away as though my last hour had come.

"For 27 years I suffered thus and used bottles of medicine enough to set up a drug store,—capsules and pills and everything I heard of. Spent lots of money, but I was sick nearly all the time. Sometimes I was so nervous I could not hold a plate in my hands; and other times I thought I would surely die sitting at the table.

"This went on until about two years ago, when one day I did not use any coffee and I noticed I was so nervous and told my husband about it. He had been telling me that it might be the coffee, but I said 'No, I have been drinking coffee all my life and it cannot be.' But after this I thought I would try and do without it and drink hot water. I did this for several days, but got tired of the hot water and went to drinking coffee and as soon as I began coffee again I was nervous again. This proved that it was the coffee that caused my troubles.

"We had tried Postum, but had not made it right and did not like it, but now I decided to give it another trial so I read the directions on the package carefully and made it after these directions and it was simply delicious, so we quit coffee for good and the results are wonderful. Before, I could not sleep, but now I go to bed and sleep sound, am not a bit nervous now, but work hard and can walk miles. Nervous headaches are gone, my heart does not bother me any more like it did and I don't have any of the smothering spells and would you believe it? I am getting fat. We drink Postum now and nothing else and even my husband's headaches have disappeared; we both sleep sound and healthy now and that's a blessing." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

HOW IT HAPPENED.

He was in doubt.

On this particular evening he made up his mind that he would reach the point where doubt ends or know the reason why.

Thus it happened that he got a little closer to her than usual when he found that they were sitting side by side on the sofa.

"Do you ever think about marriage?" he asked.

"No," she replied.

Of course, that was a fib. Of course, he knew that it was a fib and she knew that he knew it. Consequently she wished that she hadn't answered so hastily, but that is so customary in a woman that it should attract no attention.

"If I were a woman like you," he said, reproachfully, "I would think of it."

"Would you?" she inquired, carelessly.

"Yes, I would," he asserted, aggressively.

"Perhaps," she suggested, tantalizingly, "you wouldn't mind telling me just what course your thoughts would take—if you were a woman like me."

"I don't know that I can give the exact course of reasoning," he answered, fearful that he might be getting beyond his depth, "but if I were a woman like you I feel pretty reasonably sure that I would marry a man like—er—like me."

"You do?" she said, coloring a little, but still speaking in the same tantalizing tone.

"Yes, I do," he returned, doggedly.

"Well, if I were a man like you," she asserted, "I wouldn't expect a woman like me to do anything of the sort until a man like you had asked her to."

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

TOYS FROM STREET-PAVING.

An ingenious use has been found for the discarded wood blocks with which the London streets are paved. Several toy manufacturers now purchase all these blocks which are not damaged in the process of being torn up, for the purpose of making cheap toys out of them. Owing to the fact that the raw material is purchased so cheaply the home manufacturers are in a position to undersell considerably the foreign competitors.

"How clever you are!" said Fairfax with a spontaneous admiration. "I wish I knew a tenth part as much as you do. The truth is, although I am as inexperienced as possible in all matters connected with housekeeping requiring more than the merest elementary knowledge. Such a thing as this is positively disgraceful."

"Not at all, since you wish to learn, my dear," said the old lady graciously, "you are very young, and have plenty of time before you. I have had a considerable advantage in regard to years, which make a great difference. And now I am going to dilute the carbolic acid with about one part acid to forty water. Now, the correct proportions, but you must make use of hot boiled water to wash away the congealed blood and any irritating foreign matter that may possibly remain in the wound."

So saying, Mrs. Forrester directed the man to fetch a basin of warm water, herself procuring a light yet firm hand, to bathe the injured part with a sponge. King Olaf winced at the touch, especially when, during the bringing the two lips of the wound as nearly together as they could be, this accomplished, another large piece of lint, thoroughly soaked in the solution she had recommended to Kate. She did so without hesitation, no feminine shrinking from the ugly job. Mrs. Forrester evidently knew what she was about and set to work in a cool, quick, business like fashion, which in spite of herself restored Kate to some degree of hope.

"Now," she said, holding the sponge in its place with her hand, "I must bring me a roller, or a bandage of coarse linen, with which to do everything fast. There," as she accomplished the affair successfully, "that's done, at any rate, and he the means of preventing the catching cold until Mr. Forrester arrives. The next thing for us is to give him a drink, to kill dead the gain. You got some opium, did you not, Miss Fairfax?"

"Yes," said Kate, feeling more and more amazed by the extent of her companion's knowledge, "I have it in my pocket."

"What use are you to make of it?"

"I like people who ask questions," said Mrs. Forrester again. "And it folks wish to enter upon medicine they should never be afraid of confessing their own ignorance. Well, you see, my dear, the great danger we have to contend with in a case of this sort is of mortification setting in. The laudanum only numbs pain, but also acts as a wonderfully soothing influence on the action of the intestines, so that just now, if great care, a small dose often works wonders, and anyhow can do no harm. Thank you, poor fellow!" she added, having administered the drug, and patted Olaf's neck, "we can do no more for you until Mr. Brown comes up with his sewing apparatus, and we must hope may be soon."

Kate thanked Mrs. Forrester warmly for her kindness. "It is fully good of you," she said, "so much trouble on my behalf. As if I could not thank you enough."

"I hate thanks," was the reply. "All my life I never could bear to see animals in pain and can relieve them I must. But the truth; and what's more, my dear," with more emotion than she could have given her cousin, "I feel for you also. I know what it is to lose a good hunter. I once I was exceedingly fond of a ran a stake into the fleshy part of his thigh, out hunting with the Ashley, over a mere nothing, and though all was done that experience could devise, one day's mortification, exactly a week after the injury had been inflicted, killed him."
