He refused to pay it, and told the firm to apply to the American Admiralty. The firm, finding that the law would not allow them to summon the captain personally, did the next best thing—they got a judgment against his ship.

One morning a lawyer, under a pretext, came on board the Glacia, and before anyone knew what he was about, he had nailed a warrant to her mainmast. The captain, at first, threatened to tear it down, but on being told that to do so would be a bad breach of international law, he tried to look pleasant, and settled the account out of his own pocket.

A Belgian, who is disgusted with the darkness of country villages, wants to save the country expense by lighting them with chimney-pots instead of lamp-posts. His idea is simplicity itself. The inventor collects the smoke from the chimneys and forces it into a receiver. He then saturates it with hydro-carburet, and a brilliant light results.

The apparatus, to all accounts, is very simple, and can be attached to any chimney at a small expense. To use a chimney-pot as a lamp-post is certainly a very queer substitute.—Pearson's Weekly.

THE TRAGEDY OF A QUEEN

THE LADY MIN AND PRINCE PARENT FEUD IN KOREA.

Prince Wen and Caused Assassination of the Woman He Had Raised to the Throne.

Kingly marriage in Corea is neither more nor less of a lottery than it is elsewhere, only the method of challenging fate is different. All the eligible maidens in the kingdom were bidden to the palace, and then happy Prince Charming made his choice of course. No! That is the way it is in the fairy tales, but not in real life, not even in Corea, which in former days, at least so closely bordered on fairy lands. All the maidens selected by the Provincial Governors of the kingdoms assembled in the lotus pavilion outside the palace by the lotus pond. They stood attentive to please, as the unwell King, followed by the court, walked in and out inspecting the bevies of beauty who appeared, according to the ancient Corean custom, with bared breasts.

NO METHOD OF CHOICE.

Suddenly, at a signal from the Court Chamberlain, all the aspirant brides sat down (or more exactly speaking, squatted upon embroidered cushions, which had been carefully arranged in circles for this crucial moment. All the maidens squatted gracefully, of course, it goes without saying, because they were all highly bred maidens worthy of a King's hand and couch, but a second later one of them, for the moment happiest among women, sprang in the air as though stung by an adder. No! that could not be, as her face was suffused with smiles, and a joy which even Oriental etiquette could not suppress reddened her cheeks.

A moment later this maiden of the Min family held aloft in her right hand with triumphal gesture a golden goblet, placed by fate, as some said, by the Prince Parent, as all knew, in the cushion on which she sat. Twenty years later the Queen of the Mins was murdered and her mangled remains drenched with kerosene were burned not 100 yards from the palace pavilion, where by the oracle of the goblet, directed by the Prince Parent, she had been proclaimed Queen. While the hand that struck down the defenceless woman was that of a Japanese hireling, there never has been any doubt in the minds of those whose knowledge of Corean perfidy has been bridged by a sojourn at the Corean Court, and in each instance, at the marriage and at the midnight murder, the guiding spirit and the directing hand was that of the ruthless Prince Parent.

THE REAL RULER.

The story of Corea during the twenty years between the Queen's marriage and her murder is simply the story of the feud to the death, and after, between the Prince Parent and the Lady Min, whose strong will, much to the dismay of the Prince Parent, asserted itself well before the remains of the marriage feast were cleared away. It has been said that Korea never had a King, but that the Min family ruled through the Queen who was devoted to their interests. In the course of the Queen's reign then, as we may properly call it, the life and the death of politics was the feud between her and the Prince Parent. That he survived to die in his bed a few years ago shows what an adroit old fox the National Grand Duke really was. In the skirmishes of assassination which took place between him and the reigning lady, determined to rule, her father and two brothers were killed, and her nephew, though cut to pieces by a hundred swords, survived.

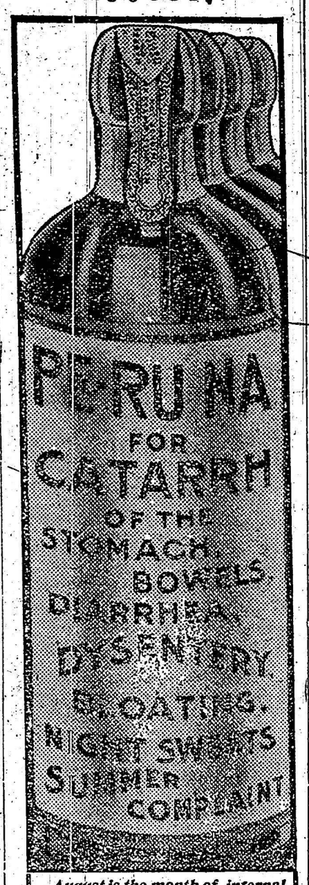
THE BOMB IN COREA.

Nor is it to be supposed that the National Grand Duke escaped quite scathless. On one occasion a bomb placed under his sleeping stove blew him high in the air. The bones in both his legs were broken by the explosion or the fall and physically he was never so spry as he had been before. Mentally, however, his murderous temper remained to his dying day. After this failure to convert the Prince Parent into an ancestral tablet and give him a Seoul name, the Mins, and perhaps it is fair to say, the Queen, tired of mere lethal weapons which had proved so inefficacious, and resorted to strategy and spoils.

DIED TO SAVE HER BOY.

What happened on that fateful night of October 8, 1895, has been related many times and in many ways. The essential facts are that Japanese troops surrounded the palace grounds and held the populace and the loyal troops in check, that Corean troops trained and officered by Japanese broke down the gates, and that a horde of Japanese soldiers, together with a number of Soshi, or unattached adventurers, rushed in, and, under the guidance of men attached to the Japanese Legation, made their way to the pavilion where the Queen slept. Her Majesty, aroused by the tumult in the city, had apparently a fair opportunity to escape. Indeed, it is reported that she had already found a safe refuge in the vast park, when her maternal instinct, her idolatry for the imbecile boy whom the Japanese would not proclaim Emperor, brought her back to the palace, where she met her death.

HEALTH NOTES FOR AUGUST.



August is the month of internal catarrh. The mucous membranes, especially of the bowels, are very liable to congestion, causing summer complaint, and catarrh of the bowels and other internal organs. Pe-ru-na is an excellent remedy for all these conditions.

WOMAN CONQUERED KOREA

Japanese Empress Was the First Conqueror, A. D. 201.

Women played an important part in the early history of Japan. To a woman, the Empress Jingu, belongs the glory of the first conquest made by Japan, that of Korea, A.D. 201. Dressed as a man, she led her fleet over the unknown waters, across which she alone believed a country lay to the westward. "If we succeed," she said to her chiefs, "the glory will be all yours. I will be responsible for the infamy of a possible defeat." The Koreans laid their wealth at the feet of the conquerors and the king swore that so long as the stars shone and water ran down hill Korea should be faithful to Japan. This achievement of the empress gave rise to the boast of the Japanese, "The arms of Japan shine beyond the seas." But the most important fruit of the victory was the introduction of Buddhism from Korea, as well as Asiatic art, science, medicine and literature. Jingu, however, was never actually proclaimed head of the empire. The first female ruler was Suiko, and since her time eight empresses have governed Japan, some of them with great wisdom.

Very many persons die annually from cholera and kindred summer complaints who might have been saved if proper remedies had been used. If attacked do not delay in getting a bottle of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial, the medicine that never fails to effect a cure. Those who have used it say it acts promptly, and thoroughly subdues the pain and disease.

A witty member of the legal profession was once a guest at a dinner remarkable for its meagreness. The dining-room had been newly and splendidly furnished. Some of the guests congratulated the host on his taste in decoration. "For my part I would rather see less gilding and more carving," said the wit.

DO THEY USE FOWL LANGUAGE?

A Scientist Says That Chickens are Terrible Gossips.

Do fowls talk? A scientist who has for many years been investigating the language of the chicken world, believes that the barnyard rooster is able to communicate his thoughts to his clucking comrades by a system of speech. The noises that fowls make with their throats are, in his opinion, conclusively proved to be conversation, because when a hen is alone, it is invariably silent; but just as soon as the solitary hen or rooster meets another, you will hear, if you know chicken-language, an animated conversation.

The professor has not pursued his researches far enough to be able to understand what fowls say, but he claims to be able to interpret many of their sounds, and has succeeded in imitating them so well, that various experimental hens have paid close attention to his words.

He has learned, for instance, the cry of alarm made by a hen when a hawk is drawing near, and if he gives vent to it, all the chickens in the immediate vicinity run for shelter. He tells us that chickens are terrible gossips, stopping to tell each other current news and suchlike.

Poultry-keepers will be surprised to learn that no two fowls crow exactly alike. The professor has taken note of some five hundred chanticleers, and says that very little study shows one the difference in conversational powers. A crow can last from three to seven seconds, according to the information to be imparted. Everyone knows the crow in the stilly night, which acts as a telegraph between the roosters of the neighborhood, also the crow of triumph after a rival fowl has been vanquished.

When the worthy professor shall have carried his studies of chicken-language to a point that will enable poultry-keepers to interpret messages as to the future egg supply of particular fowls, he will have rendered mankind a distinct service.

PERFECTLY CONTENT.

"It is strange," remarked the observant man, "but very few people are content to do what they are best qualified for. Painters long to be musicians, and musicians long to be authors, and so it goes."

"Yes," replied the business man, "but there are exceptions to every rule. I know a young man who has been doing the same thing for years, and he seems perfectly satisfied with it."

"What has he been doing?"

"Nothing."

MOTHER'S ANXIETY.

The summer months are a time of anxiety for mothers, because they are the most dangerous months in the year for babies and young children. Stomach and bowel troubles come quickly during the hot weather and almost before the mother realizes that there is danger the little one may be beyond aid. Baby's Own Tablets will prevent summer complaints if given occasionally because they keep the stomach and bowels free from offending matter. And the Tablets will cure these troubles if they come suddenly. The wise mother should keep these Tablets always at hand and give them occasionally to her children. The Tablets can be given with equal success to the new born babe or the well grown child. They always do good—they cannot possibly do harm—and the mother has the guarantee of a Government analyst that this medicine does not contain one particle of opiate or harmful drug. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The World is Full of Pains.—The aches and pains that afflict humanity are many and constant, arising from a multitude of indistinguishable causes, but in the main owing to man's negligence in taking care of his health. Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil was the outcome of a universal cry for some specific which would speedily relieve pain, and it has filled its mission to a remarkable degree.

THE GOLDEN RULE.

Two men had been shouting at each other for a long time, and the idle spectators at the corner of the street thought blows must soon follow.

Suddenly the two men closed. Instantly their hats went off and rolled in the dust. One of the men was entirely bald, and the other had a thick head of hair. The bald man seized the other by the hair, and began to drag him about.

"Stop him!" cried a bystander.

"Why should you stop him?" asked another. "He's only practising the golden rule."

"The golden rule? What do you mean?"

"Why he's doing to the other man what he wishes to goodness the other man might be able to do to him!"

CLEARING THE MESS ROOM.

Some of the Unwritten Laws of the British Navy.

In the gunroom mess itself the midshipmen are ruled with an iron hand, as probably they need to be, says a writer in the Grand Magazine, in telling the customs or pranks played by the junior officers on those who have the misfortune to be junior to them in point of standing in the British Navy.

Those over eighteen—the senior—however, are allowed more privileges than the juniors, among them being, strange to say, the right to smoke. The juniors do as they are told without question or remonstrance.

An instance of this is afforded in one of the most curious of all the old customs. At any time that pleases his fancy it is the cherished prerogative of the president of the mess to jab an ordinary tablefork into one of the beams above his head. Instantly every junior midshipman or cadet in the room rushes for the door as fast as his legs can carry him, while the progress of the laggards is assisted by vigorous whacks from their elders. Those on the wrong side of the table climb over it in their haste to take their obnoxious presence elsewhere.

Even the wardroom has its peculiar ways. Refreshments all around are exacted from a man who is indiscreet enough to mention a lady's name at dinner or to make a bet before the King's health has been drunk. Curiously enough the unwritten law prohibits an officer from drawing his sword in the messroom. This must be a relic of the days of sudden and violent brawls, but to-day the only purpose served by the regulation is to enable the alert to rap the less wary into momentary forgetfulness and the consequent penalty.

WANTED SOME REMINDER.

"Now," said the tailor, "we'll make this suit of clothes perfectly comfortable for you."

"Don't do that," answered Mr. Gamroon; "just let me feel a little dressed up, so I won't forget my company manners and annoy mother and the girls."

Like little volcanoes of disease, the eruptions of eczema pour out discharges. Bad blood causes the trouble. The local remedy is Weaver's Cerate, and Weaver's Syrup will drive the poison from the blood.

Tougher: "Well, did you make him take his words back as you said you were going to do?" Meeker: "Yes, he took them back; but he used them over again more emphatically than he did before."

A Sound Stomach Means a Clear Head.—The high pressure of a nervous life which business men of the present day are constrained to live makes draughts upon their vitality highly detrimental to their health. It is only by the most careful treatment that they are able to keep themselves alert and active in their various callings, many of them know the value of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills in regulating the stomach and consequently keeping the head clear.

"Haven't I told you," asked the father, "always to tell the truth?" "Yes, you told me that," the young man admitted; "but another time you told me never to become the slave of a habit."

A Matter of Importance to all those who are run down and debilitated is the fact that "Ferrozone" is the best tonic ever compounded. It gives strength and builds up the system.

He yelled at the top of his voice for two hours and then stopped. "Well," said his mother, "are you going to be good?" "Have you finished crying?" "No," said Tommy, "I have not finished; I'm only resting."

Known to Thousands.—Parmelee's Vegetable Pills regulate the action of the secretions, purify the blood and keep the stomach and bowels free from deleterious matter. Taken according to direction they will overcome dyspepsia, eradicate biliousness, and leave the digestive organs healthy and strong to perform their functions. Their merits are well-known to thousands who know by experience how beneficial they are in giving tone to the system.

Timmins, who believes in the old saying, "See a pin, pick it up, and all day long you'll have luck," one day saw a pin in the street. Bending down to get it his hat tumbled off and rolled into the gutter, his eyeglasses fell and broke on the pavement, his braces gave way behind, he burst the buttonhole on the back of his shirt-collar, and he all but lost his new false teeth. But he got the pin.

SELF-DEFENDING WHEAT.

A Belgian agriculturist, Monsieur Breton, has recently made some experiments with barbed wheat to determine the effectiveness of the defence which its barbs afford against the ravages of graminiferous birds. In the same field near Antwerp, he sowed some barbless wheat and some Japhet wheat, which is without barbs. The Japhet wheat grew rapidly, but every head was soon spoiled by the birds before the grain could ripen, but the barbed variety was so well guarded by its array of needle-like spears that the attacks of the feathered birds were completely defeated, and the grain ripened in security. At the same time it was observed that the insectivorous birds were as busy capturing their prey among the barbed heads as among those that possessed no natural defences.
