Hydro and Estimates

Mr. Gaby's letter, which appears in this issue of The Advance, will be of much interest to the people of Flesherton and is not without a certain degree of value to other municipalities as well. When Flesherton took the hydro power its acceptance was based on the estimates given us by the Commission. It now appears that these estimates were erroneous and misleading. We have not been getting the cheap electricity that we thought we were. The time has come when the accumulated indebtedness of the past four years must be provided for, and it is up to us to supply the arrears.

We notice that Premier Drury is calling a halt in the hydro radial scheme until a commission can investigate, and that Mr. Beck is extremely wrathy with him as a consequence. We believe Mr. Drury is justified in his decision and for the following reasons: Estimates of the verious radial schemes were made several years ago, and since then costs of construction have doubled, while the traffic possibilities of such lines have declined, making it extremely doubtful if any line in this country would pay for construction at the present time.

The head of the Commission expresses extreme solicitude for the poor man who earns his daily bread by labor. For ourselves, we never knew that the Commission posed as a charitable inttitution, more than to supply us with electricity at cost. Now we are practically told that it is run to give the laboring man a job, regardless of whether or not the public gets value for its money. As a matter of fact, we suspect that other interests enter into the question. The Hydro in its inception engaged an immense staff of engineers, managers, overseers and clerks, highly salaried men, and it naturally desires to find employment to keep them busy, in conjunction with labor, and there is just a suspicion that there has been some reckless estimating in order to promote public works that will never pay for their construction.

Mr. Drury proposes to find out whether this is true or not.

We would like it if the investigation cold include the problem of reducing costs of running the present system, where much extravagance is alleged by some people to exist.

Wm. Braun, John Shannahan and Henry Reynolds, near Pike Lake, a short distance from Mt. Forest, dug out three young foxes in Mr. Shannahan's field the other day. There were feathers and bones around enough to stock two or three barnyards. Mr. Braun is trying to tame the young foxes, also a young skunk.
