FRENCH CAPTURE 'THE WHITE WAY'

Brilliant Success Gained by Joffre's Army North of Arras.

A despatch from London says: The weather being improved on the western front, both the British and French troops have resumed the offensive north of Arras. General Joffre's forces made a brilliant successful assault on the Lorette slopes, capturing the German fortified position known as "the White Way." These works are situated on the only remaining ridge of the hill which was still partialy in the position of the enemy. As a result of the French success their further advance toward Lens cannot now be hampered, the entire Lorette hill and the lesser ridges which the Germans had defended fiercely for more than six months being now held by the French. The enemy was also driven from the section of of Ablain St. Nazaire which linked the "White Way" works to the northern end of the village still occupied by them. Several hundred prisoners were taken, including numerous officers.

YIELDS BIG RETURN.

Receipts Since War Tax Became Effective Are $171,063.

A despatch from Ottawa says: A further indication of the successful working of the war measures is found in the already heavy collections under the War Revenue Act by the Department of Inland Revenue. The receipts since the war tax became effective in March to May 18 have been $171,063. This by no means represents all the new revenue from the stamp taxes, as in many cases postage stamps have been and are being used. The war stamp revenue in the Inland Revenue Department alone was $46,570 in March and $45,692 in April. The total inland revenue in March was $1,828,791, and in April $1,438,598, a decline of about $420,000.

Bible Names of Battleships.

The custom of giving Bible names to men-of-war at one time prevailed extensively in the British Navy. There is only one vessel, the battleship Goliath, now sunk, with a Biblical appellation. The names are chiefly pagan, like Hercules, or adjectival, like Audacious. In the 17th century, however, the British Naval Fleet included vessels named Abraham, Benjamin, Ephraim, John the Baptist, Jonathan, King David, Ruth, and Solomon. In Nelson's time there was both an Adam and Eve, and an Eden, but by then the use of Biblical names for engines of destruction began to be out of favor. At a still earlier date the practice was very much more common. One warship, commissioned in the time of Henry VIII., bore the name of Christ, and among the fighting fleet of Henry V.'s time were ships named Jesus, Holy Ghost, Peter, Paul and Paternoster.

Special Notice.

BETTER THAN SPANKING.

Spanking does not cure children of bedwetting. There is a constitutional cause for this trouble. Mrs. M. Summers, Box 849 Windsor, Ont., will send free to any mother her successful home treatment, with full instructions. Send no money, but write her to-day if your children trouble you in this way. Don't blame the child, the chances are it can't help it. This treatment also cures adults and aged people troubled with urine difficulties by day or night.

CORRESPONDENCE FOR PRISONERS.

Instructions Re Addressing Postal Matter to Germany.

1. Letters (letters should be left open), postcards and postal parcels should be addressed as follows:—
1. Rank, initials, name;
2. Regiment, or other unit;
3. British (or Canadian, French, Belgian or Russian) prisoner of war;
4. Place of internment;
5. Germany.

Place of internment should be stated always, if possible, and parcels cannot be accepted unless place of internment is stated. All addresses must be in ink.

2. Communications should be limited to private and family news and to necessary business communications, and should not be sent too frequently. No references to the naval, military or political situation or to naval or military movements and organizations are allowed. Letters or postcards containing such references will not be delivered.

3. Friends of prisoners of war are advised to send postcards in preference to letters, as postcards are less likely to be delayed. If letters are sent, they should not exceed in length two sides of a sheet of note paper and should contain nothing but the sheet of note paper. On no account should the writing be crossed.

4. Letters cannot for the present be accepted for registration.

5. Postage need not be paid either on letters or parcels addressed to prisoners of war.

6. No letters should be enclosed in parcels, and newspapers must not on any account be sent. So far as is known there is no restriction on the contents of parcels; tobacco may be sent and will be admitted duty free, but food stuffs of a perishable character should not be sent. Parcels should not exceed 11 lbs. in weight.

7. Remittances can be made by money order to prisoners of war. Instructions as to how to proceed can be obtained from postmasters of accounting post offices. The transmission of coin, either in letters or parcels, is expressly prohibited. Postal notes and bank notes should not be sent.

8. It must be understood that no guarantee of the delivery of either parcels or letters can be given and that the Post Office accepts no responsibility. In any case, considerable delay may take place, and failure to receive an acknowledgement should not necessarily be taken as an indication that letters and parcels sent have not been delivered.

9. So far as is known, prisoners of war in Germany are allowed to write letters or postcards from time to time; but they may not always have facilities for doing so, and the fact that no communication is received from them need not give rise to anxiety.

Children's Sleep.

Much information as to the health of a child may be gained by careful watching of its attitude, movements, and expression during sleep. The child who sleeps best with the mouth wide open, and the head thrown back, is most likely suffering from enlarged tonsils, which impede its breathing; if it can only sleep when the bedclothes have all been kicked off, rickets should be watched for, while lung or heart affections are shown at an early stage by the tendency to sleep high up on the pillow, so that the head and shoulders are raised. In cases of pain in any part the hand will be found to be carried to the affected spot during sleep, so that teething, headache, or earache may be diagnosed, while a curious sign of irritation in the stomach or bowels is the constant rubbing of the nose. Restless sleep, broken and uneasy, is a common symptom of the onset of serious illness, but any extreme torpor and drowsiness should also be suspected, as these frequently precede feverish ailments, such as scarlatina and measles. Convulsive attacks are nearly always preceded by the tight clasping of the hands, with the thumbs folded into the palms, and the stiffening and curling up of the toes.

Willie Barked.

Willie was struggling through the story in his reading lesson. "No," said the captain," he read, "it was not a sloop. It was a larger vessel. By the rig I judged her to be a—a—a—a—a"—— The word was new to him. "Barque," supplied the teacher. Still Willie hesitated. "Barque!" repeated the teacher, this time sharply. Willie looked as though he had not heard aright. Then, with an apprehensive glance around the class, he shouted, "Bow-wow!"

ROUTED BY BRITISH TROOPS

Severe Sandstorm Alone Saved Ottoman Detachment From Annihilation or Capture

A despatch from London says: Official announcement was made by the Marquis of Crewe, Secretary of State for India, that the attempt of the Turks to advance on the Euphrates River against the British in the Persian Gulf sphere of operations has resulted in failure, and that the Turkish forces have been put to rout.

A severe sandstorm saved a Turkish detachment from capture or annihilation in a battle with British troops along the Karkheh River.

The British attacked a Turkish camp at Illah. While the battle was in progress the sandstorm broke, and the Turks, shielded from sight by the sand clouds, fled across the border toward Amara, on the Tigris River. The India Office announced that all south-western Persia is now cleared of Turkish troops. "In Arabistan our troops have severely punished some treacherous pro-Turkish tribes who murdered our wounded," said the official statement.

Wit and Wisdom.

Fear as to results should never deter us from doing right.

The world is given as a prize for the men in earnest.

Some men who boast that they pay as they go, never manage to get very far.

O what a bright old song it is, that "O 'tis love, 'tis love, that makes the world go round."

"Did, he tell you he couldn't speak French?" "No." "Then how did you know?" "He spoke some."

When a man's wife goes away for a holiday he has no way of keeping account of what the neighbors are doing.

Minister: "Well, Bobbie, what do you want to be when you grow up?" "Bobbie (suffering from parental discipline): "An orphan."

Twinkle, twinkle, little star—we know exactly what you are. In olden times your rhyme might do, but since we've learned a thing or two.

"Do you think there is good luck in picking up a pin?" "I doubt it. I picked up a hairpin the other day, and my wife found it in my pocket."

A new form of greeting that some men do not like is that on the lines of "I say, someone was asking for you." "For me? Who?" "Kitchener."

"What are you doing now, Bill?" "I'm collecting." "Collecting what?" "My thoughts." "Gosh! you were always lucky in striking an easy job."

"So you want to marry my daughter, do you?" asked the father. "Now, what are your prospects?" "Excellent, sir," answered the young man, "if you don't spoil them."

She: "They tell me, doctor, that you found a woman's skull here in your rambles. How did you know it was a woman's skull?" He: "Well, you see, the jaws had evidently seen a good deal of wear."

No grace is more necessary to the Christian worker than fidelity; the humble grace that marches on in sunshine and storm when no banners are waving, and there is no music to cheer the weary feet.

The Old Un: "Pluck, my boy, pluck: first and last—that is the one essential to success in business." The Young Un: "Oh, of course, I quite understand that; the trouble is finding some one to pluck."

Demands No Eulogy of the Kaiser

Public Appeals to Board of Education to Eliminate It From Chicago School Books

A despatch from Chicago says: Mass meetings and public appeals to the Board of Education to eliminate the eulogy of the German Kaiser from the Public School speller are being planned. With the exception of the German newspapers the various other foreign language newspapers of the city are uniting in a demand that the Board of Education either cause the page in the speller containing the eulogistic text on the Kaiser be cut out, or to have the entire edition of the speller destroyed.

"There will be meetings, resolutions and communications upon the subject, and the Board of Education will be asked to undo the wrong that has been done," said Vladimir Geringer, editor of the Daily Svornost. "It is not a foreign language question. It is purely an American proposition. Mrs. Ella Flagg Young, in the interview, points out that the Board of Education is the place to appeal to, and that is where we will go. We will also ask Mrs. Young to explain why no other ruler is eulogized. Further, in the next few days we will issue the facts regarding the gymnasium and school life of the Kaiser, which will show up something more."

RESERVES BEING BROUGHT UP

All the Big Guns of the Enemy on the Belgian Coast Transferred to the Canal

A despatch from London says: The Daily Mail's correspondent at Amsterdam cables that the Germans have held the allies in check just beyond the east bank of the Yser Canal by bringing up large reserves of men and artillery. He says that all the big guns of the Germans on the Belgian coast except their aircraft pieces have been transferred to the Yser, while all the Landsturm at Bruges, equipped with new rifles, have gone with them.

That Lot of Yearlings.

Of all the cattle kind upon the farm, the yearling's lot is usually about the worst. This is too often true when times are good. When prices are high, and when feed is cheap. When this is true, then it is a case of force the feed upon the older animals and get them into marketable condition. Let the yearlings take care of themselves. When the opposite is true, then it is too often a case of making the yearlings stand the worst of it. When milk is high, it is a case of force the cow and starve the yearling.

This is one of the biggest kind of mistakes. All experiment goes to show that gains may be more economically made upon yearlings than with older cattle. It costs less to feed a yearling enough to keep it alive to begin with, and the cost goes to make beef or growth. It doesn't pay to neglect the calf when it is a yearling, ever expecting to make it up again to the calf or to yourself.

High Brow, High Price.

"Farm products cost more than they used to."

"Yes," replied the farmer. "When a farmer is supposed to know the botanical name of what he's raisin' an' the entomological name of the insect that eats it, an' the pharmaceutical name of the chemical that will kill it, somebody's got to pay."

CUT DOWN BY THOUSANDS

Australians Avenge Death of Their Commander in Dardanelles

A despatch from Melbourne, Australia, says: General Sir Ian Hamilton, Commander-in-Chief of the British land forces at the Dardanelles, in a cablegram to the Governor expressing regret for the death of Brigadier-General W. T. Bridges, a commander of the Australian forces at the Dardanelles, who died as the result of a wound, says:

"The irreparable loss was brilliantly avenged Friday by his own troops, who inflicted a loss of seven thousand on the enemy, our loss being under five hundred."

Camps Bombarded.

"There was a lively bombardment of the Dardanelles, directed principally against numerous Turkish camps at Kum Burnu, on the Asiatic side," says Reuter's Athens correspondent. "It is stated that Chanak Kalessi has been completely destroyed, and that the town of Gallipoli, on the European side of the waterway, has been badly damaged.

"Several of the European forts are still holding out, however," adds the despatch.

"The allies are advancing on the Upoli Peninsula, supported by the fire of the battleship Queen Elizabeth. The column was attacked near Kilid Bahr by Turks, supported by the cruiser Goeben, which was firing from the Sea of Marmora but drove them back and took 500 prisoners.

Warned the Peninsula.

Reports from Tenedos says that British aeroplanes dropped proclamations in the town of Gallipoli announcing an approaching bombardment and advising the population to leave the place. Later aeroplanes and warships threw incendiary bombs on the town, destroying portions of it and causing numerous casualties.

Shipping at Smyrna Held Up.

A despatch to the Havas Agency from Athens says the authorities at Vourla, in the Smyrna district, have prohibited the departure of the Greek steamers Macedonia, Sparta and Nicolas, and also all communication between the ships and the officers who had left them.

The Greek Council at Smyrna protested to the Valiyaga against this action of the Turkish authorities, but the Vali replied that the prohibition against the steamers has been taken as a result of orders from Constantinople for financial reasons.

REGENERATION OF FRANCE

Scenes and Episodes in Paris in the Year 1914.

A very charming and informal book has been made up by Mrs. M. Clarke of episodes witnessed during the summer of 1914, just after war had taken place. Endowed with powers of observation and real sympathy with her subject, the author has brought together a number of incidents and episodes that serve to bring forward the French character and its resourceful quality. Moreover, stress is placed upon the fundamental changes that have taken place in the French since 1870, and in the spirit in which the men and women face coming fortune. Even the murder of Deroulede, which occurred at the most critical period met by France since l'Annee Terrible, failed to do more than inspire some of those noble utterances that go down to posterity. His colleague Herve, the Socialist, at once published, declaring, "They have murdered Deroulede and now they wish to murder France," and he flew to his country's defence like a true man.

There are many similar incidents that serve to build up the perfect for the patriotism that the lively survived the tigers of many patriots and has been fully displayed recently.

The pages of the book are filled with French impressions of England and the English are especially interesting. Before England entered the war, let the French doubted her faith, and when she hesitated the profound was immense. There was unbound enthusiasm. He could not do enough to express appreciation of the noble part that the Kaiser and General French's "contemptible army." To them the coarse British soldier, his exceptional habit of singing when marching to battle and after, even at times while fighting, impressed the French deeply.

"Whenever you hear laughter," said a Frenchman to Mrs. Clarke, "you may be sure it is an English army. And the difficulty, the louder it is. Then his habit of cracking his way has been an inexhaustible source of comment that is in a fair way to become legendary. All this, with his splendid soldierly qualities and his bulldog tenacity, which prevents his ever turning back, has impressed his allies almost as much as England's lavish generosity to the Belgians and the noble manner in which her colonies have come to the mother country's assistance.

It is soothing to one's soul to see the beautiful side of the terrible cloud that has been hanging over us. It is coming together in all sorts of curious ways, but the good has looked at one another distrustfully.

TOO MANY CHILDREN

with pinched faces and poor blood; they do not complain but appetite lags, they have no ambition and do not progress.

Such children need the rich medicinal nourishment in Scott's Emulsion above everything else; its purified cod liver oil contains nature's own blood-forming, flesh-building fats which quickly show in rosy cheeks, better appetite, firm flesh and sturdy frames.

If your children are languid, tired when rising, catch cold easily or find their studies difficult, give them Scott's Emulsion; it supplies the very food elements that their systems lack.

Scott's Emulsion contains no harmful drugs and is so good for growing children it's a pity to keep it from them.

A baby with an arm long enough to touch the sun and burn it would live to see its fingers would die of old age before it would feel any pain.
