Cockshutt Plow Expands in Scope.

Owing to the fact that Cockshutt Plow Company has signed a contract to market Allis-Chalmers Co.'s tractors in Canada, and to the fact that this latter company has decided to enter the tractor business, which will involve sales of about $8,000,000 in 1928, or one-fifth of the total business, it is thought that this expansion will be reflected in the activities of Cockshutt Plow. As American companies this year have found their most lucrative field for tractors this year in the Canadian West, and the tractor business itself has proved one of the most profitable lines handled by farm implement companies, this is a development of major importance to Cockshutt, and estimates are that sales of the tractor will increase the company's turnover by from $2,000,000 to $3,000,000 a year, with corresponding increase in net profits. Tractors enter Canada duty free, and Cockshutt's sales offices will handle the tractors on the same basis, as though they had been manufactured in Canada. It has been an expanding and profitable line for Allis-Chalmers.

Cockshutt is building several new warehouses in Western Canada to take care of its increasing business. It is also having better business in the east, and not alone from the farm community. General Motors and Ford have proved good customers for the department which manufactures motor truck bodies.

Unscrupulous Tactics in Buying and Selling Mine Shares

That there have been unscrupulous tactics used on the part of certain traders, with a view to breaking the market on various listed mining stocks, has been brought to the attention of the Financial News Bureau.

One house received a call, to all appearances from a responsible trader, to sell a block of 4,200 shares of Teck-Hughes at the market. This order, when executed, broke the stock badly. Later, the man absolutely repudiated the order and a trail on the long-distance call found it to have come from a "pay" station.

Similar instances have been cited. Fictitious buying orders on a certain low-priced producer, in the names of various doctors and professional men recently moved this stock up sharply. As a result of these tactics, brokerage houses are checking the orders very closely.

Mining Briefs

Amulet has the street guessing at present. It was rumored that important ore was cut in diamond drilling. Further reports came from Rouyn to the effect that the drills had cut 40 feet of high-grade copper-zinc ore at a depth of approximately 220 feet. At the time of the report the drill was said to still have been in ore and it was thought that this was an entirely new body, lying about 200 feet to the east of the "C" ore body.

Another despatch dealt with development and it was stated that the shaft was now down 225 feet, with timbering completed to that depth. Work is now said to be in progress on the foundation for the new hoist which is expected to be on the property by November 1st.

Conservative

One of the most conservatively capitalized companies to come into the public eye for some time is the Gold Rock Mining Syndicate, which is capitalized at 4,000 shares of no par value. Directors include Capt. E. C. Wright, president; L. Cote, K.C., H. L. Nichol, secretary-treasurer; T. W. Bathurst, Dr. J. O. Robillard and J. Ryan. The syndicate owns claims in the Dryden gold area, Kenora mining division, Ontario.

Flin Flon Mines Rushing Materials to Power Site

Winnipeg.—"Supplies for the construction of Island Falls power plant of Flin Flon mines are going into the site of the plant at the rate of 100 tons a day," states John Callinan, president of Callinan Flin Flon Mines, who is in the city from an inspection trip in the North with a party of New York and Toronto financiers. "The freighting in of supplies by barge and portage will shortly reach 400 tons a day, and it is expected that 5,000 tons will be at the falls before the freeze-up," Mr. Callinan stated.

C.N.R. Earnings

The gross earnings of the Canadian National Railways for the week ended October 15, were $6,817,041, as compared with $5,672,726 for the corresponding period of 1927, an increase of $1,244,315, or 22 per cent.

Toronto Change Average at New High

Industrial common stocks collectively on the local stock market as of Oct. 20 are selling at the highest on record. Individually there are many issues below the top for all time, but an average of 30 listed and 13 unlisted industrial common securities compiled as of October 15, places the average above the figure for end of any month this year and exceeds that of January when the bull movement was rampant. The average price of 30 listed on Oct. 15 was 79.20 at the end of January and for 13 unlisted stocks it is 50.23, compared with January's mark of 48.69. February's reaction saw a loss of nearly eight points in the listed stock and over five in the unlisted. The low for the year by both groups was touched for listed and 42.75 for the unlisted. August indicated a slight improvement with a more pronounced advance in September and a new high mark set in the first half of October. The average of 60 stocks, including industrials, banks and utilities, however, is still below the peak of 110.23 touched in April. To-day the average stands at 109.71 and the greatest portion of the decrease is accounted for by the bank stocks. In April investment trusts were active in the market and carried the average for the bank issues up over 19 points to 325.62, compared with 314.75 as of October 15. Utilities are also lower at 115.69, contrasted with a high of 121.33 at the end of May.

Canada's Status

Quebec Soleil (Lib.): The High Commissioner of Great Britain to the Government of Canada has arrived in Ottawa. This marks an epoch in the history of the political evolution of the Dominion. . . The nomination of a High Commissioner was inevitable from the day when the Governor-General ceased to be the agent of the British Government. We are autonomous, completely autonomous, but we have not broken our association with Great Britain; for different reasons it will pay us to maintain that relationship.

League of Nations

Chinese Coins Phrase

The latest definition of the function of the League of Nations is given in an article in "Interdependence", a monthly review of the League of Nations Society in Canada, in a story copied from the New York Times.

Many words have been written in attempts to define the scope and purposes of the League of Nations. To-day a Chinese summed it up in three when he said the League was "a shock absorber".

When this terse phrase was dropped by Wang Ching-Chi, spokesman for Nationalist China, Aristide Briand, who was nodding, came quickly to attention; Herman Meuller peered with sharp interest through his inevitable spectacles and George Bernard Shaw, who was in the gallery, threw up his head.

The phrase was being repeated on all sides in League circles to-night, because it is held to embody succintly the mission of the League to stave off war by receiving itself the first clash of national interests. Wang Ching-Chi is now a celebrity, and from his speech the delegates have gained the impression that China will be heard from on frequent occasions at Geneva. Wang differs from Kipling by believing that East and West can find common ground here.

Mr. Wang in his speech, which was listened to attentively by a great audience, pledged the new unified China's whole-hearted support to the League. He was convinced that it was destined to be the domain of understanding between the Far East and the Western world, which, while representing different cultures, were not essentially hostile to one another. Confucius, he said, might rightly be considered a pioneer of the League's work.

Emphasizing that the League stood for protection of sovereign rights, he welcomed financial and technical assistance for China, and continued:

"Undoubtedly readjustment in our relations with some foreign powers must be made, but, acting with a spirit of good-will and in atmosphere of friendly cordiality such as prevails at Geneva, the difficulties will be overcome.

"I believe that the East and West will often find the League a shock absorber. When the League shall have helped cure the great evils from which China has suffered since her first contacts with the outside world it will have brought serenity to a nation that has been anxious and uncertain where to turn for a friendly hand and heart."—New York Times.

A LAUGHING BABY IS A GREAT JOY

What can give more joy to the home than a laughing, happy baby. The well child makes everyone happy with his tuneful gurgle and bright, laughing eyes. It is only the sickly baby who is not a laughing baby, for it is the little one's nature to be happy when well.

Mothers, if your baby is cross, if he cries a great deal and no amount of attention seems to make him happy, give him a dose of Baby's Own Tablets and he will soon be well and ready to radiate that happiness through the home again.

Baby's Own Tablets are a mild but thorough laxative. They regulate the bowels and sweeten the stomach and thus banish constipation and indigestion; break up colds and simple fevers and correct those troubles which accompany the cutting of teeth and in doing those things—and doing them well—they make baby happy and keep him happy. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

War Trophies

Manchester Guardian (Lib.): The other day a local council decided that a gun displayed in a public place as a trophy of the Great War should be broken up and flung on the scrap heap. The Mayor of Southwark is raising the same question on a larger scale. He intends to consult the Metropolitan Mayors' Association and find out whether they share his opinion that it is useless to continue the exhibition in public buildings and parks of guns and other munitions captured from the Germans. His view is that it would be much better to sell them, if possible, or else to scrap them. He finds a widespread dislike of these grim exhibits, not only among people who hate war, but among ex-service men who object to being reminded of what they went through.

Tail Lights for Carts

Three Rivers Nouvelliste (Cons.): In face of the hostility of rural elements, the Roads Department have not dared to ask the Legislature to pass a law making it compulsory to carry a light in the rear of all vehicles. . . . (Yet) already a great number of farmers have recognized that it is not merely in the interests of motoring but in their own as well to carry a light on the rear of their carts. The reform will not be asked until the great majority of the rural population have been convinced that it is to their interests to do so.

Mayor's Gift

"Lindy was a citizen of the Northern Ontario Woods. He is now a citizen of the United States, although he has not taken out many papers. He chews every paper he sees. The gift of Mayor Houde of Montreal to Mayor Jimmie Walker of New York, "Lindy," as Mr. Walker named him, was the first shipment to be handled by the Canadian Pacific Express Company, on its daily Montreal-New York air service. What he thinks of this pioneer air service has not been recorded, but Canadian Pacific officials who greeted him at the New York end state that he was in fine fighting fettle on arrival. Several hundred pounds of other express matter accompanied him.

The Wife Hunts Too

"I am not prepared to say that your wife will make a success of it—I don't know your wife (I don't know my own)—but you should be sufficiently well acquainted with her to tell whether she would get a kick out of it or a grouch." Captain Paul A. Curtis, "Field and Stream" shooting editor, suggests in the November issue of that magazine that the hunter include his wife on a trip.

"Women are now fighting for ringside seats for a title bout instead of for standing room on the sofa when a mouse appears on the horizon," he says, "and when they are successfully swimming the channel, making trans-Atlantic hops, holding up payrolls as well as hubby's bankroll, and visiting the interior of Uganda for elephants, it's a bit flat to say what they cannot do. It is not a question of what they can stand, but what they are willing to put up with.

"Tell her she has got to forget that new fur coat," advises this "Field and Stream" writer, "if it's a bear hunt you contemplate, or if it's just a few days' duck shooting at some local resort, that she has got to forego the possession of a little hat she scouted for in Madame Chez Blois. If she passes that test she is eligible—no woman will pass up a new hat for an idle fancy, not if she's sober!

"Let it be known and thoroughly understood that she is going out to do a man's job, that it really is not a woman's vocation and that she must face it entirely from a masculine point of view if she is to make good.

"To begin with her equipment must be right," adds Capt. Curtis. "It is only fair to you, to her guide and to herself. She must wear two pairs of woollen socks in a clumsy pair of shoe-pacs for the same reason you and the guide do, even though she never wears any but the sheerest silk at home and abhors wool. For the rest let her equipment be just what common sense would direct you to take for warmth and protection from wind and rain. Remember, it is a man's game; so she needs a man's equipment."

Immortality

London Daily Mail (Ind. Cons.): It is a truism that the famous can have no private life. The relations and friends of a great man, more particularly when he is dead and has passed into history, must resign themselves to seeing the weak points of his character as well as his virtues exposed to the public gaze in the interests of truth. If all biography is not to be reduced to a monotonous level of meaningless eulogy these things must be.

Labor and Its Life

London Observer (Ind.): Labor in its most ambitious mood has no desire to take over a country made bankrupt by industrial dissensions. It realizes, too, that weak though capital may be when confronting a democracy, it has an immense economic advantage. Its mobility permits it to abandon a stricken field whereon Labor must stay and starve. Appreciating these facts, Labor is formulating two principles of action—in politics, independence; in economics, co-operation. It may go forward confident that its political opponents understand and welcome its attitude.

WEAK AND NERVOUS

A Condition Due to Watery Blood — Easily Corrected Through the Use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Thin, pale girls lack the power of resistance to disease that rich, red blood gives. Nervous breakdown is the result of thin blood. So is indigestion, headaches, backaches and many other troubles. Girls suffering from thin, impure blood need just the help Dr. Williams' Pink Pills can give. For many years Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have been a world-famous blood-builder and nerve restorer. They actually make new, rich, red blood which imparts new vigor and life to all the organs of the body. Their first effect is usually shown by an improved appetite; then the spirits revive and restlessness at night gives way to health restoring sleep. For sufferers from anaemia, nervousness, general weakness or physical exhaustion Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a restorative of the utmost value. This is proved by the experience of Miss Sarah A. McEachern, R.R. No. 3, Brule, N.S., who says:—"About three years ago I became very weak and nervous. I had pains in my side and back. I also had frequent pains in the back of my head and neck. I was very pale and very weak. I had attacks of nervous irritability, and at times I was so nervous that life seemed hardly worth living. While in this condition a friend strongly advised me to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I began taking these pills and used them for about two months with the result that there was such an improvement in my condition that friends would ask me what I was taking, and I was only too glad to tell them it was Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I am now enjoying good health and am glad to give this statement for the benefit it may be to some other sufferer."

You can get these pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Daintiness and Individuality

The vogue for formal afternoon clothes brings back the dressy blouse. Contrary to the recent reports from Paris that velvet has reached its peak and consequently will be on the decline, most of the very newest blouses are of plain or printed velvet. For blouses, as for dresses, the transparent, silk-back velvet is most used, but because velvet is so popular generally, the shiny, stiff, cotton-back fabric is seen in some dresses of the bouffant type. Evening dresses shown by some Paris openings feature panne velvet, as do blouses on which softness and suppleness of line are not the main style trend.

Contrasting the frocks of a short time ago with the fashions at the present time, it is difficult to imagine what selling appeal their standardized simplicity had for women who wished to express their individuality by their clothes. Dresses now differ in their necklines, sleeves, waist-and-hip-lines and also in their skirt lengths, so each one stirs a note unlike the others.

One of the sharpest style points of dresses, one which betrays whether they are this year's model or survivals of the past season, is perceptible in the treatment of the neckline. In fact, the fashion of the up-in-the-front, down-in-the-back movement and other unevenness evidenced by long fluttering points of chiffon, swaying fringe arranged in tiers, or tulle in ruffles, has so captured the fashion world that stylists are predicting its passing, as a mode always does the minute it becomes overdrawn.

For blouses the point of interest centres at the neckline, with possibly the hips as a close second. The square neck is "out," and both round and V-shape are in style. An effect of the dainty femininity is achieved by touches of flesh, white and pink at the throat.

On blouses tailored to simplicity the tuck-in style is rarely seen. Sports blouses use scarfs to add a note of color to a costume. Instead of tying on the shoulder, the bow of the three-corner scarf ends in the back. Another tie for sports wear has ends like a man's tie and is similar to the oblong scarfs worn this summer. Knotted about the throat with one end passing through a loop and falling over the left sire of the blouse, it comes directly from France and is the latest chic touch to a smart sports costume.

DAINTY TOUCHES.

For formal wear, blouses of rich material may easily be matched to skirts of equally fine material, and the combination is a two-piece afternoon dress, supple enough to be worn under the dressiest coat as well as the afternoon dress itself, whose style points are almost identical.

Whether developed in nasturtium, kingfisher-blue, rich garnet or other modish hue, each luxurious dress has a touch of daintiness often expressed by fine lace or the manipulation of a light color near the face, as do blouses.

Sometimes, very often, in fact, blouses have jabots of matching material or lace or also scarfs of the same fabric. Jeweled ornaments strike a note of brilliance at the side or front where the neckline comes to a V-point. In the new boat neck, the depth of the back extends around to a point to the right shoulder.

Another characteristic of blouses that shows their direct derivation from afternoon dresses is the fitment about the hips. Blouses follow the normal waistline by having a narrow belt, in some cases. For others they are molded at the hips, slightly full above, or they are shirred at the sides to seem bloused. When the model falls straight, following the natural lines of the figure, there is usually a tie in front, swathing the hips.

COMBINATIONS.

A dull material, such as crepe, makes a good background for the luxurious shimmer of velvet and enables designers to secure effect in inexpensive frocks.

Metal cloth and brocade may add the color to lighten a dark fall frock. These materials, by the way, are rarely seen except on blouses and elaborate evening wraps, due perhaps to their lack of draping possibilities in contrast to the supple suppleness and the softness of chiffon.

"A strong wind has driven a man out to sea."

Worthy of His Hire

London Evening Standard (Ind. Cons.): It is infinitely better that men of ability and enterprise leave Westminster for the City than that they should stay on and bleat of the meagreness of material rewards or devote their energies to the increase of those rewards rather than to single-minded service of the country. We want in the House of Commons a number of diverse types in politics who will continue to be interested, trained to the political life, and dedicate themselves wholly and fully—to politics entirely, but to the Houses and the Government by these is to give each a very stiffening bureaucracy.
