The Young Folks.

A MODERN DRINKING SONG.

Fill high your bowl with Fossil Oil!
With Tannin let your cups be crowned!
If Strychnia gives relief to toil,
Let Strychnia's generous juice abound
With Oil of Vitriol cool your brains
Or, animated atoms twee—
And fill your arteries, hearts and veins,
With glee—and Infusorial Glue!

Ah-h-h! fragrant fume of Kreosote!
Bewitching bowl of Prussian Blue!
Who would not cool his parching throat
With your bright offspring, Mountain Dew?
Stronger than aught that wrecked the fame
Or shook the mighty brain of Burns!
Surely, you'll set our heads aflame
Where'er his festal day returns!

Bring on the beer! Fresh Copperas foam,
With Alum mixed in powder fine!
How could my foolish fancy roam
In search of whiter froth than thine?
Thine Indian berry's essence, spread
Through amber wavelets, sparkling clear,
Benumbs dull care, strikes feeling dead
And dazzotizes shame and fear!

Far down thy bubbling depths, Champ'agne,
Drown'd Honor, Love and Beauty lie;
They fought th' unequal fight in vain,
Shall we, then, merely drink and die?
Sweet Acetate of Lead fortid!
To ev'ry drink add pangs, and tell
What tortures in they bosom hid
Anticipate the stings of hell! ...

Then drink, boys! Drink! We never can Drink younger—and we never will
Be men—or aught resembling man—
While poisoners have the power to kill!
Amen! From Frenzy's screech of mirth,
To maudlin Sorrow's drunken flow,
Let's rave through scenes unmatched on earth
And not to be surpass'd below!

—George Sennott.

HOW PATSY WON A NEW YEAR'S GIFT.

Patsy Golden, at your service. Eleven years old, with a fair, freckled face, blue eyes, a laughing mouth, and the reddest hair you ever saw. A frank, merry boy always at everybody's beck and call; I do not think, go where you may, you will find anywhere a fellow of Patsy's age who can do more 'errands, take more steps, and carry more messages in a day than little Patsy. And as for girl's work, why Patsy always helps his mother with her ironing. His mother is a laundress and takes in fine washing, besides working for the great hotel on the square by the fountain; and Patsy carries home the clothes, and boils the tea-kettle, and rocks the baby, and takes father's dinner to the molding shop—does everything in fact, except go to school, which he is just wild to do. "But it is of no use to think of that," his mother says: "Patsy cannot be spared."

At least, that was what she said last week, and the week before, and the week before that, Patsy, on his part, did the best he could. He devoured his Sunday-school library book; he wrote copies on pieces of smooth brown wrapping paper—the hotel guests often sending parcels beautifully tied up, which came in nicely for the purpose, and father set copies in a good round hand. Patsy learned also to do many things which boys seldom learn, but which will be of use to him when he shall grow up; for no useful knowledge about the right way to do things ever comes amiss. And, as he could not go to school, he resolved to be as contented at home as possible. Perhaps his mother would consent to his going to evening school in the future.

But three days ago something happened, and that's why I am writing this story; for I know you will be as glad as I that Patsy has his chance.

The Goldens live near the railroad, and their little house is between the track and the entrance to a deserted coal mine, which has long been a favorite playground for children far and near. One day a number of workmen, with trucks and horses, pickaxes and spades, appeared on the scene, and began operations. Patsy's father, when he came home at night, said that the debris, or rubbish around the mine, was to be cleared away, that the place was to be filled up and put in order. He warned Patsy to keep out of the neighborhood as much as he could. There would be blasting, and boys were always in the way where they could not be of use.

Patsy obeyed, and though his eyes wandered often in the direction of the busy men, his feet kept at home, and he persuaded his little friends to play elsewhere. But when there was to be a blast, for the life of him he could not help the eager interest. The watching while the men prepared the rock, and laid the slow-match, and then the breathless moment when everybody was warned away, the still waiting, the explosion, and all the air dark for one instant with flying fragments! Patsy was not sorry to be at home from school in these days. I am afraid he preferred it while so much was going on.

One night when the family were in bed, Mr. Golden suddenly awakened Patsy. "Get up son," he said; "hurry on some clothes, and come to Aunt Sally's. Mother and baby are there."

"Is the house on fire?" exclaimed practical Patsy, wide awake in a second, and ready for and emergency.

"Worse, I'm afraid," said his father. "I fear it's going to cave in. Them men have been that careless with their blasting, they're cut the ground from under us, and I fear we'll have no house by morning. Hurry, Patsy, my man."

Away they went to Aunt Sally's in the black, black night. Not a star peeped through the thick blanket of clouds; the wind blew cold and shrill, and it felt as though snow were in the air.

Patsy enjoyed it, though. I almost believe it felt like what some people call a "lark" to be hurried out of bed in the middle of the night, and go off down the road with father, tramp, tramp, tugging to keep up with the man's long stride, and holding the big hard hand. I don't know when Patsy has held his father's hand before; but it was a great comfort to be small enough to do it now.

Arrived at Aunt Sally's they found the mother wrapped in a thick shawl, sitting by the fire, too much excited to sleep. Patsy decided that he would sit up with her, while father, wearied with his day's work, threw himself on an old lounge, and was presently snoring. Mother and son, both blue-eyed, red-haired, and wiry, were too much alike, and too busy in wondering what would become of them if the house should tumble down, to think of so commonplace a thing as sleep. But at last Patsy's eyes grew heavy. The lids shut fast over them, and he was in the land of dreams.

Several hours passed swiftly. Early in the morning, his father laid his hand on his shoulder.

"Come Patsy, my man," he said. "We'll go and take a look."

Take a look they did. There had been, as Mr. Golden feared, a cave in of the earth, and there was a great yawning hole near their house, but the old house stood firm.

"God be praised!" said Patsy's father, baring his gray head. "I'll go back for mother; and you, Patsy, make the fire and get her a cup of tea. It's the hard night she's had!"

Patsy, flourishing the key, for, in all his panic the night before, Mr. Golden had remembered to lock the door and secure the key—ran home, feeling more like a man than ever. The old cat, sitting puzzled on the doorstep, rubbed herself against the little legs, and purred in the friendliest fashion, by way of welcome. She blinked approvingly when she saw Patsy take the pail from the shelf behind the closet door. That proceeding she understood as part of the usual routine in the preparation of breakfast.

Patsy, running on with the pail, stood horror-stricken; for clear across the railroad track, breaking the even lines of the ties, there stretched a deep, dark chasm. Young as he was, he knew perfectly what that meant. There was no train due until 8 o'clock, however, and there would be time to warn the railroad people at the station. Father would know what to do. Like all boys, Patsy felt unbounded confidence in father.

But hark! Surely that is the whistle of a train. That low rumble, growing into a rattle, can be nothing else. The little fellow strains his eyes, makes out a black speck in the distance, knows it for a freight train, rushing fast to destruction, unless he, Patsy Golden, can stop it in time.

Run, Patsy, run, as if your feet were wings! Run as you never run before; around yonder, curve, if you can, and then wave pail, hat, jacket, and scream with all might! God grant you may save them yet! On, in front of the engine, my boy! It was a brave thing—a quick-witted, ready thing—for a little man only 11. But Patsy did it.

The engineer saw him just in time, and the train slowed up and paused. With faces pale through grime soot, the brakemen and the crew of laborers on the way to a distant station, crowded around the child, who at the peril of his life and limb, had faced the locomotive thundering along and saved them from death.

The company heard of it, and the day before New Year's the postman brought a broad official letter, sealed with a broad red seal, and in it was a check which made Patsy's mother feel very rich. In it, too were words of gratitude which made Patsy's father very proud.

It was more money, indeed than the Goldens had ever had in their hands at one time before; so much that now Patsy will be sent to school, and he will have his chances with the rest.

At least, that is what his mother says. But I prefer to believe that there is no such thing as chance; that God arranges every part of our lives, and that nothing comes to any one of us by accident. Patsy behaved with pluck and promptness, and did the duty that was before him without flinching. And God had given him an opportunity.

Surgeon Gen't W. A. Hammond says we can each prolong our life if we learn the secret thereof. WHAT IS THIS SECRET? If you soak a sponge in oil, the sponge will have in it all the peculiarities of the blood. If the kidneys, the only blood purifiers, do not clean the blood of the waste of the system, then the various organs will give out and you will have Rheumatism, Malaria, Headaches, Ague, Chills and Fever, Impotency, Bladder Disease, Lame Back, Neuralgia, Nervousness, Bad Eyes, Stomach Troubles, Boils, Carbuncles, Abscess, Apoplexy, Paralysis, and in women Female Troubles. The secret of good health then lies in keeping the kidneys well. If you don't, you can't cure any of the above diseases. They may not suspect it, but eight persons out of every ten have some form of kidney derangement. The only scientific blood purifier is the famous WARNER'S SAFE CURE, which not only cures kidney kidney diseases, but the majority of ailments which really come from unsuspected kidney disease.

In Brief And to the Point.

Dyspepsia is dreadful. Disordered live misery. Indigestion is a foe to no good nature.

The human digestive apparatus is one of the most complicated and wonderful things in existence. It is easily put out of order.

Greasy food, tough food, sloppy food, bad cookery, mental worry, late hours, irregular habits, and many other things which ought not to be have made the American people a nation of dyspeptics.

But Green's August Flower has done a wonderful work in reforming this sad business and making the American people so healthy that they can enjoy their meals and be happy.

Remember:—No happiness without health. But Green's August Flower brings health and happiness to the dyspeptic. Ask your druggist for a bottle. Seventy-five cents.

Astonishing Success.

It is the duty of every person who has used Boschee's German Syrup to let its wonderful qualities be known to their friends in curing Consumption, severe Coughs, Croup, Asthma, Pneumonia, and in fact all throat and lung diseases. No person can use it without immediate relief. Three doses will relieve any case, and we consider it the duty of all Druggists to recommend it to the poor, dying consumptive, at least to try one bottle, as 60,000 dozen bottles were sold last year, and no one case where fairly was reported. Such a medicine as the German Syrup cannot be too widely known. Ask your druggist about it. Sample bottles to try, sold at ten cents. Regular size, 75 cents. Sold by all Druggists and Dealers, in the United States and Canada.

Dangerous Counterfeits.

Counterfeits are always dangerous, more so that they always closely imitate the original in appearance and name. The remarkable success achieved by Nasal Balm as a positive cure for Catarrh and Cold in the Head has induced unprincipled parties to imitate it. The public are cautioned not to be deceived by nostrums imitating Nasal Balm in name and appearance, bearing such names as Nasal Cream, Nasal Balsam, etc. Ask for Nasal Balm and do not take imitations dealers may urge upon you. For sale by all druggists or sent post-paid on receipt of price (50c and $1) by addressing Fulford & Co., Brockville, Ont.

Get The Best.

Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry is the best, most prompt and safest cure for Colera Morbus, Dysentery, sick Stomach, Cramps, Colic, Diarrhœa and Cholera Infantum, that has yet been discovered. Its popularity increases each year. All medicine dealers sell it.

Messrs. Parker and Liard, of Hillsdale, write:—"Our Mr. Liard having occasion to visit Scotland, and knowing the excellent qualities of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, concluded to take some with him, and the result has been very astonishing. We may say that in several instances it has effected cures when ailments had been pronounced incurable by eminent practitioners.

A Valuable Discovery.

F. P. Tanner, of Neebing, Ont., says he has not only found B. B. B. a sure cure for Dyspepsia but he has also found it to be the best medicine for regulating and invigorating the system that he has ever taken. B. B. B. is the great system regulator.

Out of Sorts.—Symptoms, Headache, loss of appetite, furred tongue, and general indisposition. These symptoms, if neglected, develope into acute disease. It is a trite saying that an "ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," and a little attention at this point may save months of sickness and large doctor's bills. For this complaint take from two to three of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills on going to bed, and one or two for three nights in succession, and a cure will be effected.

Don't allow a cold in the head to slowly and surely run into catarrh, when you can be cured for 25c. by using Dr. Chase's Catarrh Cure. A few applications cure incipient catarrh; 1 to 2 boxes cures ordinary catarrh; 2 to 5 boxes is guaranteed to cure chronic catarrh. Try it. Only 25c. and cure cure.

Best of All

Cough medicines, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is in greater demand than ever. No preparation for Throat and Lung Troubles is so prompt in its effects, so agreeable to the taste, and so widely known, as this. It is the family medicine in thousands of households.

"I have suffered for years from a bronchial trouble that, whenever I take cold or am exposed to inclement weather, shows itself by a very annoying tickling sensation in the throat and by difficulty in breathing. I have tried a great many remedies, but none does so well as Ayer's Cherry Pectoral which always gives prompt relief in returns of my old complaint."—Ernest A. Hepler, Inspector of Public Roads, Parish Terre Bonne, La.

"I consider Ayer's Cherry Pectoral a most important remedy

For Home Use.

I have tested its curative power, in my family, many times during the past thirty years, and have never known it to fail. It will relieve the most serious affections of the throat and lungs, whether in children or adults."—Mrs. E. G. Edgerly, Council Bluffs, Iowa.

"Twenty years ago I was troubled with a disease of the lungs. Doctors afforded me no relief and considered my case hopeless. I then began to use Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and, before I had finished one bottle, found relief. I continued to take this medicine until a cure was effected. I believe that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral saved my life."—Samuel Griggs, Waukegan, Ill.

"Six years ago I contracted a severe cold, which settled on my lungs and soon developed all the alarming symptoms of Consumption. I had a cough, night sweats, bleeding of the lungs, pains in chest and sides, and was so prostrated as to be confined to my bed most of the time. After trying various prescriptions, without benefit, my physician finally determined to give me Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I took it, and the effect was magical. I seemed to rally from the first dose of this medicine, and, after using only three bottles, am as well and sound as ever."—Rodney Johnson, Springfield, Ill.

MANHOOD

How Lost. How Restored.

Just published, a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the Radical Cure of Spermatorrhœa or Seminal Weakness, Impotency, Nervous Debility, Premature Decay, and all diseases of a private nature, impairing the mind and body, which unfit the victim for business, study, social intercourse and marriage.

The celebrated author, in this admirable essay, clearly demonstrates from a thirty years' successful practice that the alarming consequences of early error may be radically cured. Pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

This lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

Sent under seal, in a plain envelope, to any address, on receipt of four cents, or two 2c. stamps.
