Fires in Dundalk

Fire destroyed the new woollen mills in Dundalk on Friday morning. It was about four o'clock when the blaze was first noticed by residents in that locality and it was too far advanced to check with the meagre fire fighting apparatus of the village. The fire appears to have started in the boiler room at the back and Mr. Heimbecker, the owner, states that he is unable to account at all for the origin of it. The building was a solid brick structure erected just last season replacing the premises burned about a year ago. The new building was larger than the old one and much more valuable, with a good equipment of machinery all connected up with the hydro power and light. The village was interested directly in the industry, having carried a bylaw last year after the burning of the old mill granting a loan of $10,000 to assist Mr. Heimbecker in rebuilding. The loan is on a first mortgage on the property and covered by insurance. The firm have some other insurance but we are not informed of the amount. They have no plans as to the future as yet but they express a doubt as to rebuilding. The closing of the business would be a distinct loss to the village.

Fire starting from an unknown cause on Sunday night about eleven o'clock destroyed a frame stable situated on a lane at the rear of the old livery barn and adjoining the brick stable of the Grand Central Hotel. Fortunately it was a very calm night and the fire fighters were able to confine the blaze to the one building. It was a part of the livery property and owned by Wm. Sprott the drover. There was no insurance on the building —Herald.
