The Young Folks.

FIRST OF JULY RECORD.

1 was a wide-awake little boy
When rosy at the break of day;

2 were the minutes he took to dress.
Then he was off and away

3 were his steps when he cleared the stairs,
Although they were steep and high,

4 was the hour at which he rose,
Because it was First of July

5 were his pennies which went to buy
A package of crackers red,

6 were the matches which touched them off,
And then he was lost in bed

7 big plasters he had to wear
To cure his fractures sore;

8 were the visits the doctor made
Before he was whole once more.

9 were the glorious days he spent
In sorrow and pain, but then

0 are the seconds he'll stop to think
Before he does it again.

BLOOD IS THICKER THAN WATER

Pontiac Bigtow in Harper's Weekly.

Once upon a time, while guest on board a big English battleship, some officers of the wardroom sought to tease me in regard to relative merit of American and English sailors in certain naval engagements of which I had a sadly hazy idea. I was slowly gathering steam for a patriotic explosion, when one of my British sailor friends turned the tables in my favor by this little jerky speech:

"That may all be true, but I was at the bombardment of Alexandria, and we were in a bad fix, and all the warships of other countries drew off and left us to fry in our own fat, and then the Americans came and helped us. They landed their men; they kept order in Alexandria; they acted contrary to orders; but then they said that blood is thicker than water."

At this the whole wardroom burst into a cheer, and nothing more was heard of Chesapeake and Shannon yarns.

Then another weather-beaten marine barnacle told his little story. "I shall never say a word against Yankees," he said, in a voice like a muffled fog-horn. "When that hurricane struck Samoa, our ship just managed to steam out of the harbor and escape total wreck. As we steamed anxiously and very slowly through the howling wind and blinding sea we could make out the Americans in the rigging of the Trenton—and they were all in the presence of death. But they didn't think of that. They gave us three cheers, and it made the hearts of our men jump up and chok them when they heard those cheers. And it made me feel at last that blood is thicker than water."

DIDN'T WORK BOTH WAYS.

"And you will always be pleasant and loving?" he said tenderly.

"Oh, yes; always, Harold," she replied.

"And where things go wrong at the office and I am cross and out of temper, you will be sweet and kind to me?"

"Yes, Harold.

"And when I am tired out with my day's work and you know a man is always a little cross and disagreeable when he is tired out and worried—you'll be loving and sympathic?"

"Yes. But Harold, don't I get a chance to be cross sometimes?"

"You?"

"Yes. Can't I get tired and irritable once in a while? That's no more than fair, you know. I don't want to be an angel right away."

He withdrew his arms, and—well, that's when the engagement was broken. The rule didn't work both ways.

INFANT WISDOM

A young man, just home from college, wishing to inspire his little sister with awe for his learning, pointed to a star, and said

"Do you see that bright little luminary? Its bigger than the whole world."

"No, 'taint," said she.

"Yes, it is," replied the young collegian.

"Then why don't it keep off the rain?" was the triumphant rejoinder.

A little fellow of five years fell and cut his upper lip so badly that a doctor had to be summoned to sew up the wound. In her distress the mother could not refrain from saying

"Oh! doctor, I fear it will leave a disfiguring scar."

Tommy looked up into her tearful face and said.

"Never mind, mamma, my moustache will cover it."

THE U. S. CIVIL WAR

In 1866 the United States provost marshal general reported that 61,362 men on the Union side had been killed in battle, 34,727 had died of their wounds, 183,287 had died of disease, total deaths, 279,376, total desertions, 199,105. A partial statement on the Confedgrate side declared that 133,821 men had died in battle of wounds or disease and 104,428 had deserted. During the war the Union troops captured 476,169 Confederate prisoners, the Confederates captured 212,608 Union men. Of the latter, 29,725 died in Confederate prisons, while 26,774 Confederates died in confinement.
