The Mt. Forest dry belt had a narrow escape from tragedy last week, and some of the thirsty souls over there got a jolt that they will remember for some time. The Canadian Oilfields, Limited, imported a quantity of nitro glycerine, and on the trip by auto had to remain in Mt. Forest over night. For safety the high explosive was stored in a field outside the town. Some of the lynx eyed sufferers from enforced prohibition got their optics on the shipment and decided that it was a case of rum running, and in the darkness of night approached the cache with a view of doing a little running on their own account. They investigated all right, and in the morning the ground showed evidences of a hasty retreat, with hoof marks deeply indenting the soil about every four yards apart. The explosive didn't explode, but the conveyors who went for their goods in the morning did.

An automobilly who had his car in a local garage one day last week found he could not start it and got the mechanics busy helping him. The mechanism was examined all round but no reason for its balking could be found. Half a dozen men who stood around twisted themselves blue and out of breath on the crank, but the dog gonned thing wouldn't budge. Then after working for two full hours over it someone suggested that perhaps there was no gasoline in the tank. It is useless to attempt a description of what happened when the truth of this suggestion was made manifest. The curtain drops right here.

Suckers have been biting freely around here recently—the human species. A slick gent registered at the Munshaw House a couple of weeks ago as A. R. Ryan, Ottawa, and announced himself as agent for Toronto papers, and several magazines which he sold below the agent's price. We have heard of a number who bit voraciously at this bait and are now dangling from the end of Ryan's line. After running a hotel bill of over twenty dollars Ryan departed without farewell or liquidation of his debt. What's the use of morrlizing over the depravity of human nature! Doesn't the Bible say "The poor suckers ye have always with you?" We have them, anyhow, and probably will until the end of time. But fishermen like Ryan get their deserts in the long run, too, and a warrant is now ready for this crook's arrest when he is run to earth.
