The Young Folks.

YOU'LL HAVE TO AVOID THE SALOON.

You stand on the threshold of youth, boys
Your future lies out in the years,
You're learning your parts for life's work, boys,
You're planning your future careers,
You'll have to fill places of trust, boys,
Your fathers will pass away soon;
And if you'd be trustworthy men, boys,
You'll have to avoid the saloon.

If you would be honored in life, boys,
If joy and contentment you'd know,
If you would have plenty of cash, boys,
And bask in prosperity's glow,
If you would enjoy robust health, boys,
That priceless but much abused boon,
If God's benediction you'd have, boys,
You'll have to avoid the saloon.

You'll have to avoid the saloon, boys,
Or sorrow and shame you will share,
And poverty's crust you will eat, boys,
And poverty's rags you will wear
Your future will end in disgrace, boys,
Your life be cut off at its noon,
Both body and soul will be lost, boys,
Unless you avoid the saloon

MULES IN THE MINES.

It is a common affair for mules to be imprisoned for years in the limitless night of the mines. Our acquaintance, "China," had been four years buried Upon the surface there had been the march of the seasons, the white splendor of snows had changed again and again to the glories of green springs. Four times had the earth been ablaze with the decorations of brilliant autumns. But China and his friends had remained in those dungeons, from which daylight, if one could get a view up a shaft, would appear a tiny circle, a silver star aglow in a sable sky

Usually when brought to the surface, these animals tremble at the earth, radiant in the sunshine. Later they go almost mad with fantastic joy The full splendor of the heavens, the grass, the trees, the breezes break upon them suddenly. They caper and career with extravagant mulish glee. Once a miner told me of a mule that had spent some delirious months upon the surface after years of labor in the mines. Finally the time came when he was to be taken back into the depths. They attempted to take him through a tunnel in a hill side. But the memory of a black existence was upon him; he knew that gaping mouth that threatened to swallow him. He had all the strength of mind for which his race is famous. No cudgellings could induce him. The men held conventions and discussed plans to budge that mule. The celebrated quality of obstinacy in him won liberty to gambol clumsily about on the surface.

After being long in the mines, the mules are apt to duck and dodge at the glare of lamps, but some of them have been known to have piteous fears of being left in dead darkness. They seem then, somehow, like little children. We met a boy once who said that sometimes the only way he could get his resolute team to move was to run ahead of them with the light. Afraid of the darkness they would trot hurriedly after him, and so take the train of heavy cars to a desired place.

TAUGHT BY EXPERIENCE

A little ginger put into sausage meat improves the flavor

In icing cakes it is better to dip the knife frequently in cold water.

Tumblers that have had milk in them should not be put in hot water.

If your coal fire is low throw on a handful of salt and it will brighten it very much.

A spoonful of stewed tomatoes put in the gravy of either roasted or fried meats is an improvement.

Broil steak without salting Salt draws the juices in cooking, and it is desireable to keep these in if possible.

To clean oil cloths use milk and water and wipe with a flannel cloth A brush and soap will ruin them.

You can get a drop or a barrelful of oil off any carpet or woollen stuff by applying dry buckwheat plentifully and faithfully. Never put water to such a grease spot, or liquid of any kind.

TWO OF A KIND.

He was the son of a worthy Manchester citizen, and had just returned from college. His father was a brusque, matter of fact man, who had no liking for anything pronounced, and he noticed with sorrow that his son returned with the latest thing in collars, and various other insignia of a dukedom. The old gentleman surveyed him critically when he appeared in his office, and then blurted out, "Young man, you look like an idiot."

Just at that moment, and before the young man had time to make a fitting reply, a friend walked in.

"Why, hello, Billy, have you returned", he asked. "Dear me, how much you resemble your father"

"So he has been telling me" replied Billy.

And from that day to this the old gentleman has had no fault to find with his son

THE EIFFEL TOWER DISSECTED

The total weight of the ironwork in the Eiffel tower is 7,767 tons and the foundations of each of its four independent legs are sunk to a depth of fifty feet. It is constructed of iron throughout (most people think it is steel), the pieces of the metal used in its construction being 112,000. The exact height of the great iron skeleton is 984 feet (usually given as even 1,000), and it is to be the property of the builder for twenty years, beginning with 1889, after which the sole ownership reverts to the city of Paris.

The orders and decorations of Prince Bismark, if worn three deep, would cover the breast of a man six feet across the shoulders. The ex chancellor is said to possess more of those honors than any other man in Europe

The tallest policeman in the United Kingdom is Constable Daly, one of the members of the Royal Irish Constabulary He is 6 feet 8¼ inches in height Among members of the same force, Sergeant Moffett, of Ballyshannon, stands 6 feet 5½ inches.
