An Osprey young man was up before the magistrate here one evening last week, charged with transgression of the liquor law by having swamp whiskey in his possession and in an illegal place. The case was adjourned for a week after the accused had written down the name and address of the party from whom he claimed to have purchased the stuff. The name created some amusement among the officers conducting the case as it was the name of a well known official connected with the case, although the owner of the written cognomen lived in or near Orangeville.

Some of the workmen on the County road have a rich joke chalked up against them. The piece where they have recently been working at Hargrave's hil has been particularly bad and many cars have had to be pulled out by the road gang. The other day a Ford car got stuck there and was pulled out as usual by one of the teamsters. The owner of the car was profuse in his thanks. The teamster said that was all right, but there was a charge of one dollar for the accommodation. The car owner wanted to know by what authority he charged a dollar. Not getting a satisfactory explanation he informed the teamster that he was Mr. Johnston, the superintendent of construction. The joke was on the teamster, all right, but if Superintendent Johnston had been a good sport he would have paid the dollar before explaining his identity.
