PRICEVILLE

We had about four inches of snow during last week that made nice winter roads, especially for light work, and numerous cars were in use also, but rain commenced to fall on Friday night and continued for 24 hours, and early on Sunday morning snow flurries, driven by high winds, made it very unpleasant all day Sunday.

Some of our local readers say, We know all about the weather without reading it in our local paper. Yes, you do, but many readers of this paper, from Manitoba to the Pacific coast and down to California, like to compare weather notes with Ontario, both summer and winter.

The C P R is distributing several car loads of ties along this branch line that have been dipped in creosote. They will be put in small piles and sanded on order to prevent fires by cinders, etc. The ties will be used in the summer of 1923.

Master Leonard McArthur, a public school scholar, has been laid up with bronchitis during last week.

The S S scholars and others are anticipating a good time at the anniversary on the evening of Dec 22.

Would the boys and girls find any amusement these evenings with the following conundrum: Why should a spider make a good correspondent? We may tell you something in the near future about a spider and a printer.

Church Union For Orangeville District

Orangeville, Dec. 14—Cooperation between the Methodist and Presbyterian churches was the principal subject discussed at meetings of the Orangeville Presbytery and Orangeville Methodist District, held here yesterday afternoon. A committee representing the two bodies and the Mount Forest district of the Methodist church as well, presented a report recommending the formation of seven groups, three to be assigned to the care of the Methodist and four to the Presbyterian church. The report also recommended that Singhampton Pres. church be exchanged for Badjeros Meth. church. The suggested grouping affects eleven Methodist and twelve Presbyterian congregations, most of which are now receiving assistance from the augmentation funds of the two churches. The report was adopted by the two bodies, and will now go to the affected congregations for their consideration and decision.

More promising indications have developed at the Canadian Oil Fields No. 2 well at Shelburne. Last Saturday the well was reported down to a depth of 2,632 feet, drilling in hard cap with heavy showing of oil. The drillers reported having struck heavy gas at 2,600 feet. The sands taken from the well last Wednesday at a depth of 2,626 feet have 56.8 per cent. amber oil of encouraging quality.
