Insurance Is Good, But—

Insurance will, in a measure, repay you for loss from fire due to lightning.

But it will not prevent the fire.

It takes the DODD System of Lightning Protection to do that.

In the past thirty years over 300,000 buildings have been rodded by the DODD System and in not a single instance is there a record of the DODD System properly installed, having failed to prevent damage by lightning.

The fact that you haven't yet suffered loss by lightning only means that you are fortunate, not that you are proof against it. Ask us today what it will cost you to have DODD protection.

Ontario's Pheasant Farm

From the Toronto Star

At Eugenia Falls in the county of Grey the provincial hydro develops power and wires it to towns over a wide area. In diverting the water of the falls a dam was built and a lake created, and in the lake is an island of about 75 acres. The lake has been made a trout preserve and the island and certain farms around the lake have been made a game preserve. It is proposed to progagate fish and game for distribution, so that the supply may be replenished in different parts of the province.

For unknown reasons there has not been sufficient local publicity about this undertaking at Eugenia. Last year men are said to have been fined for shooting on a public game preserve the boundaries of which were not known locally, and these bourdaries only became publicly defined through the imposition of fines.

This year the Flesherton Advance saw loads of lumber being hauled past its doors on the way to the hydro pond at Eugenia, and on enquiry learned that the material was to be used in building houses for pheasants, which were to be hatched and raised on the island in the pond. Next came a shipment of red deer—it is to be a deer park as well as a pheasant farm. For about two months The Advance has been asking editorially for information from the authorities as to whether this ambitious game preserve was a hydro enterprise or one sponsored and paid for by the fish and game department of the Ontario government. The Advance at list has learned that it is the government that is carrying on the enterprise through the fish and game officials.

The apparent reticence of the authorities in making the facts known has been aggravating to local opinion. As a rule a locality is not averse to haying public expenditures made within its borders, and elected representatives have often been expected to bring home to their constituencies what they can from the public pork barrel. One might expect, too, that Grey county, which has sent the first woman member to the federal parliament, would rather fancy being a rich source of supply of pheasants, red deer and trout fry for inferior and less favored parts of the province. But it is not so—not yet, at least. Their poignant feeling is that they have lost their trout fishing and duck shooting to strangers, and they do not see that they are going to get anything in exchange. To tell the truth, the raising of pheasants at Eugenia is locally regarded as a jest—a costly fad that will come to nothing. They may be wrong in this, and the fish and game officials may know what they are doing. For the sake of the reputation of the farmers' government in a farming community it is to be hoped that they do. In the meantime the local humorists are busy. They suggest that the island in the Hydro pond is specially suited for the propagation of groundhogs, and the improvement of their fur and meat. "Pheasants," says the Flesherton Advance, "will never be acclimatized here. Even quail, a hardier bird, will not live and propagate." The elaborate quarters prepared for the birds are being watched as they arise and their cost estimated by shrewd observers who know a good deal about birds, henneries, speckled trout and politics.

Hog Tight Fences

(National Crop Improvement Service.)

"A hog naturally is as clean as a dog or horse. While he loves to wallow when flies are bad and conditions are against him, he also loves to be clean and will bathe in clean water the same as any other animal," says Mr. R. S. Rider, president, Canadian Steel & Wire Co.

"Any farmer who is in the hog business, knows that it does not pay to be chambermaid to a hog any more than absolutely necessary and that a hog in order to be healthy, should harvest his own crops.

"So whether pasture of rape or corn is to be utilized, the foundational necessity is a fence which will hold the hog where you put him and not allow him to do damage to other crops.

"In every rotation the field should be so fenced that the hogs can do all of the harvesting possible.

"The cafeteria system of hog feeding is the most profitable and 'hogging down fields' is the most economical way to harvest."

Raising Rhubarb.

The easiest way to start a rhubarb bed is to buy roots, and if they are too large, to split in sections with a spade, being sure that each section has a bud in it. These are then planted three feet apart in the row with the bud just below the surface of the ground. The ground should be in good condition before planting. This is best done in the spring. If the plant grows well this first summer, we may make a few small pullings the second season, but not before. The third season you can pull as often as required as long as you do not completely strip the plant. The plants should be well manured each fall with well-rotted manure, and in the spring this is worked into the soil. If the roots, after a few years, begin to throw up many seed stalks, they should be lifted, split in sections and replanted.

An elderley man ramed Wm. Wright was run down by the C. P. R. train on the outskirts of Hanover one night last week and almost instantly killed. The deceased was quite deaf.
