A warrant is out for a farmer, named Chas. Thompson, of 6th con. Culross, near Kinloss, charging him with abducting a 17 year old girl named Jessie Struthers and constables are scouring the country for the missing pair. Thompson is 36 years old and has a wife and nine children, the youngest only four days old. He lives on a rented farm. It is rumored that Thompson has headed for Winnipeg

The first conviction in this district under the new law which forbids transportation of liquor on the highway was registered on Monday, when Mr. Albert Boehmer of Kitchener was fined $200 and costs by Magistrate McNab for taking liquor to his summer cottage at Southampton. It appears that Boehmer had motor trouble near Dunblane. A bunch of farmers gathered and spying the booze, telephoned to Paisley and as a result information was laid in court by License Inspector White.—Telescope

Rod And Gun

"Men of the Hudson Bay Company," is the title of a new continued feature which starts in the July issue of Rod and Gun in Canada. It is by N.M.W.J. McKenzie, a man who spent many years in the service af the company, and who, by reason of his long term of service, is able to present a narrative of absorbing interest, full of reminiscences of the days and the events of the North of bygone days. It will be continued in future issues of the magazine, and it is certain to prove an intensely popular feature. There is a fish story entitled "Shooting fish," which is told in humorous vein, by that well known writer, Maximilian Foster. H. Mortimer Batten, whose work has became very popular with Rod and Gun readers, is at his best in "fire-point," a thrilling tale. Then there are other features and articles which are well up to the standard. The departments are of generous size and high quality, and altogether the July number is one of the best ever published.

Rod and Gun in Canada is published monthly at Woodstock, Ontario, by W.J. Taylor, Limited.

In the course of a few minutes' talk with John Joynt, M.P.P., North Huron, we asked him what excuses the members of the Legislature really had for wanting the six hundred dollars bonus. "Well" said he, "they seemed to think they had earned $2,000.00;" but he laughed at the idea. Only four others along with Mr. Joynt voted against the grab. They are: Lethbridge and Brown, both from Middlesex; Nickle, from Kingston, and Ross, from Oxford.—Lucknow Sentinel.

Residents generally will regret to learn that the little Miller girl, whom we reported last week as having been buried under a cave-in along the river bank in Bentinck, is now lying in Owen Sound Hospital with a broken back and in a serious condition. The little patient was taken to Owen Sound last week and had an X-ray examination, which disclosed the serious nature of her injuries —Durham Chronicle.

An Incorrect Statement

Ottawa, June 20th, 1922.

Dear Editor,—I read with amazement in the Durham Review: "She (myself) and some of the Progressives did not want to vote at all on the Budget, but a law compels every member to vote unless paired and her vote went against the Budget."

That statement is absolutely untrue. I never looked forward with as great pleasure to the casting of any vote.

The Budget made some slight reductions in the tariff, but increased the sales tax fifty per cent It entirely failed to live up to the Liberal platform of 1919, which, by the way, was largely a copy of ours. When questioned by Progressives as to whether next year further reductions would be made, the government gave skilful evasions. Then came Sir Lomer Gouin's speech of high protection without any apology, and Mr. Fielding's declaration that he never did believe in the tariff planks of the Liberal platform of 1919.

Our amendment was thrown out, so that only left Sir Henry Drayton's amendment, which recited much of the Liberal platform; said the Liberals had failed to put their platform into law, and concluded with these words: "That the making of such solemn pledges, the utilization of them to secure support, and their flagrant violation after the attainment of office, reveal a disregard of political honor and tend to lower the standard of political life."

The Conservatives were evidently not sincere in their scolding of the government, because the Budget was such as they would have brought down, but their amendment contained the truth.

The two votes were separate and distinct, first came the vote on the amendment, when nine or ten of us did not vote until our vote was challenged, and then I voted for the amendment because it contained the truth, and I could not vote against it, although I believed its movers to be insincere. Then came the Budget, and with great pleasure I voted against it. Of what use would it be to talk against high tariff in a campaign and then vote for it when elected?

Yours Sincerely,

—AGNES C. McPHAIL.

Escapes Without A Scratch

Stubbing his toe while playing on the roof of Allgra Mansions, Melbourne Ave., Toronto, six year old Jack Haxton fell headlong from the roof. He turned a complete somersault in his 35-foot descent, landed "sitting down" on the roof of a small play shack and went on through to the ground. then he scrambled to his feet, blinked his eyes a bit, got rid of a "chew" of gum he had been interested in, and went on romping at hide-and seek with his playmates, just as if the stunt was an every-day occurrence.

But Jack, nor Jimmy, his elder bro., didn't tell mother about it, because she hadn't been well and they didn't want to worry her, and mother in bathing the youngster that night didn't even see a bruise or a scratch to ask embarassing questions about. His playmates, however, couldn't keep the secret.

"I felt just like an airplane, mother," was Jack's simple statement when the story came out. His only serious thought came latter and unexpectedly, when he was saying his prayers. These completed, he turned to his mother and said: "I guess I should thank God for saving me, mother."

Jack is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Haxton. In his fall he missed a high board fence which separates the side entrance to the apartments and the adjacent yard.
