A PROMISE FULFILLED

Miss McPhail has handed back $1500 of sessional indemnity, including $30 government tax, and has only accepted $2500 of a sessional indemnity, as she promised before election. There were many who prophesied that the promise would not be fulfilled. However, it may be that the act was only by way of protest, and that in future sessions she will accept the full indemnity. She is now "convinced that $2500 is not enough for a man who divotes himself to serving his country," and no doubt she considers her services as valuable as those of any mere male member.

A FORGOTTEN COUNSEL

The women of today have evidently forgotten the teaching of St. Paul to the Corinthians: "If a woman have long hair it is a glory to her, for her hair is given her for a covering."

Meaford In Retrospect

We enjoyed a short visit to the pretty town of Meaford one day last week after a lapse of about forty years. In our boyhood days it was our home market town and it was very interesting to note some of the changes that have taken place, and their name is legion, the most noteworthy being a couple of miles of pavement which the government has assisted in building. In those distant days the Grand Trunk entered the town up on the hill in what is now known as Kent. It now comes in near the wharf. The Big Head river still flows, with apparently as great a volume of water as ever, and the old familiar fisherman still fishes from its shore with as much success as forty years ago, as the one we saw had captured a nice twelve inch bass. The old gristmill, built and run by Jesse Purdy and his four sons -Seymour, Henry, Delbert and Edwin—still stands and looks outwardly exactly as it did in days of yore. And the artesian spring not far from the mill still produces its ice cold water. A beautiful (in our boyish eyes) frame house owned and occupied by Nathaniel Hadley, an uncle of the writer, has completely disappeared and memory was saddened by its disappearance. We missed it, remembering the good times we used to enjoy within its walls as a boy. The family has also all been called away, with the exception of one daughter, Mrs. W. O. Robinson of Dakota. A woollen mill near the present fine cement bridge has also given way to the more modern innovation, a garage. Hugh Watt of the Monitor was our editor in those days and published our first scribblings. He, too, has passed to join the vast majority, and is replaced by Mr. Patterson of the Mirror and Mr. Secord of the Express.

There is a spot on the river, a bend above the lower dam, where the parents of our fellow townsmen, Mr, W. P. Crossley, were both drowned over fifty years ago. An uncle of the writer, a cousin and Grandmother Anna Purdy of revered memory are resting in the Meaford cemetery.

The above things will explain a certnin sentimental incerest that we have always maintained in the pretty lakeside town, where are many homes and gardens, clean streets and cheerful, optimistic residents, notwithstanding a tax rate of something like 52 mills on the dollar. The sweet briar, blooming wild in the shrubbery, is one of our early remembrances, and its pink blossoms still exhibit their chaste, sweetly perfumed beauty. Mullet in spring, strawberries in summer, and energetic ex-Warden Sing all the time, are some of Meaford's chief productions, but along with these might also be mentioned local electric energy that compares favorably with Hydro, the Georgian Bay flouring mills and Seaman Kent wood workinu mills.

Long may Meaford flourish! We only regret that time was too limited to look up some of the other old landmarks.

pride of —ownership

Now-a-days a man wants, in a low priced car, more than four wheels and an engine and a place to sit.

He wants something to be proud of. He wants handsome appearance, high class finish, comfortable seats, easy riding springs and up-to-date equipment.

And he wants all these things to be included in the first cost—not to be classed as extras.
