MARRIED

SHIELDS-MADDAUGH—At the Parsonage, Lowville, on Wednesday, April 28, 1920, by Rev. Thos. Snowdon, Robert K. Shields, of Lowville, to Miss Pearl I. Maddaugh, of Strabane.

DIED

McISAAC—At 1 Birch Avenue, Hamilton, on Tuesday, May 4, 1920, Alex. McIsaac, eldest son of the late John McIsaac, in his 63rd year.

IN MEMORIAM

CREAMER—In affectionate memory of Pte. Fred Creamer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Creamer, who died at Camp in New Jersey, on May 13, 1919, in his 24th year.

One precious to our hearts has gone,
A voice we loved is stilled;
The place made vacant in our home
Can never more be filled.
Our Father in His wisdom called
The boon his love had given;
And, though in earth the body lies,
The soul is safe in Heaven.

"I believe in the sacredness of the human body, this transient dwelling place of a living soul, and so I deem it the duty of every man and woman to keep his or her body beautiful through right thinking and right living."

BE CONSIDERATE

In talking with others do not usurp all the conversation. Learn the art of listening with attention and interest. Be considerate. Show sympathy with the sorrowing and burdened, and rejoice with those who are happy. If others are uninteresting in their conversation, school yourself in the art of patience; if they tell old jokes, show appreciation and laugh with them. If you would have people considerate of you, you must in like manner be considerate of them.—Selected.

The members of the Burlington Fire Brigade wish to thank the merchants who so kindly made up the donations of $57.50, in recognition of services rendered at the recent fire.

CAMPBELLVILLE

The Campbellville Choral Club gave a very successful play in the Armories on Friday evening, May 7, and were greeted by a full house.

The play presented for the occasion was Arthur Penn's successful "Yokohama Maid," a Japanese comic operetta in two acts, with the following cast: Takasi, H. T. Collins; Muvon Yu, C. A. Elsley; Ah No, J. R. Mitchell; Patiddo, C. C. McHall; Knogudi, A. Elliott; Harry Colleano, E. S. Byerman; O Hing a Song, D. H. Kaiser; Kissimoo, L. J. Revell; Tung-Ivaga, T. Elliott; Hilda and Stella, J. Elliott and Mrs. J. K. Mahon, with a chorus of nodding dolls, men and maidens, all becomingly gowned in Japanese costumes.

The central figures were Della H. Kaiser, who added much to her former popularity by her excellent characterization as O Hing a Song, without a trace of exaggeration or affectation; her companion Kissimoo (L. J. Revell) and her faithful old nurse Tung-Ivaga (G. Elliott) scored many humorous hits and handled their parts with skill. Colin McHall as Patiddo the Mayor of Kytosho and the willing but rejected wooer of O Hing a Song played his part with animation and technical finish, while E. S. Byerman (Harry Colleano) as O Hing a Song's American husband won a huge success. H. T. Collins (Takasi) in his wonderful gown of black and gold made a prepossessing herald and sang in his usual high class manner. A. Elliott (Knogudi) the humble-hearted secretary of Patiddo made love with fear and trembling to O Hing a Song but found his affections vested with Kissimoo. Hilda and Stella, the nodding dolls, Muvon Yu and Ah No played the remaining rolls with credit.

Mrs. Lloyd Crawford's brilliant accompanying and the magnificent stage setting added greatly to the general effectiveness.

MUSKRAT FARMING

The rising prices for muskrat fur have aroused considerable interest as to the feasibility of breeding this animal in captivity. Though prices may have reached the peak, it is altogether likely that this fur will command an attractive figure for many years to come. The farming of muskrats sought, therefore, to be a profitable business.

Present experience goes to show that the muskrat is not a difficult animal to raise. It is necessary to own or lease a stretch of suitable marsh, lake or quiet stream, which one could fence, if necessary. If there are already muskrats in the area, all they need is protection; if not, breeding stock must be bought from trappers. The rate of increase is fast; observers state that the muskrat brings forth three litters in a season, and from six to nine in a litter.

Clear water is preferable and it must be deep enough never to freeze to the bottom. The food consists mostly of the roots and stalks of aquatic plants such as wild rice, flags, water-lilies, reed and cat-tails. Muskrats will sometimes partake of clams, fish and insects. If the food supply is not sufficient they can be fed garden vegetables.

The muskrat appears to be somewhat like the cat in sticking closely to its home, and so long as there is an adequate amount of food, is unlikely to migrate. Its principal natural enemies are the owl, hawk and mink.

In Maryland, which is a great centre for raising muskrats, the marshes often yield a better income per acre than adjoining cultivated land. One raiser is said to take 2,500 muskrats each year from a 50-acre marsh and yet leave enough for re-stocking.

Even as long ago as 1909, when skins were very cheap, the leasing of marshes was profitable, and the value of muskrat marshes was estimated by an American expert at $40 an acre. As this fur has quintupled in price it is a fair assumption that these lands are worth at least $200 per acre to-day.
