WHAT YOUTH IS

I must confess that I have arrived at the time of life when I do not like to be asked how old I am. What in the dickens does the number of years matter?

Many of us old-staggers are really as young as the lads in the Air Force. At least, that's the way we feel.

Youth is not a time of life. It is a state of mind. It is determined by how you think and how you feel.

Recently, I met a young man of twenty-eight who was full of fears. His brain had become static. He seemed to be vaccinated against new ideas. I am twice his age, but I contend that I am younger than he is.

A few gray hairs don't matter. A few wrinkles don't matter, especially if they are around the eyes, and not around the mouth.

The main thing is not to have wrinkles on your brain,

Nor your heart,

Nor your soul.

As long as a man keeps going and jumps out of bed every morning with a smile, he is young.

Christ's sheep hear his voice, but he never shouts at them.

Optimism is nine-tenths of success in life.

EDEN MILLS

On Wednesday, April 16, the Women's Institute met at Mrs. J. Marshall's home, when the executive of the branch favored all present with a good programme and afternoon tea. With the President in charge, the usual business proceedings were discussed and disposed of. Samples of materials were inspected for furnishing the Town Hall curtain. After the choice was made, the committee was left in charge. Mrs. Richards, District President, gave some good points on future interests of Institute work. Roles by members were enjoyed. The subject of "Dress," was brought forward, with suggestions that the women of our Institutes refuse to adhere to the unsightly and unsanitary mode of dress the designers of Paris would impose on us. They noted the fact that the dress of gentlemen continues much the same, while the ladies' fashions are continually changing. After some discussion the ladies expressed their preference of the present mode, in moderation, rather than the past, or proposed long skirt. The meeting closed, after which the executive treated the ladies to a tea, which won much praise.

At the proper time Mr. Herbert Black, chairman of the evening, called on Mr. Moore and Miss Lauretta to come forward. Mr. Elias McLean read the following address:

Dear Mr. Moore and Miss Lauretta:

It was with sincere regret that we learned at an early date of your intended removal from our neighborhood. For many years you have proved to us what good neighbors you are. To the social life of our community you have always cheerfully rendered your assistance, and we remember with pleasure the happy gatherings that have taken place in your home. In the hope that we could make this a night by which you could remember your friends here, we have gathered in a social way, and take this opportunity of presenting to you a token of remembrance.

When you sit down in your easy chair, with the light shining over your shoulder, don't forget to turn to the "Crewsons Corner News" and see how we are all progressing. Best wishes for good luck and happy times in your new home.

HOW THEY RODE

The invention of new words is the special privilege of great geniuses and small children.

An exchange mentions a little girl who had been used to seeing only men on horseback. One day several young women from the city rode out where she lived, and stopped directly in front of the house. Mary stood at the gate looking at them then, as they rode on, she ran into the house.

"Oh mamma," she said, "if they can ride sideways, I guess I'll get a horse and ride myself!"
