YOU CAN CURE CATARRH.

J. H. TAYLOR, 54 BOND ST., TORONTO, BREATHED HYOMEI AND CURED A LONG-STANDING CASE OF CHRONIC CATARRH THAT DEFIED ALL OTHER REMEDIES, ALSO TORONTO AND NEW YORK SPECIALISTS.

Without taking a drop of medicine into the stomach, J. H. Taylor, 54 Bond Street, Toronto, tells how the distressing troubles of Catarrh were overcome by simply inhaling Hyomei air. It's the history of tens of thousands similar cases on record, proving that Hyomei can be depended upon to cure Catarrh, Bronchitis, Coughs, Colds and Croup. It has no equal for any distress of the breathing organs.

Mr. Taylor says: "Some years ago while on a hunting trip in Northern Canada, I contracted a severe cold that settled in my head and finally affected my throat. It rapidly developed into catarrh, and caused a miserable throat weakness. My head would become clogged during the night and there was a catarrhal dropping from the nose into the throat. Many days I had been unable to breathe other than through my mouth and the constant hawking and spitting was almost unbearable. I had been treated by the best throat specialists here and in New York, but nothing benefitted my condition. I obtained Hyomei and soon found relief, the throat dropping ceased and my head began to clear. I continued with Hyomei for six weeks and after that I was well in every detail. There has been no return of the trouble since, and I feel grateful in speaking well of of Hyomei, as it cured me when all else failed."

Synopsis of Canadian North-West HOMESTEAD REGULATIONS

ANY even numbered section of Dominion Lands in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, excepting 8 and 26, not reserved, may be homesteaded by any person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over eighteen years of age, to the extent of one quarter section of 160 acres, more or less.

Application for entry must be made in person by the applicant at a Dominion Land Agency or Sub-agency for the district in which the land is situate. Entry by proxy may, however, be made at any Agency on certain conditions by the father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of an intending homesteader.

The homesteader is required to perform the homestead duties under one of the following plans:

1 At least six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each year for three years.

2 A homesteader may, if he so desires, perform the required residence duties by living on farming land owned solely by him, and less than eighty acres in extent, in the vicinity of his homestead. Joint ownership in land will not meet this requirement.

3 If the father (or mother, if the father is deceased) of a homesteader has permanent residence on farming land owned solely by him, not less than eighty acres in extent, in the vicinity of the homestead, or upon a homestead entered for by him in the vicinity, such homesteader may perform his own residence duties by living with the father or mother.

4 The term "vicinity" in the two preceding paragraphs is defined as meaning not more than five miles in a direct line, exclusive of the width of road allowances crossed in the measurement.

5 A homesteader intending to perform his residence duties in accordance with the above, will find it to his advantage to live with parents or on farming land owned by himself, must notify the Agent for the district of such intention.

Six months' notice in writing should be given to the Commissioner of Dominion Lands at Ottawa, of intention to apply for patent.

Changing The Day

By Raymond Chandler

Copyrighted, 1908, by American Press Association.

Alphonse set the coffeepot close to Sheldon's hand and retired to the bar, there to indulge in a glass of beer. The dining rush was over, and he was certain that no one would come now until after the theater, so with a shrug of his shoulders he leaned on the table would surely not for just a little hour or two yield to the pleasure of spend with pretty Fred Sheldon the fair partner of whom he was so proud in the making of cocktails.

Meanwhile the two persons sipped their coffee and finished the cigars that Alphonse had brought. When he cleared away the cigar ends from the coffee box on the table and put out the lamp the young lady and Alphonse always brought a perfect Vous the waiter for the evening with an elaborately casual "Thank you, monsieur."

This was probably the happiest time with the ballet girl Sheldon had bluntly smoked fat perfectos with red and gold sashes. Tonight Alphonse's elaborate politeness was lavished by the usually genial Sheldon.

"Now for the news," he began as the waiter headed for the bar. "I couldn't wait for Saturday to tell you, though it is only two days off."

"Isn't it funny that we always fall back on Friday night?" commented Bess. "I don't know when we have been out to dinner in the middle of the week."

"Never, I guess," agreed Sheldon. "You see, Saturday is a sort of holiday. I get my salary, and you get your check from the publishers, and we're both happy and content, even if not in agreement."

"We would be in agreement if you would only stop considering a proposal as an essential feature of the Saturday celebration," regulated Bess, with a show of severity. "You must go and spoil it all by proposing. Fred, when I've told you long ago that to marry would spoil my career. I am making a little name for myself in the art world, and I can't keep house and paint too."

"And I've told you," retorted Fred, "that I would not stop asking you to marry me until you said 'Yes.' I guess I've proposed to you sixty times in the last sixty weeks, Bess, and I'm good for sixty times sixty if I have to hold out that long."

"Did you ask me out to dinner to propose to me?" demanded Bess.

"Not primarily," he admitted. "What I wanted to tell you was that my big chance has come at last. Benny Groll has made a good contract, and he needs a man to put a little money and a lot of time into the business. I have more experience than money, but Ben wants me, and he'll give me a half interest if I'll come in. It's what I've been working and waiting for ever since I came to town, Bess, and this is to celebrate my good luck."

A slender hand was stretched across the table and grasped his own.

"Dear boy, I am so glad," she said sincerely. "You have worked hard, and you are entitled to your reward."

"Which is why I am going to ask for it," retorted Sheldon. "I am going to break my usual custom and propose on Thursday instead of Saturday, Bess. I want you to work for, dear. It will be pretty hard camping out with the construction gang and working on the job with the field corps. I want to come back to camp every night and feel that I have done another good day's work for you."

"Work, like virtue, should be its own reward," pompoused Bess. Sheldon shook his head impatiently.

"I know all that," he said, "but that sounds better than it works out. I want to feel that when the job is done and Groll & Sheldon become a firm of importance Bess Sheldon is proud of what her husband has done."

"I shall always be proud of what you do, Fred," reminded Bess. "We two are the only ones from the old town in all this big city. We have always been chums, and of course I shall be proud of your great achievements."

"That's not what I want," said Fred impatiently. "Of course I am going after this chance, no matter what, and I'll work as hard without your promise as with it, but it will lend sweetness to the labor, Bess, if you tell me that I may work for you.

"Won't you take a career by proxy, dear? Do you want to work to the end of your days and live the loveless life? Aren't there times when you want to give it all up and just stop worrying about checks that the publishers do not send and canvases that don't sell, though you know that they are as good as some that bring big money? Don't you tire of your career sometimes, and don't you feel as though it would be nice to let some one else do the worrying?

"And if I do?" she asked, with an odd little note in her voice.

"Then let me carry the burden," he pleaded. "Let me do the pleasure for you. In six months from now I shall be at the top of the heap and making money, but you can make those six months of toil very pleasant, dear, if you will only listen to your heart—and me."

"I have listened to you," she reminded, with a light laugh. "Why, Freddy, there has not been a Saturday night for more than a year that you have not asked me to marry you. I'd like to hear, just there in my career."

"Does it all pay?" he demanded. "Is it worth all the worry and the controlling?"

"Perhaps," she said hesitatingly, and Sheldon pressed the advantage.

"Wouldn't it be nice if you didn't have to scrimp and scrape and plan the spending of every penny?" he demanded. "Wouldn't it be nice to have a real home instead of a three-room flat, to eat regular meals instead of chafing dish messes and to—well, to have me across the table every night instead of just Saturdays? It would be our own table, too," he reminded, "and not a table d'hote."

"Perhaps."

It was spoken so low that Sheldon had to lean across the table to catch the whispered word. But he did catch it, and his face beamed satisfaction.

"And you will marry me?" he cried delightedly.

This time he did not hear, but he knew that the coveted answer had been spoken, and he caught the hand that toyed nervously with the cup.

He spoke no word, for none was needed. Their eyes told each other messages that never have been put into words, spoke a language that only lovers know—and Sheldon was content.

It was Alphonse whose discreet but suggestive cough from the doorway leading to the main room recalled them to more earthly matters and an unpaid check. Sheldon drew a bill from his pocket and laid it upon the tray.

"Keep the change," he said, "and drink to our good fortune." Then Alphonse, helping him into his overcoat, assured his radiant customer in French and English that it should be done.

In Sensin's customers tipped half a dollar only when the worse for wine. Here was a man, to all appearances sober, who tipped 00 cents. Alphonse's thanks followed them even out upon the street, where Sheldon tucked Bess' arm into his own with a new air of proprietorship that the girl found very comforting.

"Fred," she whispered, "did you know that I was tired and depressed today?"

"I was only taking chances," he explained, with a happy laugh. "I decided to cut last night when I was almost certain that Benny would put the deal through. I figured that you always fate as I did when you had money in your pocketbook on Saturdays—and that you'd feel as I do two days before pay day. It was worth taking a chance by changing the day."

Bess patted his arm affectionately. "I wish you had found that out before," she whispered. "It is only from Saturday to Tuesday that I cared about a career."

Cards and Their History.

Cards are square shaped pieces of pasteboard printed with various devices and employed as a business medium by money changers. They are usually made up in packs of fifty-two, one for each week of the year. A good many people play cards for pleasure, in which case their opponents are said to be buying experience. In most card games the rule is that the cards may be cut, but not otherwise marked. This rule is not strictly observed in games in which only three cards are used. Indeed, the marking of cards has attained a high degree of perfection since the introduction of numerous card index systems. Fashions change in card games as in everything else. Old maid, for instance, is nowadays seldom played in the best clubs. Playing cards should not be confused with those sold on cricket grounds, which are rather larger, or with visiting cards, which are smaller.—Ivy's Magazine.

Doubtful Quality.

"I got some free advice from Dr. Closeface last night."

"How did you do it?"

"Caught him off his guard at a social gathering."

"My free advice to you would be not to take it."

Probably.

"Some people are so inquisitive."

"Yes, but they are usually stupid."

"Stupid?"

"Yes. If I were as inquisitive as you are I would know everything."

Inevitable Conclusion

"My wife is not at all fond of society."

"Oh, she does, does she?"

"Does what?"

"Her own dressmaking."
