WHERE HURONS ROAMED

TRACES OF LOST TRIBES STILL REMAIN IN CANADA.

Hundreds of Tomahawks Found in Rural Districts Are Signs of the Former Activities of Race Which Was Wiped Out by the Iroquois—Only a Few Families at Ouendats Still Remain in Quebec.

[illegible] in the physical [illegible] of the country at one time [illegible] by the Canadian Huron people is the [illegible] like the best of the foreign [illegible] since Champlain's day, probably twelve feet [illegible] to-day to realize what that means [illegible] of land now [illegible] with water. Considerable [illegible] time written over the place where the Huron capital of Ihonatiria was, gave Daniel Dunlop, writing in The Globe, [illegible] Dublin Magazine [illegible] Huron country, [illegible] Toronto, [illegible] Georgian Bay [illegible] Coach-Road [illegible] Penetanguishene, where they caught [illegible] the lifting of ash heaps, [illegible] explorers it bear Hass [illegible] Contarea [illegible] and the Jesuit [illegible] large number of [illegible] village [illegible] two hundred cabins were not long occupied. It is quite reasonable to suppose that the [illegible] of Christ on the Hurons for [illegible] attack of Sept. 1, 1649, and [illegible] them from time to time, [illegible] Ossaraque, the Hurons' capital, [illegible] more than once. These [illegible] by the Iroquois kept the Huron [illegible] in a more northerly direction, while their villages were larger, more compact, and palisaded on the south side for safety.

Orillia, however, as the "gateway" to the Huron country, lays claim to some importance, and shows evidence of immense Indian activity, and at widely different periods. Excavations in all parts of the town reveal this. It is noted as a meeting place and distributing centre for four, if not five, important trails to the Hurons and Algonquins — one passing the Oro trail used by Champlain — while many of its leading streets have Indian names, viz., Neywash, Missisauga, Matchedash, Chemong, Nottawa, Sagne, etc. Orillia is Spanish, meaning "coast or border," so named by a number of half-pay officers who fought under the Duke of Wellington in the Peninsular war, and were given tracts of land in this district.

The outstanding feature of the Huron Nation, so far as we can trace it today, was the work of the intrepid Jesuits. One of them writes that the Huron Nation "is the very stronghold of Satan, his castle and donjon keep." The stone remains of the fort and headquarters of St. Marie Mission, three miles from Midland, on the Wye River, are plainly to be seen. The going down of the level of the Georgian Bay since Champlain's visit has altered the shore line and small streams considerably, yet the main features and distances on Du Creux's map of 1640 are traceable. The Recollects ceased work in 1629. It was not until 1634 that Brebeuf, Daniel and Davost entered the Huron land (Brebeuf served in 1626 among another people). For fifteen years the tall figures of the Jesuits were familiar sights in their long, black, closely-buttoned cassocks and broad black hats turned up at the [illegible]. The Huron population was then [illegible] twenty villages, showing a compactness not in evidence before. There had also been an absorption of a smaller tribe.

On March 16, 1649, the great massacre took place. St. Ignace and St. Louis were stealthily approached by the Iroquois and burned to the ground, the inhabitants tortured and killed. The body of brave Brebeuf, the Jesuit, was burned with red-hot axes, and boiling water was poured over his head. His skull rests in the Hotel Dieu, Quebec. Lalemant was also killed by the conquering Iroquois. In all, five priests lost their lives. A fine memorial church to these martyrs is erected at Penetanguishene.) After the massacre the Huron Nation was no more. To-day a mere two dozen families of Hurons, called Wyandots (Ouendats), are in Quebec, rapidly becoming absorbed by the French population.

The sites of the final battles can almost be determined by the hundreds of tomahawks, native and French (with the three crosses on reverse side), picked up, but further investigation is necessary before arriving at conclusions. Of the century after the massacre nothing is known, but it is believed that the Ojibways, from the South and west settled on the Huron lands. After the country came under British control in 1763, travelers tell us, only Ojibways were found here; the latter could tell nothing of the people who lived there before them, nor could the wandering Algonquins. In 1816 the noted traveler, Mrs. Trollope, and later, in 1837, Mrs. Anna Jameson, traveler and authoress, in delightful sketches, gave charming accounts of this district as they found it. In 1836 Sir Francis Bond Head decided to withdraw the Indians from the white population. This was subsequently done in 1843 by a council. They had already sold much of their land. Of the three chiefs, Musquakie (Muskoka), better known as "Yellowhead," chief of the Ilama Indians, was the greatest and most popular. He fought in the war of 1812 and died in 1865, at the age of 105. He was not buried on Chief's Island, the sacred spot; his body lies in St. James' Churchyard. Orillia with his chariots and uniform wrapped in beaver skins at his feet. La Salle, Sir John Franklin and other noted travelers passed through Lake Simcoe to Georgian Bay, to Mackinaw and the west.

It isn't because the cigar is badly made that the wrapper sometimes comes uncurled. It is because the cigar is a left-handed one.

Cigarmakers must be ambidextrous. They cut the wrapper and leaf on the bias, rolling it from left to right on the filler, while the other pieces is rolled with the left hand, from right to left.

A nervous smoker, twisting and twirling his cigar, has no trouble with a right hand one, but it happens to be a left hand one it is apt to come undone.

Sizing Him Up.

When you call the average young man honest he is likely to feel a mild sort of gratification. When you call him competent, his chest begins to budge. When you call him a heart breaker he slaps you on the shoulder and gives you to understand that he considers you a person of remarkable perception and unerring judgment.

He Promised.

"I can't spare the money very well, but I'll gladly loan it to you if you promise not to keep it too long."

"I solemnly swear that I'll spend every penny of it before to-morrow

Don't Sow Winter Wheat Like A Blind Man

OPEN your eyes to the fact that there is a better way to grow winter wheat. This way is one which, by actual scientific field tests made throughout Canada, has proven that it will produce the largest amount of the best wheat to the acre.

The splendid results achieved through this method depend mostly upon the start you make. This vitally important part of the work is done at seeding time, so start NOW to learn all about this method. Our Scientific Bureau will tell you about it, free.

Progressive farmers will apply at seeding time a fertiliser containing 3% Nitrogen, 8% Phosphoric Acid and 8% POTASH—better still a 2-8-10. Such a fertiliser insures a good stand before the commencement of winter—gives the crop a greater degree of protection from the frosts—promotes a rapid and early growth in the spring, and produces a bountiful crop of high grade wheat.

But perhaps your dealer cannot furnish you with a 10% POTASH fertiliser. If he cannot, don't take a substitute, because a substitute low grade fertiliser will NOT produce the results you want. The thing to do is to get more POTASH and add to the fertiliser your dealer can give you to increase it to a 10% POTASH fertiliser. We will tell you, free, just how to do this. It is simple, easy, and pays for itself many times over.

Or you can mix your fertiliser at home, if you wish. Our Scientific Bureau will tell you all about it.

Decide now to raise the biggest and best-paying wheat crop you ever had. Why not write NOW? We can help you! Simply use the coupon attached.

LAND OF IDEAL CLIMATE.

Province of Alberta Not Cold and Bleak as Many Imagine.

Eighteen hours of sunshine, brilliant, life-giving sunshine, tempered by a delicious, cool breeze from the Pacific. That's what constitutes the longest day in Alberta, the Canadian province which lies, at latitude 55 degrees 30 minutes, far above Newfoundland, above the island of Anticosti, more than twice as far north of Montreal or Halifax, N.S., as Halifax is north of New York. It lies level with the foot of Hudson Bay and slowly to the middle of Labrador.

"But one is wrong in supposing that it must be very cold up there," writes Albert Jay Nock. "I spent a mild winter week in Edmonton, the capital, 300 miles north of the international boundary and wore the same weight of clothes that I had been wearing in this springlike climate of the coast.

"I drove in an automobile all the afternoon of the 11th of February with but a light overcoat. There was perhaps half an inch of snow, and the wind was light and warm. The railways do not keep any snow plows at Edmonton and the houses are not even fitted with double windows.

"Marvelous influence of the Pacific winds and currents! Two hundred miles north and west in the Peace river country and in a broad belt lying across Alberta north of the Lesser Slave the climate is milder than at Edmonton. The mountains are lower and admit the ocean air unchilled.

"The isothermal lines published on the Government maps are an interesting study. Edmonton and the whole region northwest to Fort Simpson average 250 days in the year when the thermometer is above the freezing point.

"Summer nights in Edmonton give only about two hours and a half of actual darkness. One can easily read fine print by daylight at 10.30. Ball games begin at 7.30. Canadians call this province 'Sunny Alberta,' and they are right. Summer or winter, a cloud in the sky is rare enough to attract attention."

Dancing and Oratory.

There is a certain member of the present House of Commons—for obvious reasons he shall be nameless—who is a good deal of a gay Lothario. You see him, day after day, perched up in the Speaker's Gallery beside some fair one, his head gallantly bent, his whole attitude one of respectful admiration and devotion.

Among his other accomplishments, and the one he holds in highest regard, is that of dancing. He has a lofty reputation for this, and practices it on every possible occasion—incidentally, he does it very, very well.

Now, once upon a time there was a big dance in Ottawa, one of those gorgeous affairs that are fairly common in an official centre like Canada's capital. Member X was invited, and had a fine time. It so happened that several newspaper correspondents were there, too, and one of them heard a lot about X's ability in the Terpsichorean line. Copy was scarce, he made a little story about it, and next day forgot the whole thing. Chance so directed things that the next day X had to make a speech about something or other. It was rather a good speech, and the papers gave him plenty of space. When this happens it sometimes happens that the man who gets the notice buys a number of copies of the paper to be sure he thinks has treated his speech in the best way. X bought papers all right, he bought one hundred copies of the paper which had printed the little eulogy of his dancing. Here's the best part of it though, he ordered one hundred copies of the issue containing the description of his dancing, not the one that told about his speech. It wasn't any mistake either. He was ten times as proud of that little story about the hit he made on the floor as he was about the big one on his success on the floor of the House.

Funny people in the world.

A Tour of Inspection.

The Dominion Department of Mines has made a curious discovery in regard to the Canadian market for non-metallic mineral products. In a report by Howell Prechette, it is stated that Canadian industries import large quantity of many non-metallic mineral, raw or partly manufactured, while the greater part of Canadian production of these is exported. The Department proposes to send Mr. Prechette on a tour of discovery in Canadian manufacturing districts, to learn what minerals are used. Certain points in the United States will also be visited with the object of studying the manner in which Canadian minerals are treated before they are shipped back to Canada for use in manufactures.

Big Demand for Aitken.

Mr. W. M. Aitken, the young Canadian elected to the British House of Commons as a Unionist in December, has been at home in Montreal for the last few days. He has been trying to catch up with business under difficulties. He has been entertained at dinner every night, and at most of the repasts speech-making has been a feature. In the daytime he has seen a continual stream of callers, which developed such dimensions that he was obliged to forsake his office and practically barricade himself in his rooms at the Windsor. There was seldom an opportunity to see one man at a time. In order to dispose of his callers he had to see them in groups of three and fours.

A Unique Record.

A. M. Cunningham recently completed a twenty-five year record as a photographer in Hamilton. Within that time he has made more than 75,000 photographic negatives, which he now has in his possession, and which include likenesses of the present King and Queen, as well as a great number of other royal personages and other notables.

Enjoy Their Quarrels.

"So you've been married twenty-five years?"

"That's right."

"And never had a quarrel, I suppose?"

"Not so. We've had many a quarrel."

"Not serious ones?"

"Yes; serious ones."

"And yet you've been happy?"

"Sure. It makes my wife happy to get the best of me so often, and I'm tickled to death if I win one argument out of ten."

A Curious Illness.

"Yes," said the good woman who was describing the last illness of a friend, "she was taken suddenly sick with pantomime poisoning, and four doctors came to the house and insulted about her and diagramed her case very closely. They decided that she had eaten some fish or something that had paragraphs in it, and so they gave her a hypocritical injection of a serial that would destroy the bacilles, but she didn't seem to help any, and she soon was in a state of chromo."

AILING WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

Mrs. Doucette Tells of her Distressing Symptoms During Change of Life and How She Found Relief.

Belleville, Nova Scotia, Can.—"Three years ago I was suffering badly with what the doctors called Change of Life. I was so bad that I had to stay in bed. Some friends told me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it helped me from the first. It is the only medicine I took that did help me and I recommend it. You don't know how thankful and grateful I am. I give you permission to publish what your good medicine has done for me."—Mrs. Mary Doucette, Belleville, Yarmouth Co., Nova Scotia, Canada.

Such warning symptoms as sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, backache, dread of impending evil, timidity, nervousness, sleeplessness, irritability, weakness and despondency, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness and languidness, and dizziness, are promptly heeded by intelligent women who are approaching the period in life when woman's great change may be expected.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound invigorates and strengthens the female organism and builds up the weakened nervous system. It has carried many women safely through this crisis.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.
