IT is well that good provision is being made for the care of returned soldiers who have been wounded at the battle front. They are coming back in considerable numbers and the Government does well in giving them every attention. This is another of the many things that emphasize the fact that Canada is really at war.

THE RESIGNATION of Sir Sam Hughes as Minister of Militia removes a strong man from the public life of Canada. Whatever may be said of the mistakes he has made it must be admitted that, in the essential things, he measured up to the occasion, and that among the men at the head of affairs in this Dominion, he had the clearest conception of what the war meant and of what it demanded of the Canadian people.

IT is fortunate for Canada that the Maritime Provinces and some sections of Western Canada had good crops of potatoes. These are regarded as an almost essential article of diet, and it is because there have been good crops somewhere that we are not paying more than $2.50 a bag for them. The slowness of transportation is, of course, a real drawback to their proper delivery, and helps also to make their cost a hardship. Bumper crops of all the necessary commodities in 1917 will help Great Britain to hurry victory to a conclusion.

ACTION is being taken by the British Government to conserve the food supply owing to the pressing necessities of the war. Germany took this action early in the war to her great advantage. The Chairman of the British Board of Trade has made the statement that there has been great waste in cereals grown for hogs and imported for the production of beer. This waste it is proposed to stop by act of Parliament. In order the war may be prosecuted with the greatest possible vigor, waste upon all lines must be reduced to a minimum in all the allied countries and production must be increased to the highest possible limit.

A TIME WILL come when enlightened farmers will realize that the farm household is the source of all energy, enterprise and intelligence that makes farming a success and life on the farm possible. It is the indefatigable farmer's wife that makes the farm home; altogether too often she makes it a real home in spite of her husband rather than as a result of his co-operation with her. He, to his shame be it said, too often has by far a greater appreciation for hogs, cattle, grain and hay and their proper housing and care than the equipment and environment he makes practicable the proper care and rearing of his own children. Yet he will complain that the young people will not stay on the farm—American Lumberman

TO THE RISING GENERATION must we look for many changes and improvements in our municipal conditions.

The children of the present, under the influence of a broadminded teacher, will absorb lessons which will later be an enormous influence for good. A recognition of this fact, and of the great dependence placed upon them should be in the mind of everyone entrusted with the upbuilding of youth. The extent to which this power to influence children for good is recognized may be gleaned from the number of appeals made to the school teachers for assistance. Every interest working for the betterment of Canada and Canadians lays stress upon the necessity of securing the recognition and support of the children.

To this already long list has been added a call for the influence of school teachers in the keeping of streets free from litter. To a large extent the children are responsible for this. Waste paper, chewing gum and candy wrappers are thrown on streets and sidewalks regardless of the untidiness they cause. This litter is carried by the wind, and, blowing about the streets, frightens horses, causing many runaways and sometimes serious accidents. Waste paper also collects in sheltered places, falls through grates into basement windows, or accumulates against a wooden building or fences; a lighted match or cigar stub carelessly thrown aside may fall upon this accumulation of litter and cause a fire. All fires are the same size at the start, and it is the apparently small and harmless fire which sometimes causes the greatest loss both of property and lives.

The school teachers have it in their power to inculcate in their pupils a spirit of pride in the appearance of the streets, and great benefits will accrue from this effort on their part.

The 164th Battalion's Thanks

The Commanding Officer, through Reeve Fleck, expresses appreciation to Georgetown's citizens.

Reeve Fleck received on Monday the following letter from the headquarters of the 164th Batt. in Hamilton:

Wentworth Barracks,
Hamilton, Ont.

Dear Mr. Fleck,

Will you please accept for yourself and convey to the people of Georgetown the appreciation of myself, Officers, N.C.O.'s and men of the 164th Battalion for the kindness shown us on our recent visit to your town.

The excellent arrangements for the quartering of all ranks, coupled with the sumptuous repast provided for us on our arrival there, was all that could be desired.

I assure you we were more than grateful for all that you did for us, and left feeling that we were leaving behind us many new found friends.

I would particularly ask you to convey to the ladies our appreciation of their work on our behalf.

Again thanking you, believe me,

Yours sincerely,

Percy Domville, Lieut.-Col.
Officer Commanding 164th Battalion, C.E.F.

Military.

The 164th Batt. is now comfortably settled in their winter quarters at Hamilton. This is one of the best Battalions in the province as was pronounced by a high official at Camp Borden before their trek to Hamilton. It is commanded by an efficient staff of Officers, and Lt.-Col. Percy Domville, who has himself won the esteem and respect of his men by his manly bearing and just and honorable treatment of those under him, is justly proud of his assistant, a number of whom are Georgetown boys. Any young man who has a desire to do his bit for King and Country could not couple up with a better aggregation than the 164th Batt. Some 300 more men are yet required to bring the Batt. up to full strength, and we believe this number will readily and promptly respond to the call.

Corp. H. E. Hiatts, son of the publisher of the Dufferin Post, Orangeville, has been missing since Oct. 8th. He was born at Streetsville and enlisted at Saskatoon. He had been eighteen months in the trenches. A brother, Lieut. C. V. Hiatts, is at the front and another, Corp Ernest Hiatts, is in the 164th.

David Hutcheon, County Treasurer, received a letter last week from his son, Pte. R. S. Hutcheon, C.M.R., who is a prisoner in Germany. He was well and acknowledged the receipt of parcels mailed to him.

Carey Warren of Toronto, formerly of Georgetown, is taking a course in the Royal Horse Artillery at Kingston.

LETTER OF CONDOLENCE

Mrs King received the following letter:

France, Oct. 21, 1916

Dear Mrs King,

It is with deepest regret that we pen these few lines of sympathy to you in this your sad bereavement caused by the death of your son Percy.

The sad news came to us as a great shock, as we were under the impression that the wound was only slight.

Percy was a gentleman, a man of moral habits, and a true soldier, he is greatly missed by his associates.

No one but men have sacrificed homes and loved ones and gone to a foreign country in order to protect those who cannot protect themselves.

It seems that the highest reward obtainable by a soldier is a "dead hero" even that in its self is a noble deed, it is victory.

The sad news was keenly felt by us, for we had often talked of when we got back home, but now we will be forced to return (if spared) and leave our best comrade behind.

Again expressing our deepest sympathy to you and family.

Signed on behalf of the Georgetown boys now serving with the 58th Batt.

Sincerely,
Wm. Brent
Fred McCartney
Harry Lewis.

Disabled Canadian Soldiers

What is being done to restore their Ability

The Military Hospitals Commission at Ottawa informs us that 2,081 soldiers were under its care at the beginning of this month. Of these, 126 were at Sanatoria for tuberculosis, and 1,616 at Convalescent hospitals, 339 of the latter being out-patients—while 30 members of the force were in asylums for the insane. Of the 126 cases of tuberculosis, it may be added, almost exactly half were discovered in time to prevent them leaving Canada for the seat of war.

According to a statement prepared by the Militia Department, up to October 8, 1916, the number of soldiers sent back to Canada on account of medical unfitness was 7,008. Of these, 901 were suffering from wounds, shell-shock, or the effects of gas; 122 were insane; 345 were afflicted with tuberculosis, while the remainder, 5,640, were suffering from other diseases and disabilities.

All Canadians ought to know what is being done by the Military Hospitals Commission, acting on behalf of the whole body of citizens, for the restoration of their wounded defenders to a position of self-support and independence.

Every disabled soldier is medically examined on arriving at Quebec. If he is no longer in need of hospital treatment, he is sent home free of expense and discharged with a pension or gratuity according to the extent of his disability.

If he needs further treatment, he is taken to the hospital or sanatorium where the treatment most suitable to his case is available, and, if possible, to the institution nearest his home. Men who cannot resume their former work on discharge from hospital are advised and enabled to take special training for new occupations. This is provided free of cost; and while the men are being trained the Dominion Government maintains them and their families.

Men needing artificial limbs are taken to Toronto, where these limbs are made and supplied without charge. Men with serious nerve disorders are treated specially in the Ontario Military Hospital at Cobourg.

Each Provincial Government has appointed a Commission to help discharged men in securing steady and remunerative work. The Dominion Government, and other authorities and employers, systematically give preference to returned soldiers when filling vacant positions.

The public can and should co-operate heartily in this urgently necessary work, by encouraging the men to take fullest advantage of the curative and educational opportunities given them, and afterwards by seeing that they get work. Local committees have been formed for this purpose in many towns, but much more has to be in this done way.

The treatment, most carefully carried out in accordance with the latest discoveries and the proved results of medical experience, includes many forms of strengthening exercises, often requiring special and costly apparatus; the scientific use of electricity, massage, and occupational baths for affected limbs; with wise dieting and fresh air as a matter of course.

Occupation is often as necessary and beneficial as rest itself, in invigorating and strengthening effect on body and mind. Classes are therefore held at the hospitals, for instruction and practice in many arts and industries, such as carpentry and wood-carving, metal and leather work, typewriting and book-keeping, mechanical drawing and elementary engineering, gardening, bee-keeping and poultry-raising.

These all help to increase the capacity of the patients, and to lessen the effect of any injury they have received, by getting them into practice for such labour as they can profitably undertake. The medical and educational officers are first to discover what each man is most likely to succeed at, and then to fit him for it as thoroughly as possible.

It has been wisely decided that no man shall forfeit any part of his pension on account of his industry and enterprise in improving his own financial position.

Let our readers write without hesitation to the Secretary of the Military Hospitals Commission at Ottawa, or to the Provincial Commission at the Provincial capital, asking any further information they may desire, or giving practical suggestions resulting from thought or experience.

PENALTY OF A RIME.

Cousin Collingborne Paid For His Taunt at Richard III.

Did you ever hear of a spring poet who came to his death because of a rime? Doubtless many spring poets have merited the same fate, but in our day justice tarries and the world suffers in silence.

It was not thus when Richard III., last of the Plantagenets, ruled England. In the main the people who did his errands with the Duke of Gloucester were wise enough to keep their opinions to themselves, but William Collingborne thought to stretch poetic license to make it cover an attack on his majesty at a time when the murder of the two princes in the Tower ought to have taught prudence.

The king was under the sway of a beautiful and clever woman, Mrs Lovell, who was tactight to dictate much of his policy, which was popularly bad. Now, Collingborne had to course to the fact that the wolf dog was called a "lovel," and so he popped the famous rime, "The rat, the cat and lovel, our dog, rule all England under the hog." As a result, England was decidedly "on the hog."

Did the rime escape the eagle eye of Gloucester? Well, if it did it was not overlooked by the lady. That was a year before the famous battle of Bosworth, when the Earl of Richmond came to the rescue of his suffering people. Richard had put down Buckingham's rebellion, and all the traitors had paid the price with their heads, so another head more or less did not matter. Collingborne was summoned into court, given a perfunctory trial and sent to the block. However, there is no evidence that he was punished for writing atrocious poetry.

SAVING OLD MANUSCRIPTS.

How Valuable Papers Are Mended and Mounted For Preserving.

There are not fifty persons in the United States who are skilled in the preservation and repairing of old manuscripts. One of them, says the University of Wisconsin Bulletin, may be found working on the third floor of the Wisconsin Historical library building at Madison, one of the six or seven institutions in the country that carry on such work scientifically.

About a generation or two ago a priest in the Vatican library at Rome originated and developed the process now in use in the taking care of old papers.

The first thing done in the process of preserving the letters is to place them between wet newspapers under a weight and leave them for five or six hours. This removes the creases and the dirt. Thereafter are put between wood pulp boards and left twenty-four hours and then between blotters to complete the drying process. The next step is to repair the paper.

The paper of some of these letters is so old when received that it falls to pieces if struck. This is strengthened by a layer of a sort of transparent cloth, on both sides of the piece of paper. Other letters need mending along the edges with parchment paper. To cover holes a piece of paper is glued over the edges and is left larger than the hole until dry. It is then cut down to the proper size, and the edges are sandpapered until smooth. After all such repairs are made the letters are mounted on large white sheets and prepared for binding.

Bear Baiting.

In the time of Shakespeare theaters were often used for bear baiting as well as for the presentation of plays and in some cases were equipped with a stage which could be removed when the bear baiting was to occur. The contemporary attitude toward this diversion is seen in this quotation: "It was a sport very pleasant to see the bear with his pink eyes leering after his enemies' approach." It is comforting to reflect in these days that the killing of animals, at least as a form of public amusement, has greatly diminished and in most countries has disappeared.—Outlook.

What Impressed Her.

Shortly after Will Crooks, the labor leader, was elected to parliament, says an English weekly, he took his little daughter to Westminster. She was evidently awed at the splendors round her and maintained a profound and wondering silence all the time. Mr. Crooks was delighted to see her so much impressed.

"Well," said he to her at last, "what are you thinking so deeply about, dear?"

"I was thinking, daddy," answered the little girl, "that you're a big man in our kitchen, but you aren't very much here."

Changed Meaning.

One of the best examples of how to end letters incorrectly is that of a soldier who wrote home to his wife the following sentence without a single stop or comma:

"May heaven cherish and keep you from yours affectionately John Don."

Difference of Opinion.

"I have nothing to live for," said slowpay at table.

"Well, you'll find out soon that you can't live here for nothing," snapped his landlady.

Prison Uplift.

Visitor—But whatever induced you to take up safe cracking for a living?

"Oh, I dunno, lady! I guess I had a natural gift for it."—Life.

Loving kindness is greater than laws, and the charities of life are more than all ceremonies.—Talmud.

Marriage and Mathematics.

"Yes," said the old mathematician, with a gleam in his eye, "I've always looked at it that way. Marriage is addition, when the little ones come it's multiplication, when dissension comes up to cloud the horizon of their happiness it's division, and when the final parting comes it's subtraction."

"And how about divorce?" asked the listener.

"Oh, that would come under the denomination of fractions."

Nervous Apprehension.

"They are not going to cut me up if I go to the hospital, are they?"

"Of course not when you're going just for a rest. What makes you think they are?"

"Because when I called up the hospital a voice said, 'Operator.'"

A Soft Answer.

The wife of a man who came home late insisted upon a reason.

"When I go out without you," he said, "I do not enjoy myself half as much, and it takes me twice as long."
