Terra-Cotta.

(Too late for last issue)

The box social, under the auspices of the Union Jack Terra Cotta Red Cross Society on Friday evening, was a decided success. Although the evening was not very promising there was a fairly good turnout. Mr. R. Patch filled the position as chairman to the fullest capacity, in a very able manner. A good program was given by the following:—Patriotic speech by Mr. R. Patch, which was much enjoyed; a rousing speech by Mr. H. Campbell of Erin; songs by Miss Nellie McClintock, Rockville; song, "Tipperary," by Miss Norma Thompson, Nellie Sand with Alice Davidson; Shelling Peas, Mrs. Norwood, Georgetown; "Falling on the old Camp ground," by Miss Sadie Jackson; all N. Thompson; recitation (very) Mother Hubbard, Master Austin Carter; patriotic songs by Mrs. F. C. Thompson; speech by Mr. H. Lyons. Mr. Sidney was the leading auctioneer of the evening. Master Mr. Roy, very ably performed the duties of doorkeeper. Mr. Patch disposed of the dainty boxes. They brought good prices. Over $54 was taken in for the boxes. Another pleasing feature was the reading of an address to the president, Mrs. Fred Thompson, by Miss M. Hunter and E. McDonald. A sum of $8.40 collected by the teacher and children of No. 8 school, Chingucousy, in aid of Red Cross was handed to the president. After all had enjoyed the contents of the various boxes the crowd dispersed, a few of the young people remained for a while and tripped the light fantastic. The net proceeds of the evening amounted to over $62.

Pte. J. L. Kelsey made a brief call in our hamlet recently, prior to his departure to France.

Mr. J. W. Jones is making good progress with his new house.

ANCIENT TOBACCO.

Tibetans Are Said to Have Used the Weed 2200 Years Ago.

It is generally supposed that tobacco was unknown in the old world until after the discovery of America. But there is excellent evidence that it was known and used in Tibet as early as 877 B. C. In a note to an article in the Geographical Bulletin Dr. Berthold Laufer of the Field Museum of Natural History, Chicago, writes as follows:

"Among the many curiosities of the Tibetan-English dictionary, published in 1902 by Sarat Chandra Das, the well known Bengali student of Tibetan and explorer of Tibet, we read that the evil drug tobacco (in Tibetan tha-ma-khu) appeared in ancient time about 100 years after the death of Buddha, which would yield the date 377 B. C., and that mention is made of tobacco also in the writings of a lama who is dated in the twelfth century A. D.

"In 1908, I enjoyed the privilege of spending several months in Lassa, the home of Das, in Darjeeling, and when one evening in the course of a learned conversation with him I ventured to draw his attention to this chronological anomaly and the post Columbian introduction of tobacco into Europe and Asia he replied: 'This is your tradition, and that pointing to the passage in his dictionary) is our tradition, and our traditions certainly are as good as yours!'"

THE HOUSE WREN.

A Good Little Friend That Should Be Protected From Sparrows.

A little friend worth having is the wren. During its working hours it will pry into nooks and crannies about the garden and orchard, picking up grasshoppers, spiders, beetles, thousand legged worms—anything which isn't too big for it to carry off. When it is through work it will perch on the front porch of its little home, lift its head and sing a warbling little song that will delight your heart.

It is called the house wren because it prefers a little box house for its home. A generation ago it built a nest in holes in trees, in hollow fence rails or even in an old hat. Then came the sparrow, and the wren's nest was raided.

Since then the wren's only refuge is in a nest which has a door too small to admit its enemy, the sparrow. If you want the wren to spend a summer with you build a home with a door not more than an inch in diameter. This will bar the sparrow and give the smaller bird easy entry.

Years of continuous fighting against the sparrows has given the wren a temper like a spoiled child. It ruffles its feathers at the slightest interruption. When it has its own way, with a good home and plenty to eat, it is as cheerful as a Sunday school picnic.

Power of Words.

"For me," writes Lafcadio Hearn in the "Japanese Letters of Lafcadio Hearn," "words have color, form, character. They have faces, ports, manners, gesticulations; they have moods, humors, eccentricities; they have tints, tones, personalities."

A good instance of this power appears in a description of Patti's singing: "There was a great dim pressure, a sliding heat, a whispering of silks, a weight of toilet perfumes. Then came an awful hush. All the silks stopped whispering. And then suddenly sweetened out through that dead, hot air a clear, cool, tense thread gust of melody unlike any sound I ever heard before save—in tropical nights—from the throat of a mocking bird. It was 'Auld Lang Syne' only, but with never a tremolo or trill or a warble, audacious simplicity of utterance."

When Baronets Were Sold.

It was in the reign of good King James that baronets first came into existence. Today you could hardly tell a baronet from a banker. But in the year 1611, when James I. needed ready money and created 200 "little barons" to supply him with cash, they swaggered about in their baldrics and sashes and behaved in the courtliest of fashion. Each baronet in order to justify his title had to maintain a small army of thirty soldiers for three years. In this way the crafty king not only increased his revenue, but actually lightened his expenses.—London Telegraph.

How Amateur Mechanics Work.

"What do you do when anything goes wrong with your car?"

"I tinker with the carburetor."

"Does that remedy the difficulty?"

"It never has, but I always tinker with it anyhow in the hope that possibly that may be the cause of the trouble."

The Aftermath.

"What became of that candidate for your sister's hand?"

"He won out. And say!"

"Well?"

"He hasn't redeemed any of his numerous pledges."

No Repairs Necessary.

Stubdub—What do you do with an umbrella when it is completely worn out? Hardupp—I generally return it to the fellow I borrowed it from.—Judge.

Aids to Conversation.

"Books help a man's conversation."

"Undoubtedly. But the man who buys them seldom gets to be as good a talker as the man who sold them to him."

He is unfortunate and on the road to ruin who will not do what he can, but is ambitious to do what he cannot.—Goethe.

Optimistic.

Grubbs—I never realized until now what a thoroughly convinced optimist Binks is. Stubbs—What made you form your new estimate of him? Grubbs—The fact that he is trying to raise chickens, roses and two bull pups all on the same lot.—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

A Large Youth.

"I wish I could earn a large fortune."

"You've got the wrong idea, my boy. Fortunes aren't earned; they're saved."—Detroit Free Press.

No Safeguard.

"That fellow is as dumb as an oyster."

"Maybe he is, but even oysters, dumb as they are, find it hard to keep out of a stew."—Baltimore American.

Macaroni.

The word "macaroni" is taken from a Greek derivation, which means "the blessed dead," in allusion to the ancient custom of eating of foods for the dead.

"DO YOU FOLLOW ME?"

You See the Point, of Course, if You Get the Idea.

No person who values his self respect and who doesn't want to be lied to will ever say "Do you follow me?" when expounding a subject to a friend of acquaintance. There are so many reasons against the use of this interrogatory that only two or three of the best one need be mentioned.

If you are enunciating words of wisdom the chances are nine hundred and ninety-nine out of nine hundred and ninety-nine that you are not being followed. On the other hand, if you are enunciating foolish words it makes no difference whether you are being followed or not. A still more important reason, however, is embodied in the simple but incontrovertible fact that no man can ever be quite sure that he understands what the other fellow is trying to express.

Therefore the proper answer to the question "Do you follow me?" is always, "I don't know." That, of course, makes the question itself absurd, and it is made still more absurd by the fact that few are honest enough to answer, "I don't know," but insist upon lying and saying, "Oh, yes! I follow you all right enough."

It is clear, therefore, that the effort is quite hopeless. If you have something to express all you can do is to pick out the most intelligent person or persons you can find, express your idea as well as you can and let it go at that. Do you get the idea?

Cranberry Apple Sauce.

A French Canadian guide came into camp greatly excited. He had a handful of wild cranberries, which he exhibited with pride.

"You know the li'l' cranberries?" he asked the assembled party. "Well, you take the li'l' cranberrie an' you put him on the fire with plenty of de sug—ok, big lot of de sug—an' you let him cook long time. Then you take him off an' let him cool. An' voila! You have a more better apple sauce than you can make out of de pruner".

War Taxation Invented.

War taxation, like everything else, had to be invented. The king who first thought of it in England was Henry II. Instead of asking his barons to accompany him to French battlefields at their own charge, he compounded with them, accepted "scutage" or shield money, and from the burgesses he collected "gifts," "aids" or "tallages." Henry could then hire his own men, and if need be turn them against the bold, bad barons themselves, as the army was under his own control.—London Tit-Bits.

To Clean Paint Brushes.

No matter how hard a paint brush has become, it can be made as soft and clean as new, says H. A. Gallther in Farm and Home, by simply boiling in water into which has been put a little lye. A little washing powder or soap will do, but it will take longer.

The brush should be placed on end, and the boiling water should be no deeper than the length of the bristles, as the boiling suds will injure the handle. Turpentine will clean paint brushes, but not after they have become real hard.

Process of Cremation.

The process of cremation is as follows: The casket is lowered into the incinerating room. The metal handles and name plate are removed, and it is put into the retort. The heat is so intense that after a few hours only the ashes of the bones remain, all else, including the structure of the casket, having disappeared in light ash or gaseous products. The casket screws and nails are removed by a magnet, and about four ounces of powder ash remain.

The Dwarf Palm of Algeria.

The dwarf palm, which furnishes considerable quantities of fiber, grows in great profusion in Algeria and is one of the principal obstacles to the clearing of the land, so thick does it grow and so difficult is it to pull up. Its roots, in shape resembling carrots, penetrate into the ground to the depth of a yard or more, and when the stem only is cut it sprouts out again almost immediately. As its name indicates, this palm is very small and can only attain a certain height when protected, as in the Arab cemeteries, for example.

Restrained.

"What is a temporary injunction, pa?" asked little Richard, looking up from the newspaper he was reading.

"I'll give you a concrete example of it, my son," replied his father. "Your mother told me this evening that she didn't want me to go to the club. That is a temporary injunction."

"I see, but suppose you go anyhow, what would that be?"

"When you have been married as long as I have, my son, you won't ask such foolish questions," said father sadly.

Aids to Greatness.

Phrenologist (enthusiastically)—Why, sir, the bump of veneration is the largest I have ever seen. Such a bump should make you a bishop. Subject (delightedly)—Is that so? Well, I'll get Paddy Nolan to give me another whack in the same place, and I'll be an archbishop at once.—Exchange.

Mean Temptress.

"Your teeth are in pretty bad shape," remarked the dentist.

"It isn't their shape that bothers me," said his patient. "It's their disposition."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Story of a Dog's Jaw.

The strength of a dog's jaws and teeth were never more exemplified than in the case of a Hampshire gamekeeper, whose collie was unfortunate enough to be caught in a steel vermin trap. The gamekeeper, gun in hand, was soon on the scene, but in the short time the dog had become quite infuriated with pain. Having nothing suitable for muzzling the animal and fearing to place his foot upon the trap spring with the dog's jaws free, the gamekeeper placed the gun barrels in the dog's mouth and held them there while easing the spring. With a vicious snap the teeth closed on the cold steel ere he regained his freedom. The barrels were bent through—an almost incredible performance and were examined shortly after.—London Graphic.

Britain's Oldest Colony.

Bermuda now ranks as the oldest of Britain's colonies, the English flag having been hoisted there in 1612 by a party of colonists from the Virginia company who stopped at the islands on the way to the mainland, went on to Virginia, found Jamestown in a state of starvation and returned. A previous explorer, Juan de Bermudas, gave his name to the island.
