THE GEORGETOWN HERALD

WEDNESDAY EVE'G JU'E 20, 1917

WHEN WOMEN VOTE.

A man went into a polling booth;
(He'd been away for a year or two)
But he knew the neighbors round-a-boot;
And the D.R.O. was a good old scoot,
So the wandering boy had scarce a doubt
Of his ballot going through.

He entered the old familiar spot,
Still smoking a fat cigar.
The walls were plastered above his head,
With "warnings to voters," and what to dread
Should they offer to vote for a man who is dead.
(But few of them ever are.)

What ho!" said the man to the D.R.O.
And uttered a goodly oath,
But the constable winked, to make him note
That beneath the screen where you cast your vote
There protruded a muslin petticoat—
Or underskirt—or both.

Said the D.R.O. with a foolish grin,
"It's against the rules to sweep
Our instructions very explicitly state
It's forbidden to smoke or expectorate;
For such habits as those the ladies hate"
With a nod to the girl in there.

And then from behind the curtain came,
A damsel with tresses red.
She explained with a blush (and a bashful pose)
That she'd rather have voted for Brown, dear knows,
If it weren't that he had such a homely nose—
So she voted for Jones instead.

She gave her hat a hitch or two,
And looked for a glass—in vain.
And the man with the fat cigar still gazed,
With his mouth wide-open he stood there dazed,
Till the lady left; then asked, amazed,
Would the D.R.O. explain?

When he found the vote had been given to
The ladies of the town,
He expressed his views in lurid tones
Turn his flesh to ashes, to dust his bones,
If he backed up this female and voted Jones—
So decided to vote for Brown.

MORAL.

When the next election comes around,
Let the party men take note;
To select a man with Adonis' charm,
With a strength that Appollo couldn't harm,
And the power of a Mars in his good right arm,
If they want the women's vote.

Patriotic Garden Party 29th

You'll be sorry if you miss the program at the Patriotic Garden Party at Mr. L. E. Flack's on June 29th. Miss Jean Stuart, highland dancer; Miss Inez Stuart soprano, Hamilton; Misses Mason, Acton; the 20th Regt. Band and local talent will furnish an excellent program. Tell your friends and bring them with you.

ABOUT THE RAIN

Some folks have always got a grouch about this thing and that, they're talkin' sometimes with their mouth and sometimes through their hat. Oh nothin' ever suits their taste, no matter what it be, they've always got their hammer tuned up to the knockin' key. They've been an awful busy crew throughout these cloudy days, when sunbeams have to battle with forty kinds of haze, when clouds seem just to come in heaps from most nowhere at all, and everytime they circulate the wet begins to fall. 'Tis then the folks take up the strain, 'bout things goin' to the dogs, and how there wop's be stuff enough to feed the snakes and frogs. The crops'll rot right in the ground, they'll never grow an inch, and we'll be squirmin' sure enough when hunger starts to pinch. They say it's goin' to rain like that for forty days or more, until this earth we're campin' on is soaked through to the core. And folk who get their feet wet through, and start a grave yard back, and soon be sprawled in illness upon their helpless back. Oh, shucks, these croakers make us sick, why can't they look around, and get their countenance tilt up a trifle from the ground. Why, say, them rains that we have had a-tumblin from the sky, was sent to make the fodder grow to feed both you and I. It's made green pasture for the cows and browsin' for the sheep, and fixin' up the hay and corn and other things they reap. Lets have a hoot of gladsome song about these soakin' showers that's been a-chasin right along our spuds and cauliflowers. Ark.

ARE YOU EFFICIENT?

Try These Tests, but Do Not Yield to Despair If You Fail.

Are you efficient? The awful query refuses to down. The clocks tick it, the flat wheels in the subway thump it, the ungreased curves of the elevated screech it. If you are an old business fogy the question burns in the eye of every pitying employee. You find your wife measuring the distance from the range to the kitchen cabinet and your son computing the power necessary to propel a football to the lowest arc. The telephone company advises you to give your name instead of saying "Hello."

Blended be the concrete of thought if not of deed. Concreteness enables you to see just what the efficiency masters mean. One of them, William Frets Kemble, tells in Industrial Management "How to Test Your Employees." Of course every man who reads it will first test his most important employee, his father's son. Watch and pad and pencil are all that are needed to acquaint yourself with your virtues and faults. In thirty seconds answer as many of these questions as you can:

Give the name of a vegetable, a metal, an insect, a reptile, a dial, a man, a woman, an ocean, a lake, a town.

If at the end of the half minute you have written only "beet, gold, flea, adder," you are pretty poor. If you have also put down "trout, Edison, Adams, Atlantic," you are up to human average of eight answers. If you feel that you can go beyond ten answers you may describe the color of water, tea, bear, ivory, the sky, grass, milk, chalk, coal and skin. But men who go beyond fifteen answers in thirty seconds are rare. They should have secretaries, limousines and big black cigars.

Next try to answer five "difficult questions" in twenty seconds:

First.—Who is the greatest living general?

Quick, now, and pick a short name that doesn't take a long time to write.

Second.—What is the most powerful force in the world?

Perhaps love isn't, but it's a shorter word than militarism.

Third.—What is the greatest modern discovery?

Quick, man! Radium will do.

Fourth.—What is the greatest necessity of commerce?

Our secretary of commerce probably would not answer that in less than 11,840 words. You perhaps will write "ships" or "railroads" and pass on to the last:

Fifth.—What is the cheapest food for the human race?

Bread, unless you are a fiend for lentils or employed by the makers of flaked oat corn. But you ought to answer three of the questions in twenty seconds, says Mr. Kemble. If you answer fewer it indicates "slowness or deliberation in thought."

The "Lady Reporter" in Japan.

One of the newest stunts of the Japanese newspaper is to employ the "lady journalist," which is considered a remarkable innovation in a country where woman is emerging more and more from the seclusion of her home.

"Is the lady reporter's work satisfactory?" I asked the editor.

"Yes, in a way, but she is not satisfied with writing personals. I find that she wants to crowd in little pleas for woman's rights and equal suffrage. We have to go pretty carefully on that sort of thing in Japan, you understand, and keep a pretty close watch on what she writes, because it is likely to have a meaning that man do not wholly understand."—Archie Bell in World Outlook.

Bench and Bar.

Sir Edward Carson is noted for his ready Irish wit. On one occasion in court, when the judge, with whom he had had more than one passage of arms, pointed out to him the discrepancy between the evidence of two of his witnesses, one a carpenter and the other a saloon keeper, he answered, "That's so, my lord, yet another case of difference between bench and bar." —London Standard.

To Pop Corn.

Here is the proper way to pop corn: Put the regular quantity—that is, a very small quantity—into the popper and hold it under the cold water faucet long enough to thoroughly saturate the kernels. Shake the popper and place it on the back of the range to allow the corn to dry, then pop. The kernels will be very large, and there will be no hard center.

The Difference.

He—Of course there's a big difference between a botanist and a florist.

She—Is there really?

He—Yes; a botanist is one who knows all about flowers, and a florist is one who knows all about the price people will pay for them.

He Traveled

The clock struck 12.

"I wish I had enough money to travel," remarked the young man.

"Here's a car ticket," announced his father, making his appearance at that point.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

His Smart.

"Come on, Hiram! Don't you want to see the ossified man?"

"Naw. I kin show you a whole town of 'em."—Kansas City Journal.

His Early Struggles.

She—Tell me about your early struggles. He—There's not much to tell. The more I struggled the more the old man held it on.—Boston Transcript.

After crosses and losses men grow humbler and wiser.—Franklin.

Artificial Coloring of Sugar Prohibited by the Government

FOR many years the Canadian Public has been eating Artificially Colored Sugars. Government reports show that some refineries have used Ultramarine Blue to make their granulated sugar look better than it actually is. Others made use of Aniline and Vegetable Dyes to give a brilliant appearance to their soft or yellow sugars.

The use of dyes or coloring matter of any kind is unnecessary in refining Cane Sugar. This is emphasized in a notification sent to all refiners by the Dominion Government prohibiting the coloring of sugar, and in cases where it is found, prosecution proceedings will be entered under the Adulteration of Foods Act.

We Wish the Public to Know that we Have Never Used Coloring Matter in Lantic Pure Cane Sugar and Never Will Lantic Pure Cane Sugar was first put on the market about two years ago. Since that time over 200,000,000 lbs. have been consumed by the Canadian Public, and we are now turning out 750,000 lbs. of Pure Cane Sugar each day.

The reason for this enormous business is not hard to explain. It means that the discriminating consumer has learned by actual use that Lantic Pure Cane Sugar is superior to all others.

Having erected the most modern sugar refinery in the world, costing over $4,000,000, we steadfastly adhered to our original policy of making only absolutely Pure Cane Sugars of highest quality, in which

NO BEETS ARE USED
NO ULTRAMARINE BLUE IS USED
NO ANILINE DYES ARE USED
NO VEGETABLE DYES ARE USED

During the last two years we were told that we could increase our business in certain sections of Canada, if we would color our yellow soft sugars, as the public were accustomed to the more brilliant color. We refused and are glad we did so. The recent action of the Government has since vindicated our judgment.

CROOKED, BUT FAMOUS.

Washington Street, Boston, One of the World's Great Thoroughfares.

Washington street in Boston is one of the great thoroughfares of America, worthy to rank with Broadway in New York and Michigan avenue in Chicago. Like nearly everything else in Boston, it has a history of almost incredible length and respectability, making other streets seem painfully young and callow and crude.

Moreover, Washington street is one of the longest in the world, running all the way through Boston and on to another town without a stop or a break. This is not accomplished without many a bend and meander, however, for Washington street is amazingly crooked, as are nearly all the thoroughfares of Puritan origin. It seems that the Mayflower party did not realize how big Boston was going to be, and so they carelessly let the cows lay out the streets as they wandered homeward.

Washington street today does not look like an aristocrat of ancient lineage, however. On the contrary, it appears decidedly democratic, swarming with all sorts of people who jostle and push each other to the narrow, overflowing sidewalks in the brilliant glare of numerous electric signs that flash the rival merits of moving picture shows, bars and cafes.—Exchange.

CURIOUS CLUBS.

The Man Killers, Their Cheerful Talk and Killing Fate.

One of the oldest purely social clubs was the Everlasting club, limited in membership to a hundred people, who divided the day among them in such a way that some of them were always on the premises. Solely for the purpose of keeping up the fire from which members lighted their pipes an old woman was kept, and during the fifty years of existence the club members smoked fifty tons of tobacco.

No one who had not killed an opponent in a duel was allowed to be a member of the Man Killing club, where the conversation was confined to wounds, bullets and slaughter. Curiously enough, most of the members were executed.

Very different in character was the Six o'Clock club, whose members, numbering six only, met at 6 in the evening and separated at 6 in the morning.

Meeting early in the evening and sitting smoking until midnight, the curious people forming the Hundrum club observed the strictest silence.

But perhaps the most curious club of all was the No Nose club, which was founded by an unwilling follower of the Egyptian fashion of flat faces. —London Telegraph.

Persia's Great Superstition.

The greatest superstition in Persia is what is known as the "evil eye." You must not say to some one whom you meet, "How well you are looking!" for if you do and that person is taken ill it will be because you gave him the evil eye. You must not say to a mother, "What a pretty baby!" "What a bright child!" for if you do and anything unfortunate happens to the child you will be considered responsible. Many mothers let the children go dirty and poorly clothed in order that they may not attract favorable attention. The sign which is thought to have some power to avert the evil eye consists in holding the second and third fingers of both hands close to the palms with the thumbs, while the other fingers are extended straight out. Then, with the hands behind you, you make a downward movement three times.

Struggle of the Rivers.

The discovery that there is a kind of struggle for existence and survival of the fittest among rivers is one of the most interesting results of the modern study of physiography. A notable example of this contest is exhibited by England's two biggest rivers, the Thames and the Severn. Between their valleys lie the Cotswold hills, and exploration shows that the Severn by eating backward among these hills where softer strata underlie them has diverted to itself some of the headwaters which formerly flowed into the Thames.

Breaking It Gently.

"I have called, sir, to see the photo of the lady with $25,000 who wants a husband.

"Can you keep your face straight?"

"Of course I can."

"Very well. We'll break you in first with the $5,000 applicants, and then gradually, as you grow stronger, we will work you up to the big prize. This way, please, and don't get frightened."—Exchange.

Boss at Home.

"How can you tell that the conductor is the boss in his house?" asked the recruit.

"Simple," boasted the great detective. "That woman asked him where she got off, and he said, 'I'll tell you where you get off.'"—Buffalo Express.

Desperation.

"Is dis high cost of livin' worryin' you?" asked Meandering Mike.

"It's drivin' me desperate," replied Plodding Pete. "I'm almost tempted to go to work."—Washington Star.

Nothing Lost.

"I hear she doesn't like me with a mustache."

"Going to shave it off, I s'pose?"

"Oh, no! She never liked me."—Kansas City Journal.
