PRESS ON

Still will we trust, though earth seem dark and dreary,
And the heart faint beneath His chastening rod;
Though rough and steep our pathway,
worn and weary,
Still we trust in God!

So from our sky the night shall furl her shadows,
And day pour gladness through his golden gates,
Our rough path lead to flower-enamelled
meadows
Where joy our coming waits.

Let us press on in patient self-denial Accept the hardship, shrink not from the loss;
Our guerdon lies beyond the hour of trial,
Our crown beyond the Cross.

—W. H. Burleigh

Killed by Falling Tree.

William Robey of Albion came to an untimely end last week while working in the woods. With his son he was felling a tree when he was struck by one of the large limbs and pinned to the ground. His son released him by chopping off the limb, and a doctor was called, but the unfortunate man lived only a few hours. His back and several ribs were broken and he suffered other injuries.

AFTER SICKNESS THEY GAVE HER VINOL

And She Soon Got Back Her Strength

New Castle, Ind.—"The measles left me run down, no appetite, could not rest at night, and I took a severe cold which settled on my lungs, so I was unable to keep about my housework. My doctor advised me to take Vinol, and six bottles restored my health so I do all my housework, including washing. Vinol is the best medicine I ever used."—Alice Record, 437 So. 11th St., New Castle, Ind.

We guarantee this wonderful cod liver and iron tonic, Vinol, for all weak, run-down, nervous conditions.

SHOULD KEEP ON ACHIEVING

Good Work Demands Continuous Improvement in Every Line of Human Activity.

The other day a famous author was telling me how he felt when his first story was accepted. He said that within a few minutes the thought flashed across his mind that he could not stop—but must go on. One good story must be followed by another and another—else his reputation would die and he would be humiliated. He said that the feeling was not exactly comfortable—that the prospect was in a way terrible. "Being successful," he said, "is not easy. The successful man advertises to the world that he can do certain things well—and he must go on making good or back off the map. It's a great sensation, a great experience—worth almost anything—but it isn't a snap."

It is the same way in business, says a writer in the American Magazine. The salesman who sets a high mark has to go right out and beat that mark or suffer by comparison with his own record. He can't sit down in a rocking chair and devote the rest of his life to receiving congratulations.

Have you ever sat in a restaurant and compared your job with that of a waiter? Try it some time. No matter what your work is I am sure you will see the point if you watch the waiter and think how exactly his job typifies yours. Take, for example, my job—that of an editor. An editor's job is exactly like that of a waiter. He has to go and get something good and bring it in. And after he has brought it in he has to go right out and get something more and bring that in. The minute he sits down or stops to talk unnecessarily with the guests, he ceases to give as good service as before. Then the guests who praised him a moment ago begin to growl. And so, almost immediately, he has turned from a good servant into a poor one.

This fits any line of human activity. A continuous performance is what is wanted. Nothing else counts.

JUDICIAL SYSTEMS ARE OLD

Men Wrangled Over Rights and Wrongs From Time They Began to Live Together.

The concrete beginning of a systemised judiciary, writes Lewis M. Hosea in Case and Comment, are as old as the tribal relation. Men quarreled about rights and wrongs as soon as they began to live together as a community, and the chief of the tribe, or the "elders," judged between claimants.

Indeed, at the earliest beginnings of recorded history we find in Egypt a judicial system, including a reviewing power and remarkably developed ideas of administrative justice. Judicial officers in their epitaphs rest their claim to immortality upon having judged impartially, never oppressing the weak and humble, and their merciful regard for the fatherless and the widow.

In the Code of Hammurabi of Babylon were embodied many of the essential principles of modern justice which were transmitted to European peoples through the conquests of Alexander and the Romans. These form the primal basis of the Roman civil law of our English ancestors, derived through the early tribes of northern Europe.

Even old Homer (66 B. C.) gives us a suggestive picture of the modern system of court trials, as the Odyssey:

"What time the judge forsakes the noisy bar
To take repast, and stills the wordy war."

Good Wages Necessary.

Proper remuneration of labor and well-being of the individual must be recognized as elements of sound business management, says the Cleveland Plain Dealer. The age has passed when the yearly dividend paid to stockholders is accepted by the public as the sole cause for the existence of an industry. Neither are we justified in passing judgment on the quality of industrial administration, or on the practicability of any system of factory operation solely on the basis of whether such administration or system will insure a permanent or increasing degree of financial profit to the owner. We have to consider the human side of all industrial activity, not alone in its relation to the segregated community and the public at large.

Self-Confidence Wins.

Have you ever felt the chagrin of knowing that you have failed in an enterprise, whether this may have been a mere incident of business or an entire career, purely through lack of self-confidence?

Thousands of men have failed in just that way, writes Hugo Masters in Physical Culture.

Self-confidence is a factor in success of such importance that the man with moderate ability, but plenty of confidence, will succeed where the man of far greater ability, coupled with a lack of confidence, will fail. This has been proven probably a few billion times in the history of human affairs.

What Will the Harvest Be?

Few Americans are aware that they live in a country inclosed in a circle of mines and nets, writes Niksah; yet such is the case. Since the declaration of war the navy department has been sewing the waterways and harbors of the country with means of destruction. In harbors nets designed to catch submarines are the chief reliance, while in rivers the channels are planted with mines.

HUSBAND THE BETTER LOVER

He is Practical, Demonstrating His Affection in Deeds Rather Than in Words.

Invariably the radiantly happy married woman of fifty has adopted the man's point of view regarding her life. The average man is a better lover than the average woman, because he loves practically, showing affection in acts rather than in words. From the beginning his home is his inventive to effort. Sometimes, after marriage, as demands increase, he becomes so engrossed in his purpose that he forgets to talk of love.

Then it is that the wife, who has small understanding of love in action, pines because she is afire he has grown cold. Not he is at fever heat, lest he fail in providing physical proof of his affection.

The woman who finds happiness in married life has a sufficiently masculine outlook to understand him. She, instead of brooding over imaginary slights, in return proves her devotion in work. Her domestic duties are dignified by love, consequently she can fix her thoughts upon something diverting while she mends socks, forgetting the commonplace.

She can hear the song of the bird or think of the story she read last evening while she does the work of the absent cook. To her it is a joy to plan attractive meals that will add to the efficiency of her loved ones. She has a profession—home making.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

RUSSIA, COUNTRY OF FAMINE

Peasants, Next to Orientals, Are Regarded as the Hungriest People on Face of Globe.

Next to the proletariat of India and China, the Russian peasant feels the pinch of poverty and hunger more keenly and more frequently than any other citizen on earth, the National Geographic magazine asserts.

One of the earliest famines in Russia of which there is any definite record was that of 1600, which continued for three years, with a death toll of 500,000 peasants. Cats, dogs and rats were eaten; the strong overcame the weak and in the shambles of the public markets human flesh was sold. Multitudes of the dead were found with their mouths stuffed with straw.

Three Russian famines of comparatively recent date were among the most severe in the history of the country. They occurred in 1891, 1906 and 1911. During the ten years following the first of these periods of dearth the government allotted nearly $125,000,000 for relief work, but the sums were not judiciously expended.

The famine of 1911 extended over one-third of the area of the empire in Europe and affected more or less 30,000,000 people, while 8,000,000 were reduced to starvation. Weeds, the bark of trees and bitter bread made from acorns constituted the chief diet for the destitute. This was the most widespread and most severe famine which has befallen a European nation in modern times.

First Woman Doctors.

The first woman admitted to the Ecole Medecine, the famous Paris medical college, who also the first to become a member of the New York Academy of Medicine, was Dr. Mary Putnam Jacobi, who was born in London seventy-five years ago. She was the daughter of George P. Putnam, the New York publisher, and studied in several American schools before taking her degree in Paris in 1871. Two years later she became the bride of Dr. Abraham Jacobi, a native of Germany, who fled that country when charged with "high treason" for participation in a German revolutionary movement, and, settling in New York, became one of the most distinguished of American physicians. Dr. Mary Putnam Jacobi was prominent in the profession as professor and hospital physician until her death in 1906. The first woman physician in America was Dr. Elizabeth Blackwell, a native of England, who received her degree of M. D. in 1849, and later returned to England to practice her profession.

Spud Is Important.

"The humble potato is destined to play an important part in the present world war. We are warned that as much depends upon bread as bullets, but owing to the scarcity of bread and an overabundance of potatoes, it would seem that more attention must be given to the growing and preserving of this crop.

"Scientists used to say that there was but little food value in the potato. But recently they have learned with others that a little learning is a dangerous thing. Now we are told that there is almost a balanced ration to be found in a bountiful meal of potatoes. At any rate it has been amply proved that there is no single vegetable that brightens so many homes, or feeds so many people as the potato.—Exchange.

No, You Don't!

The late John G. Johnson, the famous Philadelphia lawyer, was once engaged in a case where a certain cantankerous old woman bore witness for the opposition.

Her testimony concluded, the old woman proposed to leave the witness box, but Mr. Johnson said:

"Hold on, madam, I've one or two questions to ask you."

The old woman, however, did not halt in her departure.

"No, ye don,'t," she said. "None o' yer questions for me. You ain't on my side."
