Four eclipses, two of the sun and two of the moon, are due in 1936, but only one of them will be visible in Canada, and that only in the northwestern section of the Dominion. Presented with Club Bag

Member of the Liberal association executive of Halton county paid tribute to their new member, Hughes Cleaver, M.P., on Christmas Day. This followed presentation of a handsome fitted club bag to Mr. Cleaver on behalf of the executive. Emphasis was placed, in the presentation address by Captain, the Rev. W. C. Riddiford, on the Halton association's pride in the leadership which Mr. Cleaver has given since his election, particularly with reference to the revision of Burlington postoffice plans. The presentation of the club bag was then made by P. G. Rhynas, president of the Liberal association. Mr. Cleaver expressed his deep appreciation of their thoughtfulness.

Corn Borer Increase

There has been a striking comeback of the corn borer in Ontario this year. The Provincial Entomologist reports an average increase of between two and three-fold over last year. The increase was brought about chiefly by the very favorable weather for the moth last June and July. In counties where there was no clean-up last spring the insect multiplied much more than where the clean-up was made. This outbreak has shown that the borer is still a real menace to corn growing.

"The Ottawa Spotlight"

By Wilfrid Eggleston

Ottawa, December 31st—A popular pastime among the commentators at this season of the year is to look back over the 12 months just past and try to predict, from the general trend of the times, what the coming year is likely to bring. Ever since the depression began, prophets have arisen from time to time to say that prosperity is just around the corner and some of the rosy predictions issued on the 1st of January in the years 1930, 1931, 1932 make pathetic reading now. Instead of, things rapidly getting back to the levels of 1928 and 1929, they rapidly and emphatically grew worse.

Perhaps that is why the forecasts this year are a little more sober and cautious. It is quite true that measured by the usual standards, the year 1935 saw a substantial movement toward better times. It is also true that indications mainly point toward a continuation of the same upward trend. But there is no longer any easy optimism that unemployment will soon be a thing of the past, or that budgets will easily balance, or that the standard of living of the masses will quickly rise to a more respectable level. Most observers now are pleased to feel that the movement will at least continue upward.

Bright Spots of 1935

What were the developments of 1935 which suggest that times are growing better? Employment figures rose; external trade gained considerable; the wheat problem grew less acute; production of automobiles, boots and shoes, electric power, several metals climbed to higher levels. The primary producer in many areas obtained somewhat better prices for his commodities. The newsprint industry at least became no worse. Federal revenues climed slightly. The cost of money fell, governments being able to borrow at record low levels. Trade barriers were lowered slightly. Some measure of confidence returned into the business world. The stock market, which usually acts as a barometer of business prospects, pointed to better weather ahead.

On the other side of the ledger the picture is still dark. In spite of gains in employment, there are still between 400,000 and 500,000 Canadians, it would appear, unable to find employment. There are 200,000 families on relief, and a large army of single men and women also, the grand total being over the million mark. There is not a single provincial budget which balances, after taking into account special expenditure, and taxes are about at their peak, so that relief on that side of the balance sheet is impossible. The debts of public bodies continue to grow alarmingly. The federal debt has grown about 800 million dollars since the beginning of the depression. The railway problem grows no simpler as time goes on. The movement of traffic by rail is discouragingly low. Volume of movement on the railways in 1935 was only about 70 per cent of the volume in 1928, while trucks and buses explain part of this reduction, it is still a startling commentary on the sluggishness of business. Allowing for the long-term trend, internal and external movement of goods ought by now to be 20 per cent above the 1928 levels, not 30 per cent below it. It will take a continuation of the steep increase in employment of the past summer for another two years before the present unemployed are back in industry. It will take several years of similar gains in federal revenues before a balanced budget can be achieved.

Counting on Trade

The Liberal administration is banking heavily on the restoration of international trade to bring about better times. They argue that the depression resulted from the barriers created by legislators in the form of tariffs, quotas, exchange restrictions and so forth. These dammed up the streams of commerce and created stagnation everywhere, thus undoing and thwarting the advances of science and engineering and destroying the gains which are obtained when each country does the thing it is best fitted to do and exchanges its own specialty lines for the specialty lines of other countries. They argue that high tariffs result in costly and uneconomic production, which lowers the demand and the consumption of goods. If the world moves with Canada towards lower tariff barriers, they argue, 1936 will see further improvement everywhere. The European war threat is the most menacing cloud in the Canadian business horizon. There are enough restrictions on commerce now, and enough debris, without a major cataclysm coming along before the world has recovered from the last one, they feel. That might be the last straw.

MILTON

Four or five wild pheasants were seen on the south side of the pond bank in Milton on Tuesday morning, the day before Christmas. They were the first wild pheasants that have been seen in Milton for some time.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bell, Pine St., are spending their Christmas holidays at their dear old home in Bonnie Scotland.

Billy, son of Mr. and Mrs. I. Gould, who underwent an operation for appendicitis by Hamilton General Hospital last week, is, we are pleased to say, doing nicely.

Milton's dog poisoner is still at large and continuing his deadly work among the canines in the south ward, the latest victim being "Laddie," owned by Gordon MacNabb, a great favorite with the children.

Miss Mary Cordingley, eldest daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Solomon Cordingley, of Trafalgar township, passed away at her home at 129 Grant Avenue, Hamilton, on Thursday last, after an illness that confined her to bed for the last five years. Miss Cordingley was a member of First United church, and leaves to mourn two sisters, Miss Jennie Cordingley, with whom she resided, and Mrs. D. E. Blanchard, of Freeman. The funeral service took place from the above residence on Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock, and interment was made in St. Stephen's church cemetery. Hornby.—Champion.

ACTON

While motoring between Waterloo and Kitchener on Monday, Mr. and Mrs. John Moore, Mrs. E. J. Maggard, Acton, and Mr. and Mrs. Benj. Young of Georgetown, had the misfortune to suffer minor injuries when their car skidded and hit an electric light standard. The front of the car was rather badly damaged. Mr. Moore received a cut on the nose and all the occupants were rather badly shaken up.

Miss Jessie Young, nurse-in-training at the Toronto General Hospital, spent a few days at her home here.

Friends will be pleased to learn that Mr. Henry Bayers, who has been seriously ill the past week, is recovering nicely.

Miss Bertha Brown of Toronto, is spending the Christmas vacation with her sister, Miss Fern Brown, and other Acton friends.

It is reported that the building of the Halton Glove Works, on Main Street, was sold on Monday to Mr. Louis Brown, of Guelph, by the Georgetown Lumber Company. No information as to Mr. Brown's intention for use of the building has been secured.—Free Press.

World's Greatest Plague Being Overcome

Not so many years ago, consumption was the world's greatest scourge. It is still a deadly menace but not so potent because of the effective means which have been taken for its prevention and cure.

The physician, the dietitian and the sanitation expert have all combined and with the aid of the sun and fresh air and rest, have materially checked the great inroads which tuberculosis made upon our population.

The National Sanitarium Association operates the Muskoka Hospital for Consumptives, the Toronto Hospital for Consumptives and the Queen Mary Hospital for Consumptive Children which combined have a total capacity of just over 1,000 beds. They are thoroughly equipped and have all facilities for the modern treatment of this disease, and it is largely through their efforts that the death rate from consumption has been so greatly reduced.

These hospitals are not operated for the well-to-do but are maintained solely for the poor who are afflicted with tuberculosis and are without means to pay for their treatment and care.

It requires a great deal of money to operate these institutions, for more than they can hope to receive from statutory allowances, and it is only with the generous assistance of many generous friends that they can continue to carry on.

Many thousands of dollars will be needed to cover the shortage in office this year. Will you please assist in this a contribution to the National Sanitarium Association, 323 Bloor Street, Toronto?
