WITH THE ARMY

The Canadian Women's Army Corps have been given a substantial increase in pay. Everyone from lieutenant-colonel to private share in the raise. Similar increases were granted the Women's Services of the Navy and the Air Force.

Basic pay will now be 80 per cent of that paid men in the Armed Forces, instead of the former 66 2-3 per cent.

And the girls, eligible for trades pay, will be paid at the same rate as their male comrades in arms. Previously they were paid two thirds of male trades pay rates.

Under the new wage scale, a private's (C.W.A.C.) pay may be increased to $1.10 a day after four month's efficient service, and to $1.30 a day after six month's efficient service.

Dependents of members of the C.W.A.C., as well as those of the Wrens and the Women's Division of the Air Force, other than husbands and children, are now eligible for dependents' allowances at the same rates and under the same conditions as apply to dependents of men. Thus a dependent parent or other close relatives may receive an allowance up to $30 a month.

City men who think they're too busy to serve in the Reserve Army might take a lesson from two farmers who left their Alberta fields for two weeks at camp.

Henry Motz, of Lougheed, and W. C. Seymour, of Sedgewick, took time from their farms to spend a forthnight with the 14th (R) Army Tank Regiment. Metz, who farms two sections, left 800 acres of crop unthreshed, figuring another two week's wouldn't do it any harm—after all, it was last year's crop anyway! Sedgewick, who never missed a parade of his squadron all winter despite 19 miles drive to parade, had to motor out that distance to catch the 1.40 a.m. train to camp.

First, compassionate farm leave will be granted to soldiers stationed in Canada whose families or near relatives find it too much hardship to carry on alone. Secondly, men will be detailed from formations of the Canadian Army to be employed on farms under the direction of the Department of Labour. This will be known as "Farm Duty".

Compassionate farm leave will be granted, on application, at the discretion of the G.O.C. or D.O.C. for a period not exceeding six months.

Canadian Red Cross Headquarters Overseas

Another in a series of articles written by W. R. Laggs and C. V. Charters, who represented the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association in a recent tour overseas.

(By Walter R. Laggs)

There is a large building in the heart of London in which a band of busy workers, many of them volunteer, do their utmost to help alleviate the miseries caused by the war.

It is Canadian Red Cross Headquarters. Last August the Canadian editors went there and were shown some of the work in progress.

These Headquarters occupy five stories of a building loaned to the Red Cross by Lord Crichley. The offices overlook Berkeley Square, a spot made famous in song and drama, which would scarcely be recognised by those who knew it in peace time.

The iron railing around the square has been made into munitions. This railing was a famous Georgian relic over three hundred years old. The grass has all been trampled down and trenches have added to the scene of desolation.

Several buildings in the immediate vicinity have been struck. Lady Willingdon's house on one corner of the square has suffered a direct hit.

Inside the Red Cross Building, however, everything is clean and well ordered and the work goes on with quiet efficiency.

Crates of supplies are being unloaded, sorted, listed, and stored away in their proper places, or made into shipments to fill requisitions.

Few people realize the amount of work accomplished by the Red Cross, not only in quantity, but in variety. We saw them making up special parcels for prisoners of war, supplies for hospitals and for sick and wounded, articles for babies of men on active service, replacements of articles lost by men who had been shot down, torpedoed or bombed, and many other urgent needs.

It is possible in some cases, that the very lives of prisoners of war in enemy hands has depended upon the parcels supplied by the Red Cross. Each prisoner is allowed one parcel of food weekly. These parcels supplied by the Red Cross wrigh approximately eleven pounds. In addition the prisoners are allowed a quarterly parcel from the next-of-kin.

They told us that parcels to prisoners in Germany are getting through to them fairly well and that they are now getting through to prisoners in Italy much better than they were previously.

The Red Cross received many requests for special articles. Every effort is made to supply them if possible and if they are allowed to be sent. We were shown one letter received from Flying Officer Bruce Dawson Campbell, son of Mr. annd Mrs. R. D. Campbell, of Pointe Claire, Que., asking for elementary and advanced textbooks on Algebra and Trigonometry. This shows that many prisoners are anxious to put their enforced idleness to as good use as possible.

Those at work in the Red Cross Headquarters went to great pains to show us around and answer questions. One of them was Lady Ellison, who is doing work in the prisoners' department. She did similar work during the last war.

While looking at the boxes of goods sent over from local Red Cross groups in Canada, we were told that soldiers have an aversion to mitts, and usually will not wear them. As a result those sent over from Canada have to be made ever into gloves.

The great need was stressed for turtle neck sweaters, gloves, and seaman's socks. Last named are also used by airmen.

On some shelves were more unusual items, such as maple sugar, and other supplies made in Canada. Some supplies were being assembled to replace kits lost by soldiers at Dieppe.

A constant supply of comforts to all services of the Canadian Forces is being delivered. Every week, on a regular delivery basis by Red Cross Transport, and thence through the usual channels of supply, thousands of woollen comforts are being issued to the troops. Every week, invalid delicacies, hospital supplies, cigarettes, chewing gum, games, pipes, etc., are being sent to General Hospitals, Casualty Clearing Stations, Field Ambulances, and to R.A.F. and civilian hospitals where Canadian patients may be.

A huge visitors' service is maintained throughout England and Scotland. Canadian Red Cross visitors (all volunteers) maintain daily contact with Canadian patients in Canadian Army, and British and Scottish hospitals, see that they get needed supplies, shop for them, and sometimes even write letters for them. Visitors reports, in detail, are sent weekly to Berkeley Square, where information is collected, and, when necessary, letters are written to next-of-kin in Canada.

Handicrafts at all Canadian General Hospitals are supervised entirely by the Canadian Red Cross. Staffs at all the hospitals furnish materials for rug-making and leather work, and teach patients how to make the articles. The patients pay for the cost of the materials, and are allowed to make small profit out of their handiwork.

The Relief Department at Berkeley Square ships out on an average fifty thousand civilian relief articles of clothing per week.

The Canadian Junior Red Cross supports eight residential War Nurseries in England, and supplies clothing for the youthful inmates. Three more such Nurseries are shortly to be adopted.

Less than one hundred years ago, the sufferings of wounded soldiers and prisoners were intensified by lack of care and utter neglect. Today, thanks to the Red Cross, there is a tremendous change. One cannot help but be impressed by the strides taken since the International Red Cross was organized by rules drafted at a conference in Geneva in 1882.

The Canadian Red Cross Headquarters in London is a reservoir into which pour supplies produced by small groups all across Canada. Thence in turn they are spread over a vast territory to fill a wide range of needs. No wonder it is a busy spot.
