Immunity from the Midge.

We clip the following from the Canada Farmer:—I observe in your valuable journal several articles relative to the Midge-proof Wheat, and as it is the all-absorbing topic among farmers at this season of the year, it will not be out of place should we learn further facts respecting this great agricultural boon. Through all the midge section of this county the great question at issue among intelligent farmers is, shall we sow fall wheat, and if we do, what kind is the best? Permit me, Sir, to give your readers a few ideas, which I have gleaned from a very careful inspection of several hundred acres of wheat grown in the County of Halton this year. This county is comprised chiefly of table land, with the mountain which intersects the northern and western portions of it. The high or undulating land, generally speaking, presents the greatest immunity against the ravages of the midge, while, on the other hand, upon the low lands, the fall wheat has been almost destroyed, irrespective of any particular kind of grain. The opinion I have formed regarding the midge-proof wheat is, that there cannot be such a grain in any locality which is infested with these unwelcome guests, unless favoured by the following circumstances: either by its high position and cultivation, or by the stage of development of the grain when the midge appears. Nature is rich in her protective and vegetative resources, and as there is no possibility of access to the germ except by the blossom, or more botanically speaking, by the style, which is a hollow tube, in immediate contact with the young seed: hence, it is the most feasible point in which this innumerable army of insects can make their most effective and destructive attack. They thus deposit their eggs or ova, which receive their future support from the young grain, and consequently nip it in the bud and arrest its further developement. Should the grain be somewhat advanced to maturity, it will be slightly affected by the midge; if, on the contrary, should it not be in blossom during their short siege, it will assume its wonted vigour and yield an excellent crop. (In this manner the spring wheat escaped the midge this year.) It is, therefore, worse than useless for farmers to pay such high prices to our American neighbors for the midge delusion. They might as well demand from us wheat that would protect them from the deplorable results of their chintz bug, which completely eats their crop near the root and leaves it worthless. The so-called midge-proof can only have the exchange of seed to commend it. We need not be discouraged altogether, as the Hessian fly has had its day, so, in all probability, will the midge pass away. C. F.

TO THE READER.

These Medicines are prepared with great care, and expressly for family use, and are so admirably adapted to preserve health and remove disease, that no family should be without them. If you doubt this, read the following Certificates:—

A PERMANENT CURE.

Mr. James Kennedy—Dear Sis—I feel that it is a duty I owe to suffering humanity, to give a revelation of the great benefits I have derived from the use of your Liniment and Pain Killer. After suffering about seven years with an Erysipelas sore on one of my legs, and being outliged to leave off work on several occasions, at one time being confined to my bed for 21 weeks, and trying every means that medical skill could devise—being aided by the notorious Dr. Tumblety—let all to no purpose; I was induced to try your Liniment and Pain Killer. On a Friday in December, 1862, I was obliged to leave off work, and I commenced to use your remedies in the evening of the same day, and on the following Monday morning I resumed work, and am pleased to say that I have never lost a day, since from the effects above stated. I must say in all my experience I never saw an article possessing the same healing properties as Kennedy's Liniment.
