Jeddo.

* * * * Jeddo, the capital city of the Empire, is in the 36th degree of latitude, and is said to be one of the finest cities in the world. The streets are wide and clean, and the fine views of the Gulf of Jeddo, with the high hills beyond, and the picturesque gardens, trees and temples nearer, make up many curious and beautiful views for a stranger to see. The Emperor lives in the middle of the town, in the castle, surrounded with three walls or enclosures. The noble and great people all have very fine houses, built principally of wood, carved, stuccoed and ornamented. These houses are generally built in squares, the middle being the residence of the owner, the rest those of servants, dependants, &c. The gardens surrounding these places are laid out in good taste; every bit of ground taken advantage of, and mimic effects of scenery, such as tiny waterfalls, ponds, rock work, &c, very well got up. The Japanese bestow great care on the growth and culture of timber trees. The cedars grow to great height; the oak tree, the mulberry tree—many towns live entirly upon the silk manufacture; then the urnsi or varnish tree, of which the people make the celebrated varnish known everywhere by the name of Japan—most of their furniture is coated with this, and all their plates, dishes and drinking vessels, as they do not appear to use glass or china ones; then the camphor tree, of which these puzzle boxes are made; the pepper tree, chestnut tree, walnut tree and many others too numerous to name. They are the most curious people for dwarfing all manner of trees and plants. Growing things are twisted into all manner of shapes, and flowers and fruit of one sort grown on plants and trees of other sorts, outvieing even mother nature herself. The love of flowers is strong among even the very poorest of the people, and few are without a pot or two, or some kind of tree or shrub grown against the back of the house, the arms, perhaps, reaching in through the windows, and loved and petted almost like children. On account of the populousness of this country, every inch of ground is improved to the best advantage, and not only the flats but the hills and mountains are cultivated, and made to produce such things as they can. The rice fields are a beautiful sight,—so well kept and drained, and irrigated so carefully. They are not unhealthy as in other places. Common vegetables are also grown in abundance; indeed, the poorer classes live principally on fish and rice, varied by vegetables or wild plants. Tobacco is also grown in quantities—the Japanese being great smokers. Their pipe has a very small bowl, and hangs by a button from the girdle or belt—the people having no pockets. These buttons are often highly ornamented and expensive, and the pipes themselves works of art. The tobacco is cut in fine shreds, a bag full of which hangs with the pipe at the waist. Nagasaki is the principal trading port with foreigners, having been the longest open to them. Decima, a small island close to this town, which is entered by a bridge, is the famous Dutch station, where for many years the Dutch people had a monopoly of trade with the Japanese—subitting to all sorts of indignities and close confinement for its sake; until within the past few years no foreign women were allowed in the place, and so the Dutch merchants had to bear this tedious exile from their families. Most of these indignities, however, were brought upon themselves, and richly deserved by their dishonest attempts to smuggle, and overreach an honest and trusting people. Sad, was it not, that those who bore the name of Christian should have less morality than the heathens with whom they had to do? The Japanese are not naturally a suspicious people, and we must lay at the door of intercourse with civilized nations their being so now. They have had a hatred and contempt for foreigners which it will take years of intercourse with some of the better class of English and Americans to do away with."—From the New Dominion Monthly for June.

A "SHOO FLY" EXCELSIOR.—Of all the parodies on Longfellow's "Excelsior," this, by Hans Breitmann, is not the worst:

Der evening clouds was seddling fast
As a young man drough der village passed
Shreking along mit der shdorm and blast
Mid dese vords tied on his coat dail:
"Shoo, fly."

"Oh! don't go such a fight like dose,"
His mudder gries. "You will got froze;
Dat John Frost dot will nib your ear,"
He only said so mid a shneer:
"Shoo, fly."

Den der old man and der young maid dell him to shdop, but—
Higher and higher dat young man vent,
For de shdorms he dond not care a cent,
As he viped dat shnow off his lefd ear,
Dem vords vas herd sdill shdrong und glear—
"Shoo, fly."

Weston the pledestrian, whose effort of a year or more ago to walk half way across the continent, was less successful than he anticipated, announces himself in readiness for another trip. This time he will not take to the open air, but will content himself by walking indoors for twenty-two consecutive hours, in which time he calculates that he will have traversed one hundred miles of ground. The task is a great one, and if successfully accomplished, Mr. Weston will win for himself the credit of having achieved the most remarkable feat of the kind on record. It is to be hoped he will make walking more fashionable among our young men than it is at present.—N. Y. Times.

Such full justice is given to the Prince of Wales's vices that surely it is only fair that his virtues should sometimes have a hearing. He has good nature, which is really unfailing, by readily consenting to go in state, with the princess, to an entertainment given in aid of the funds of a dramatic charity. The tickets were, it seems, hanging somewhat heavy on hand, but instantly rose to a premium on H. R. H.'s readily promising his presence. This may seem but a slight piece of obligingness, but if people were forced to go to as many profoundly uninteresting (to him) entertainments as the Prince, they would more readily appreciate the good nature of an attendance in state at a matinee, with the thermometer probably at 80.

THE LADIES WILL BE PLEASED TO LEARN THAT WATKINS, at the Right House, has greatly reduced his prices this season.

Having trebled his sales during the last two years, on account of the low price he has sold at, he has now determined to sell at a smaller profit than ever, which his enormous sales will enable him to do, particularly as he does not credit, has no Book-keeper to pay, makes no bad debts, and consequently charges no extra profit to cover these expenses and losses.

In reducing the prices of his goods, he is determined to adopt a strictly

One Price Principle

In his business, and feels confident that, as his stock this spring and summer will be unusually large and well assorted, having been most carefully selected by MR. JOHN H. WATKINS, in the very best and cheapest European and American Markets, and bought for cash down, it cannot be excelled in Canada.

He would particularly invite attention to his Millinery and Mantles, among which will be found the novelties of the season, at the very lowest rates.

His Dress Goods, which for beauty and cheapness, cannot be excelled in the Dominion.

His Carpets, Damasks and House Furnishing Goods of every description, which will be sold as low as can be bought at wholesale houses by the piece. See some of his prices:—An immense stock of Fast-Colored Prints, at ten cents (a York shilling. A large lot of Ladies' Summer Skirts and Corsets at half a dollar. Piles of all-wool Canadian Tweeds, at 50 cents. Ginghams and various styles of Dress Goods, at a York shilling; Canadian Checked Flannels, a yard wide, at three York shillings; Ladies' Mantles, from six York shillings up to the richest and most recherché styles in all materials and colors. Misses' Straw Hats and Misses' Felt Hats, Flowers and Crapes, direct from the London and Luton Manufacturers, at the very cheapest rates.

Good two-ply Carpets at half a dollar; beautiful Tapestry Carpets at 80 cents; Floor Oil Cloths from 62½ cents; Damasks and Moreens, very low. A large lot of Lace Curtains and Ladies' Lace Shawls, direct from Nottingham, very cheap. Ladies' Hats, Bonnets, Caps and Mantles made or trimmed at the shortest notice. Remember THE RIGHT HOUSE,
