Spring Shows Big Improvement In A Number of Residences

Since the highways have been kept clear of live stock there has been a growing tendency to remove the front fences from residences. Last week the picket fences in front of the Hickling, Wilson, Joseph Blackburn and Holland homes were removed. These are the first evidences of spring. Now let there be a united endeavor to keep the lawns and flower beds in attractive shape and thereby add to the beauty of our naturally attractive centre of population.

Prof. Jos. Stafford Had A Distinguished Career

Dr. Joseph Stafford, M.A., Ph.D., associate professor of zoology at McGill University, died in Montreal after an illness of several months.

Dr. Stafford was born in 1864 at Goodwood in the township of Uxbridge, near Toronto. He attended public school at Flesherton, afterwards going to model school where he obtained a certificate for teaching. After three years, he entered the University of Toronto, graduating in 1890 when he attended the school of pedagogy and taught in the collegiate institute at Morrisburg. He then went to Germany where he obtained the degrees of M.A. and Ph.D., in the University of Leipzig. After accepting the fellowship in the University of Toronto, he was appointed lecturer in zoology at McGill University, Montreal, in 1900, after which he was advanced from assistant professorship to associate professorship. During the ensuing summers, he was appointed curator of the Atlantic Biological Station at St. Andrews, N.B., Canso, N.S., Malpeque, Gaspe and Seven Islands, and was for twelve summers curator of the Pacific Biological Station, where he investigated the Pacific oyster for the British Columbia Government.

Dr. Stafford was the author of many works including trematodes, fishes, clams, and general faunistic work on the fauna of the Atlantic coast of Canada; sponges, coelentrata molluska, etc. He was a recognized authority on the Canadian oyster, and his writings on the same are well known.

Dr. Stafford was twice married. In 1890 to Miss Kate Clarke of Toronto, who died in 1900. In 1911 he married Miss Florence Milburne of Montreal, now of St. Lambert, who survives him, and one daughter, Miss Minerva Stafford of Montreal.
