Lightning Struck Barn At Feversham And Burned To Ground

Feversham Correspondence

During the very heavy electric storm that passed over here on Monday evening, a stable, belonging to Mr. Sam Brownridge in the vilage was struck by lightning, and soon burned to the ground after the flames broke out. It seemed to be ablaze all over at once, and the men had all they could do to save the movable contents. Only for the buildings being wet with the rain nothing could have saved Colquette's house and stable and Wm. Conn's stable, as they were only a few rods from the fire and in a direct line. During the same storm Mr. Jas. Thomson lost two cows that were standing at the end of the barn outside. Mr. Colquette wishes to publicly thank the villagers and neighbors who worked so hard to save the buildings and who stayed al night and kept watch till the fire had died down and the danger was over.

MAIL COURIER'S GRIEVANCE

The men who deliver the mail up and down the side roads and concessions, through fair weather and foul, are endeavering to place their grievances before the people of Canada through their representatives in the House of Commons. Their chief complaint is that they alone of Government employees are compelled to tender for their jobs and are obliged to compete with those who do not accurately count the cost before binding themselves through a four-year contract. The average annual stipend for a twenty mile route works out somewhere around $730, and the actual cost to the courier is around $1,000 it is claimed. In other words, the Post Office department is getting the mail delivered in rural districts at less than cost. Through the Canadian Mail Contractors Association the couriers are asking that payment for the service be put on a schedule of $70 per mile, and that the advance be made retroactive to 1917.

One cannot argue for the present system of tendering on the basis of economy if, on the whole the service is performed at less than cost. No system is sound if it involves an injustice to the mass of those rendering the service to the State. Other branches of the same service are on a different basis altogether, and are employed by the department on a fixed basis of wages. If the Post Office Department desired to effect still greater economies, and threw all the post office appointments and urban delivery routes open to tender they would get thousands of applicants ready and willing to work at less than the present scale of wages.

In some sections of Ontario and where the roads are best in Canada as much as $80 per mile is already being paid because no one will tender at a lower figure. It would appear, therefore, that the man who brings us our daily mail is entitled to further consideration at the hands of the Post Office Department with the object, at least, of removing any suspicion of injustice between groups in the same employment and remunerating all employees on a basis of services rendered.—The Farmer's Advocate.
