SUNLIGHT SOAP

Wash oilcloths and linoleums with warm water and Sunlight Soap, rinse clean and wipe dry. The colors will be preserved and the surface unharmed.

Common soaps fade the colors and injure the surface. Sunlight Soap cleans, freshens and preserves oilcloths and linoleums.

Sunlight Soap washes clothes white without injury to the most delicate fabrics, or to the hands, for it contains nothing that can injure either clothes or hands.

Sunlight Soap is better than other soaps, but is best when used in the Sunlight way (follow directions).

JEWISH HUMOR.

Its Flavor of Bitterness and Its Satire of Judaism.

Lemau said of the Jews, "The Semitic people are almost entirely without the power to laugh." Surely had he looked for traces of Jewish humor in the light which Heine casts back upon as dark tradition he would never have made so sweeping a statement. For eight years Heine lay upon his "mattress grave" in Paris suffering excruciating agony. He deserved, he said, to have awarded to him "the grand medals of pain and misery." Leopold Zunz said almost the same words of the whole Hebrew people, "If there are ranks in suffering, Israel takes precedence of all the nations." The humor of Israel is flavored with bitterness and plays round the greater subjects of thought and of speculation; plays like the humor of a man in pain.

Listen to the lament of a satirist born at Arles in 1287 who finds the works of the Jewish law an intolerable burden and seems to have come, like Heine, to the bitter conclusion that "Judaism is not a religion, it is a misfortune."

> Our hapless sons are distraught with cares,
> Who wake to bear more children bears,
> Each, rich or poor,
> Have only suffering to endure.
> Yet, despite all, the Jewish creed,
> Where others fared to be at indeed
> Do notes [illegible] regulations
> Which are unknown to other nations
> Even [illegible] we observe
> With watchful eye and straining nerve;
> Though he share in public functions,
> He still must follow their injunctions.
> * * *
> The Talmud not half enough,
> Glosses upon glosses and other stuff
> In which he credits must be,
> Especially in theology,
> Is all the Talmud now relate,
> Is there nothing else? I wait and hate.
> In fact, nothing at all
> Of [illegible] and [illegible] at all.

One more mediæval quotation, this time from the pen of a Barcelona Jew. The lines can hardly perhaps be called humorous, but they illustrate with a certain bitter comedy the great value set by the race upon three things—money, knowledge and domestic happiness. If a man has none of them the poet has no better advice to give him than to hold his tongue or to hang himself.

> What is the most useful thing to any man?
> Knowledge, if he gift or a good and loving wife.
> If all three of these commodities man has > [illegible]
> Then let him be golden silence he might > [illegible] his lot.
> And if he cannot do so, that poor and happy lives knows,
> Then let him go away at once and dig himself a grave.

On his deathbed Heine made his last joke, and it is typically Jewish. "Reviewing his life he means irreproachable past." he hoped that God might forgive him, "car c'est son metier"—that is his trade. Another story illustrates yet more perfectly the bitter humor of the Jew. It is the story of a dying rabbi who had been all his lifetime extremely religious, but had likewise always suffered much want and misery. "Do you know," he said to those in the sickroom, "if after all the sad experiences I have had in the past there is no future life I shall be greatly amused?"—London Spectator.

BLOODLESS GIRLS

Find New Health Through the Use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

When you see a young girl pale and ailing and wasting away, you know that budding womanhood is making new demands upon her blood supply which she cannot meet. Month after month her health, her strength, her very life, is being drained away. No food and no care can do her any good. Common medicine cannot save her from broken health and a hopeless decline. New blood is the one thing that can make her a healthy, cheerful, rosy-cheeked girl. And Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually make new blood with every dose. That is the whole secret of how they have saved thousands of pale, anæmic girls from an early grave. Miss Alice Chaput, aged 17 years, living at 475 St. Timothee street, Montreal, gives strong proof of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills's cure. "A couple of years ago," says Miss Chaput, "I was an almost continuous sufferer, and became so weak I could hardly go about. I suffered from frequent and prolonged spells of dizziness. I had frightful headaches, and my stomach was completely out of order. The least exertion would leave me worn out and breathless, and I did not appear to have a drop of good blood in my body. I consulted a doctor who told me the trouble was general debility, but his treatment did not help me a particle. To add to the trouble my nerves gave way, and I often passed sleepless nights. At this stage a friend advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I got a few boxes. The first benefit I noticed from the use of the pills was an improved appetite, and this seemed to bring much relief. I continued taking the pills until I had used six boxes, when I was fully restored to health, and I have not had a day's illness since. I cannot praise Dr. Williams' Pink Pills enough for the great good they have done me."

A pale anæmic person needs only one thing—new blood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills do one thing only—they make new blood. That is all they do, but they do it well. They don't act on the bowels. They don't bother with mere symptoms. They won't cure any disease that isn't caused originally from bad blood. But when Dr. Williams' Pink Pills replace bad blood with good blood they strike straight at the root and cause of all common diseases like headaches, sideaches, backaches, kidney trouble, liver complaint, biliousness, indigestion, anæmia, neuralgia, sciatica, locomotor ataxia and the special secret troubles that every woman knows but that none of them like to talk about, even to their doctors. But you must have the genuine pills or you can't be cured, and the genuine always have the full name, "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People" on the wrapper around the box. Sold by all medicine dealers or sent direct by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Scientific Miscellany.

The fixation of the nitrogen of the air by the electrical process of Bradley and Lovejoy has proven a scientific success, but has not yet been developed commercially. Interest is still felt, therefore, in any means of adding artificial alkaline nitrates to an rapidly lessening stock of fertilizing material. The chemical process of Prof. Eschweiler, of Hanover, is being adopted in England, and consists in passing a mixture of air and steam over peat in a slow combustion. The steam is decomposed, the hydrogen combining with nitrogen of the air and of the peat to produce ammonia. This is taken up by sulphuric acid forming sulphate of ammonia, and it is claimed that enough can be produced, at moderate cost, to avert a fertilizer famine for a long time.

Collections of voices are being made for various purposes. The phonograms of the British Museum are designed to preserve for future generations the voices of famous people of our time; but the Vienna Academy of Sciences is going further, and seeks phonograms of languages. Already its collection includes popular songs of Gypsies and Arabians, Gaelic airs of Red Indian tribes, the dialects of Negroes and Malays, and so on. It is sending out special voice-hunting expeditions every year, and its agents are now scouring Australasia, Roumania, Istria, and other localities. Its latest plan is to phonograph the voices of animals, for scientific study.

Two of the world's interesting mammals have lately become extinct without attracting attention. An English naturalist points out that the great straight-horned race of the Indian buffalo, which was occasionally met with fifty or sixty years ago, is no longer known. The other vanished form is the wolf of the Falkland Islands, a type of considerable importance, which seems to have been exterminated by strychnine about thirty years ago.

The effect of food on the flavor of eggs is found by English medical man to be surprising. When the hens act as scavengers, their eggs are made unfit to eat, but a diet of sunflower seeds produces remarkably fine and sweet eggs.

THE CLAY BELT.

A detailed account of the resources and nature of the territory in the valley of the Mattagami, in the neighborhood of Abbitibi Lake and river has been submitted to the bureau of mines by Mr. H. L. Kerr. Mr. Kerr went north in charge of an exploration party sent out by the Department last spring. The expedition consisted of a geologist and an agricultural expert, together with a number of surveyors and voyageurs. Its chief purpose was to report on the possibilities of the country in the clay belt for settlement. The following is an extract from his report:

"Most of the time was spent on the Mattagami River. Topographically, that country may be described as made up of a vast plain with very occasional abrupt elevations of considerable altitude, from the tops of which the view extends for miles on all sides over land as level as a prairie and timbered largely with black spruce. Towards the south this passes into the Rocky-Huronian belt.

"The Mattagami itself is a splendid stream ranging from four chains in width in the upper part of its course to seven or eight chains in its lower stretches. It has in general, an even, gentle current, broken in several places by rapids and waterfalls. Several among the latter—Sturgeon Falls in Mahaffy Township, Yellow Falls two or three miles below Speight's first base line, Island Falls, a mile below this, and Jump Over Falls, about three and a half miles below the mouth of the Muskeg River,—offer splendid facilities for the development of water power.

"Most of the rock exposures were encountered six or eight miles north of Niven's First Base line, and consist of various Huronian schists, with intrusive masses of diabase. In places the rocks have been disturbed, and the only economic mineral seen was located. The small vein consisted of galena, and the general make-up of the region, where the rock exposures occurred, would suggest that it might be worth prospecting. The soil in this section of the country is sandy, and is forested chiefly with fair-sized jack pine and black spruce. Hurricanes of recent years have wrought havoc with the timber, and for miles we encountered continuous windfalls.

"North of this area the country becomes level, with good soil of clay and clay loam. Black spruce rather under the average size makes up the greater part of the forest, although some fine white spruce and frequent stretches of magnificent poplar and balm of Gilead and white birch were observed. By far the best country from an agricultural point of view seen during the summer is that section lying west of the Mattagami, and between Niven's Third Base and Speight's Second Base. Here the timber is larger and the land dryer, being drained by three rather fair-sized rivers, tributaries of the Mattagami.

"Muskegs, which were met with only occasionally in the southern part of the country, became more frequent toward the north, and in the extreme north cover considerable areas. Some of these contain several feet of excellent peat, which may eventually prove valuable when the country is opened up. From the little work done on the Frederick House and Abbitibi River I would infer that these peat bogs are more abundant in that region.

"The Indian inhabitants are not very numerous, but those whom we saw seem to be prosperous, and some more industrious than others have begun to cultivate the land and raise potatoes and other vegetables."

The expedition saw traces of beaver, moose, red deer, bears, martens, etc. Wild currants, gooseberries, red raspberries, and both high and low bush cranberries, all comparable to those in Southern Ontario, were abundant. Although slight frosts occurred in the early part of the season the first of any consequence was on Sept. 26, when 9 degrees were registered.

DIVERS' PARALYSIS.

This Disease Affects Its Victims Only Out of Water.

"Divers' paralysis," said the second mate, "proves homeopathy to be a fact. Homeopathy says that like cures like. For instance, if you have a fever take something that produces a fever, and you will recover. Well, divers' paralysis backs up this claim.

"The disease afflicts the pearl divers of Ceylon and the sponge divers of the Mediterranean. It attacks only the best men, the ones who go down deepest and stay longest, and it is supposed to be caused by the swift changes from one pressure of water to another that the diver undergoes when he pops up to the surface.

"This paralysis makes the diver quite helpless out of water. Yet under water it disappears altogether. The water causes divers' paralysis. The water in a truly homeopathic manner takes every vestige of the disease away.

"To the oyster beds of Ceylon and to the sponge fisheries of the Mediterranean many of the best divers are carried like infants. Helpless as logs, they lie in a row on the decks in the sunshine till their turn comes to descend. Then in Ceylon the pearl diver is carried to the boat's edge. He sits there, his hands on his knees, as if lost in thought (he is getting his breath), and suddenly—pop—he rolls awkwardly into the water. And the instant he disappears all his agility returns to him, and as easily as a boy would dive five feet after a white stone he dives over a hundred feet after the hidden pearls.

"With the paralyzed sponge diver it is the same story. Only, since he holds a heavy stone in his arms to bear him down to the bottom, he must be carried to the boat's side and dropped over bodily.

"These paralytics are like fish—awkward, helpless, flopping hideously about the deck, but the moment you toss them overboard away they dart, quick, graceful, dolphin-like."

ETIQUETTE AMONG PEERS.

Rules Laid Down to Preserve the Dignity of Their Chamber.

Besides insisting upon all due respect to themselves the peers suffer no disrespect to the stately gilded chamber in which they are accustomed to assemble. Even when parliament is not in session none but members are allowed to be covered there. Not even the eldest son of any peer may wear his hat in the room. "Neither is any person to stay there, nor any attendant on any nobleman but while he brings in his lord, and then he is to retire himself."

In 1703 official notice was taken of the fact that of late the doorkeepers have frequently presumed to come within the doors when the house is sitting, and it was therefore ordered that for the future this liberty be forbidden. Another point in which the peers are scrupulous to preserve their dignity is revealed in the standing order with reference to conferences between the two houses.

It sets forth that "the place of our meeting with the lower house upon conference is usually the painted chamber, where they are commonly before we come and expect our leisure. We are to come thither in a whole body and not some lords scattering before the rest, which both takes from the gravity of the lords and besides may hinder the lords from taking their proper places. We are to sit there and be covered, but they are not at any committee or conference either to be covered or sit down in our presence unless it be some infirm person and that by connivance in a corner out of sight, to sit, but not to be covered."

Although never rescinded, this regulation is now practically obsolete.—Chambers' Journal.

Reading For Fun and Profit.

Fear is expressed in some quarters that the multiplication of public libraries will lead to a decay in home libraries and that people will not read with the thoroughness and profit of former days. It is alleged that our fathers paid a stiff price for a book and read it to pieces to get the worth of their money, with the result that they learned more than does the library patron who skims through a volume only to sip the honey of literature. There is something in this theory, but the matter of cost is not enough to account for that hunger and thirst after information which make reading profitable.

The free library may be a dissipation to some, but it is a boon to many who are too poor to buy the books which will do them good. One who appreciates a really good book will make great sacrifice to own it, but that person must first know the worth of the treasure, and the library often points it out. Lovers of Shakespeare and the Bible are not satisfied to left these volumes rest on the library shelves, and it will be the same in the case of any loaned book, which the borrowers diligently read. From borrowing they will pass to owning. In these days of complex life it is seldom that one book completely covers a subject. Each book is one of a series like the school text book, and the student must fare on from height to height until the top is reached. In point of fact, the public library is a co-operative scheme—one book serves many minds. Furthermore, it gives free play to advance by the law of selection.

Backache, "The Blues"

Both Symptoms of Organic Derangement in Women—Thousands of Sufferers Find Relief.

How often do we hear women say: "It seems as though my back would break," or "Don't speak to me, I am all out of sorts?" These significant remarks prove that the system requires attention.

Backache and "the blues" are direct symptoms of an inward trouble which will sooner or later declare itself. It may be caused by diseased kidneys or some uterine derangement. Nature requires assistance and at once, and Lydia E Pinkham's Vegetable Compound instantly asserts its curative powers in all those peculiar ailments of women. It has been the standby of intelligent American women for twenty years, and the ablest specialists agree that it is the most universally successful remedy for woman's ills known to medicine.

The following letters from Mrs. Oakes and Mrs. MacNamee are among the many thousands which Mrs. Pinkham has received this year from those whom she has relieved.

Surely such testimony is convincing.

Mrs. J. P. Oakes of Prince of Wales Hotel, Head of St. Margaret's Bay, near Halifax, Halifax County, Nova Scotia, Canada, writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"After what your Vegetable Compound did for me, I am a firm believer that it is a wonderful medicine, and that any woman who is troubled with any of the ills we suffer from should try it and she will soon be convinced of its worth. Six bottles changed me from a peevish, despondent, sickly, ailing woman to a sweet tempered, healthy one, who rarely ever has a pain now, and who before was rarely without one. As a regulator, strengthener and a tonic, I think it has no superior and I certainly endorse it."

Mrs. Anna R. MacNamee of corner Queen and Wellington Streets, Kingston, Ont., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done all the good for me that it claims to do. I suffered with irregularities, backache and severe pains all through my body, and was very nervous and blue. I think I used a dozen different kinds of medicines, some prescribed by the doctor and some recommended by friends, but one bottle of Vegetable Compound was worth more to me than all the other medicines put together. My general health began to improve as soon as I began to use the Compound, and in three weeks I was a perfectly well woman."

When women are troubled with irregular, suppressed or painful menstruation, weakness, leucorrhœa, displacement or ulceration of the womb, that bearing down feeling, inflammation of the ovaries, backache, bloating (or flatulence), general debility, indigestion and nervous prostration, or are beset with such symptoms as dizziness, faintness, lassitude, excitability, irritability, nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, "all gone" and "want-to-be-left-alone" feelings, blues and hopelessness, they should remember there is one tried and true remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once removes such troubles.

No other medicine in the world has received such widespread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine has such a record of cures of female troubles Refuse to buy any substitute.

FREE ADVICE TO WOMEN.

Remember, every woman is cordially invited to write to Mrs. Pinkham if there is anything about her symptoms she does not understand. Mrs. Pinkham's address is Lynn, Mass., her advice is free and cheerfully given.

SOMETHING FOR NOTHING.

Strong Words From Toronto Pulpit On a Recent Sunday.

Rev. J. T. Sunderland spoke on a recent Sunday morning on the text "It is more blessed to give than to receive." He strongly condemned that spirit, too common in our day, which wishes to get what does not belong to it, and receive what it does not pay for. He said, in part: What is a worthy aim of life for a man? Is it to receive without rendering a full equivalent? Does any really high-minded man want to get more than he gives? What do we call a man, who, in business matters, obtains what he makes no proper return for? We call him a rogue or a swindler. Is it worse to be a rogue or a swindler in business than in other things? Is it more criminal to rob a man than to rob society? Or to rob in matters which the law takes cognizance of than in matters which it does not? Says a distinguished and honored statesman: "The darkest hour in the history of any young man is that in which he first consciously cherishes the desire to get something for nothing." History bears out the saying is true. Such a young man has set his foot on a downward road. No human being, at least, no one that has health and strength has any right to want to get something for nothing. He who cherishes such a desire is nourishing in himself either the pauper or the criminal habit of mind. He who, being able to support himself, is willing to be supported by another, is in spirit a pauper. He who is willing to get a living by any practice or business, no matter how legal it may be, which does not involve the rendering of a just and full equivalent for what he receives, is at heart a criminal; all that he lacks is either the opportunity or the courage to make him a criminal de facto.

Here lies the greatest evil of lotteries and gambling. It is not so much that men lose such or such sums of money. That is bad enough. But the worst evil lies in the demoralizing and degrading influence of what is done, on men's characters. It lies in the fact that gambling and lotteries cultivate in men a willingness and a desire to obtain something for nothing; to get something that is not rightly theirs; to gain possession of money which they render no just equivalent. That spirit always and everywhere undermines the integrity and rots the moral fibre of the man or woman who harbors it.

We often find success in life measured by what men get or accumulate, without reference to the return they make to society. No standard of measure could be more false. It is the standard of the robber. Are we to call that man successful who, by his financial shrewdness, amasses millions, and does nothing with his wealth to benefit the world? Rather should we call his life a lamentable and disgraceful failure.

Are we to call that man successful who has found a lucrative sinecure—a place with large pay but with little or nothing to do, and little or no service to render to anybody? Rather ought we to pity any man, and pray God to have mercy on his poor, poverty-stricken, selfish soul, who desires any such pauper place. A true man wants to pay for all he gets in this world; he is not a mendicant. The kind of place a real man seeks is one of activity, of influence, of achievement, of service, where he can be something better than a leach living on the blood of others. He wants to do his proper part—his own, right, strong part—in the world's work. He wants to be of some use. He wants to lend a hand in assuaging the world's sorrows, righting its wrongs, and bringing for humanity a better day. No one who is a man can for one moment be willing to be a pauper, or a parasite, or a cipher, much less a robber.

The only rule of action that is for a moment worthy of a true man is, not to give as little as he can, but as much as he can; not to give merely as much as he receives, but more. He who is really a man desires to make some positive contribution to the world's advance. He is not content to leave the world as good as he found it; he wants to leave it better than he found it.

Vocal or instrumental music as a therapeutic agent has been found by Dr. F. S. Kennedy to be a valuable aid in cases of melancholia, insomnia, hysteria, family affliction, business reverses, delirium, pain, and mental or physical fatigue. A German physician has also successfully used music to lessen the distress and after-effects from anesthetics.

MOST good Grocers sell Red Rose Tea.

If a grocer recommends Red Rose Tea, it will be an honest opinion, because he makes less profit on Red Rose Tea than on most others.

Next Summer's Vacation

Should be the journey westward over the Northern Pacific Railway, through Yellowstone National Park by four-horse coach—a magnificent journey through a wierd and marvelous land—thence through the great passes of the Rocky Mountains to the Puget Sound country. It is a scenic treat.

Northern Pacific train service is unexcelled. Excellent meals and comfortable coach equipment, attentive porters and all the conveniences. Rates are moderate. Liberal stopovers. A card to W. T. Mason, District Passenger Agent, 215 Ellicott Square, Buffalo, N. Y., will bring information. Send six cents in stamps for "Wonderland 1905." It tells facts you should know.

On Thursday T. Hillhouse Brown the Hamilton bank manager, was sentenced to seven years in the penitentiary for embezzlement and forgery.

LONG ago we realized that the baking and roasting qualities of the oven of a range are of greatest importance to the range user. We put our knowledge, gained by years of experience, on this one point. The result was the Oxford Diffusive Oven Flue. This is the exclusive feature, the Imperial Oxford stands solely the perfect baking and roasting range in the land.

After getting this most important feature, we to such a point of perfection we naturally neglect any other improvement which could add to the working of the range. These improvements were incorporated in the because they added to the life of the range, simplified its operation or economized fuel.

Of these improvements the draw-out oven rack is one which will instantly appeal to the cook. The handle of this rack is outside the range—always cool enough to hold with the bare hand. By pulling this handle forward anything roasting in the oven may be drawn out onto the oven shelf to be basted, without touching the hot pan or reaching into the oven. The same applies to the testing of bread, cake or pies.

We would like you to see the Imperial Oxford Range. If your dealer doesn't handle it, write us for illustrated literature and the address of the nearest dealer who does. 15
