EUGENIA

BABY MAGEE DEAD

There was a sad gloom cast over this viicnity when the news was spread of the sudden death of Elva Marion, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Magee, 8th Line. She was a bright little child of one year and twenty days. She was seized on Sunday, with intestinal influenza, and passed away to be with Jesus, on Wednesday morning, Sept. 30th, 1925. As she lay in her last sleep, in her little white casket, she was a symbol of innocence, purity and love; too beautiful to remain in this cold world of ours, so she has departed to a world of bliss, where pain, sin and sorrow are unknown. Rev. Jos. Harrower of the United Church officiated at the house and grave, where he delivered a very comforting sermon. Interment took place on Thursday afternoon in the family plot, Salem cemetery, beside the remains of her two dear little sisters, who have joined the Heavenly Band.

The little casket was laden with pretty floral tributes, which expresed sympathy and devotion, a spray from sister Erva, a sheaf from the school children; a spray from the cousins, a spray from the Linton children, a spray from Mrs. A. F. Pedlar.

Besides her parents, she leaves in sore bereavement, one sister Erva, Our deepest sympathy is xtended to the family in their sorrow.

There are some who miss her sadly.
And find the time long since she went.
There are some who think of her daily.
And try to be brave and content,
As they shed tears that are silent
And breathe deep sighs of regret.
For she was theirs to remember
If all the world should forget.

MUST PAY FOR PAPER

In giving judgment against a delinquent subscriber recently, Judge O'Reilly, of Cornwall, made the statement that newspapers publishers had hard enough time in financing their business without being done out of the subscriptions. If a person wanted to stop a newspaper the proper way was for him to pay all arrears, and get a receipt, or if he was paid up, refuse to take the paper at the post office, and have a record made of his refusal. A man who owed for a newspaper could not stop taking a paper, and expect the publisher to go without his pay .It may be added that no publisher wishes to force his newspaper on anyone and any subscriber wishing his paper discontinued will have no trouble if he does so in an honest and business like way. Hundreds of dollars are lost to publishers every year by those, who after the subscription has expired for three or six months decide to discontinue the paper, and send it back marked "Refused." The amount is too small for the publisher to make a fuss about, but all the same it amounts to a neat little sum in a year.

A choral society has been organized at Orangeville, and numbers over one hundred voices.
