The Nobility.

The nobility goes back to the very beginning of human society, when world in woods the noble savage ran. At first the institution rested on brute force. The physically strongest were supreme. It was an aristocracy of muscle and brawn. By and by intelligent cunning was added to the brute strength, and the strongest and smartest became the "top of the heap." With the advantages accruing to it from the possession of the most strength and cunning the "nobility" entrenched itself so securely that it could not be shaken, and well down into the eighteenth century it was practically supreme. By the time of the French and American revolutions, however, the world was beginning to wake up to the fact that the "nobility" was a hoax and an imposition, and since those two famous events the ancient institution has been in a bad way.

April Woman's Home Companion.

The April number of the Woman's Home Companion contains several notable articles and is, in addition, a thoroughly artistic and beautiful issue. Kellogg Durland contributes his second article on "Women of the Russian Revolt." Jane Addams writes a thoughtful and appealing article on "The Working Woman and the Ballot." Dr. Edward Everett Hale gives a helpful talk on "The Meaning of Home," and Elizabeth Stuart Phelps continues her serial story, "Though Life U's Do Part." There some excellent short stories. The April issue is beautiful in its Easter cover and in many fine pictorial features by Herman C. Wall, Florence Scovel Shinn, Elier Macauley and others.

MAGISTRATE PRAISES ZAM-BUK.

Magistrate Rose, son of ex-Mayor Rose, of Montreal, writes: For many years I have been troubled with a serious eczematous [illegible] which was at times very painful. I have tried various household remedies but they proved altogether useless. I then took medical advice. No one but sufferers can know what I suffered, but I was advised to try Zam-Buk, and have to say that after a few nights' application I was relieved from a long period of sleeplessness. Magistrate Rose, J.P. for B.C., also has been cured of a chronic skin complaint by Zam-Buk, and I determined to try it. Editor [illegible] Zam-Buk is a wonderful healer.
