Prevention of Tuberculosis.

The year 1909 will be marked in the calendar as a red letter year in the history of the crusade against consumption. The movement received a great impulse from the congress of distinguished physicians which was held in Washington, U. S., in the autumn of 1908 to consider the further measures to be taken to stamp out this dreadful enemy to the life and happiness of mankind.

Canada, in common with the rest of North America, perhaps we should say the whole civilized world, has participated in the renewed and increased activity which resulted from the deliberations of the congress.

Never since the organization of the Canadian Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis has there been such activity displayed in Canada in this fight for life. Older branch associations have been reinvigorated, new associations have been formed, which are showing in many cases a vigorous activity. Several new institutions for the relief and treatment of consumptives have been opened and the demand for our literature has been larger than ever. Take it all in all, 1909 was a year of great progress in the work of the Association.

The Tenth Annual Meeting will be held in Montreal on the 7th of June next and preparations are being made to make this one of the best, if not the best meeting in the history of the Association.

A GENEROUS OFFER

Higginbotham Drug Co. Will Refund Your Money if Parisian Sage Doesn't Banish Dandruff.

Pretty strong talk, perhaps you'll say, but it's honest talk, every word of it, because if Higginbotham Drug Co. was not absolutely certain, if they did not know from actual results obtained they could not make such a generous offer.

Parisian Sage, which can now be obtained in every town in Canada, is also guaranteed to stop falling hair and itching scalp.

It is the ideal, delightful, rejuvenating hair dressing that makes hair grow in abundance. Parisian Sage is a prime favorite with women, because it keeps the hair brilliant and fascinating, is daintly perfumed, and is not sticky or greasy.

The price for a large bottle is only 50 cents at Higginbotham Drug Co's., who guarantee it. Sold everywhere, or direct, all charges prepaid, by the Canadian makers, Giroux Mfg. Co., Fort Erie, Ont.

English Magazines.

Among the best of the English magazines are those published by Cassell & Co.

The April number of Cassell's Magazine contains "The Ghost Knight," a romantic story of olden time, by Warwick Deeping; "Later Chronicles of the Burglars' Club, II, The Kaiser's Portrait," by Henry A. Hering; the second instalment of "The Girl With the Red Hair," by by Max Pemberton; "The Dead Control," another Coverley Gutch story, by Paul Urquhart; "Sir Jeremiah's Will," another of the "Lady Molly of Scotland Yard" series, by Baroness Oreszy; "Her Prisoner," by Lella Burton Wells; "In Clover," by Frank Henty, and other stories. There are able articles on various subjects, and the illustrations are as fine as usual.

The April Quiver contains an instalment of the serial story, "Love's Barrier," by Annie S. Swan, and complete stories by Fred M. White, E. Burrows, Oswald Wildbridge and Helen Prothero Lewis. Among the articles on various subjects are "A Quaker Baron and His Bibles," by Ernest H. Kann; "The Future of the Race," by Arthur Christopher Benson, C. V. O.; "A Walk Round the Walls of Jerusalem," by Dora M. Jones, and "The Work of Imperial Defence," by the editor. "The Boys' and Girls' Pages" and other departments are as interesting as usual.

A Rejected Novel.

Before he had achieved fame the French novelist Xavier de Montepin, on concluding a long and elaborate tale of adventure, took it, full of hope, to a publisher, who promptly declined it on even the most advantageous terms, to the writer's poignant mortification. Twenty years afterward this identical publisher besought at his hands a sensational story, one of those serials which were the delight of grisettes, offering any price within reason. "Well," said De Montepin, "I will oblige you, but my terms must be very heavy. I want 20,000 francs." After many protests it was paid. In telling the story De Montepin used to add, "The best of the business was that it was the very same story which he had previously rejected and which I had in various directions endeavored in vain to dispose of."

The April Rod and Gun.

The manifold delights of the days with the rod and line, the season for which is now so near at hand, find some able exponents in the April number of Rod and Gun in Canada, published by W. J. Taylor, Woodstock, Ont. The immense advantages of Algonquin Park Park for fishing excursions, and descriptions of some of its many wonderful lakes, are given prominence in a beautifully illustrated article. C. W. Young gives an account of some new waters along the line of the new Transcontinental in northern Quebec. The wanderings of a fishing party lost in the Rockies are well told by E. M. Allworth, the story illustrating the difference between fishing in the north and in the west. A defence of the catfish will be read with interest. Two good bear stories, one of duck hunting, a tale of a good dog, and game bird hunting by motor car add variety and give increased interest to an excellent number.

Church Encouragement of Sport.

Ecclesiastic recognition has been given the sport of skeeing in Norway in the special short, early services held in all the churches during the season for the convenience of skeers. These services are called skeeing prayers, and a stranger coming into the sacred edifices on such an occasion might think he had blundered into the barracks of a skee corps. However, the services are much liked and very well attended, and there is no difference of opinion about the wisdom of the church authorities in thus encouraging a sport making so strongly for healthy bodies and therefore going a long way toward making healthy souls.—Outing.

TWO CLASSES OF HUMANITY.

Givers and Takers Are the Two Great Divisions of Mankind.

The world of humanity is divided into two classes—those who give and those who receive. The perfect woman is she who understands how to receive as well as how to give, who is as graceful in acceptance as she is in bestowal.

"I am sorry for that girl," said a friend of mine, with whom I had been discussing people in general, and a very charming young girl in particular, at whose coming out celebration we had both been present the afternoon before.

"Why do you say such a thing?" I asked in some surprise. "To me she has always seemed to belong to the highly-favored class of mortals that the gods have exempted from the ordinary cares of humanity."

"It is not a question of environment,' was the answer, "but of temperament. She will always give more than she receives. Emotional, sensitive and impulsive, the very qualities that render her so attractive, are those that must bring her sorrow. A girl of her type must eternally be at a disadvantage with the world around her, on whom she squanders her sympathy and tenderness in vain."

"But," said I hesitatingly, "such a nature as you describe finds compensation in the mere joy of giving. If the sensitive and emotional suffer keenly, they also enjoy keenly. It is natural for such a type to express itself lavishly without a thought of recompense deserved, or looked forward to. Like the sunshine and sweet air and the perfume of flowers, the temperamental giving out is impartial and the not blesses the giver."

"Then you are making literal application of the wisdom that 'it is more blessed to give than to receive.' Is that what you are trying to bring home to me?" inquired my friend.

"Not altogether," I said, "for people differ widely, and it seems to me that the blessing is broad enough to benefit both classes. Isn't it right for the flowers to open their petals to the kiss of the sun? Isn't it equally so for the two classes—those who give and those who receive. The perfect woman is she who understands how to receive as well as how to give, who is as graceful in acceptance as she is in bestowal.

"If she understands and appreciates aright, the joy of giving for herself should she, through herself, be unwilling to deny that joy to others? From the smiles which come naturally to her lips, even to the bestowal of her own dear self, a woman thrills to the joy of giving. It makes as much or more the happiness of her life as her joy in receiving."—Mary St. Ives.

Presence of Mind.

During a performance at one of the London theatres a man and his wife had a quarrel on the stage, the woman in a rage of jealousy, the man trying to persuade her that she was too suspicious and too passionate. Both were acting with great spirit when the wife waved her arm too near the candle and her muslin dress was in flames in an instant. Both actors kept their heads however. The husband extinguished the fire and, proceeding with his part, interpolated

"You see, my dear, I was right. You dare up at the least thing."

TWO BARGAINS IN ONE.

A Partnership of Papers at a Low Rate.

We would call the attention of our readers to the extraordinary offer by which they can secure a dual benefit, this paper and The Weekly Mail and Empire, the two together from now to next New Year's Day for the nominal rate of 75 cents.

While we are not insensible to the marked appreciation of this paper by our many subscribers, yet we will gladly welcome to our list all, who by any reason whatever, are not yet of the number.

The above offer affords an easy and cheap way to find out the merits of a local paper, which, above everything, stands for the progress and advancement of this district.

The Weekly Mail and Empire, which has joined forces with us, is known from ocean to ocean as the most useful and practical weekly for the agriculturist, and is also valued alike in town and country as the proper paper for the home.

MI-O-NA

RELIEVES STOMACH MISERY ALMOST IMMEDIATELY.

If the food you ate at your last meal did not digest, but laid for a long time like lead on your stomach, then you have indigestion and quick action should be taken.

Of course there are many other symptoms of indigestion, such as belching up of sour food, heartburn, dizziness, shortness of breath and foul breath, and if you have any of them, your stomach is out of order and should be corrected.

Mi-o-na tablets have cured thousands of cases of indigestion and stomach trouble. If you have any stomach distress, Mi-o-na will relieve instantly.

But Mi-o-na unlike most so-called dyspepsia remedies, does more than relieve; it permanently cures dyspepsia or any stomach trouble by putting energy and strength into the walls of the stomach, where the gastric juices are produced.

A large box of Mi-o-na tablets costs but 50 cents at Higginbotham Drug Co's. and are guaranteed to cure or money back. When others fail, Mi-o-na cures. It is a producer of flesh when the body is thin; it cleanses the stomach and bowels; purifies the blood and makes rich red blood.

Your money back if Purity Flour does not prove entirely satisfactory in the baking.

DON'T simply buy flour from the dollar and cent side of it. Buy high-quality flour. That means PURITY FLOUR. The first little extra cost is more than made up by the extra number of loaves of bread it makes—by the superiority of the bread and pastry in sweetness of flavor and nourishing qualities. Buying Purity Flour is a safe investment. You get large returns, not only on account of Purity's ability to produce more, but because Purity contains the greater nutriment and the vim of a strong hard wheat flour. Food made from Purity Flour gives the consumer health, snap and force, which cannot be gained from the use of the weaker soft wheat flour.

EX-EMPRESS' MEMOIRS

WHY EUGENIE HAS NEVER PUBLISHED HER BOOK.

Although She Has Been Offered Fabulous Prices by the Biggest Firms in the World She Has Steadily Refused to Let Her Memories of Great Men of the Nineteenth Century See the Light of Day.

M. Jules Claretie had made public some of the facts about the spurious edition of the ex-Empress Eugenie's "Memoirs," which is said to be now ready for the market. The present writer can add further information received direct by him from a friend and confidante of the ex-empress.

Some four years ago this great lady did consider seriously the possibility of giving to the world some, at least, of the priceless letters and documents in her possession—letters which, it is said, would make it necessary for historians of the Franco-German war, and the reign of Napoleon III. to rewrite their work to a considerable extent.

A publisher who was among the first to hear the news, said to the writer at the time:

"I consider this book, if it can be had, to be the most valuable work that is available to the world to-day, in the way of memoirs."

Offers to her majesty poured in from all sides, and I understand that she finally had in sight $100,000 for the magazine rights and as cash guarantee for the book rights, the money to be paid on the nail on delivery of the MS. to a French publisher who was conducting the negotiations on behalf of a syndicate made up of one leading publisher in each of the principal countries, this sum to be augmented by heavy royalties on the book.

There was much traveling of publishers to and fro between London, Berlin, Paris and New York, and the arrangements were so far completed that contracts were drawn up between everybody concerned—all except with the "grande dame" principally interested.

She, on looking over the documents for which the publishers were so hungry, decided, so I am told, that their publication might throw too much light directly and indirectly on the causes of the Franco-German war which plunged France into misery, debt, and humiliation, and cost her Alsace and Lorraine, and likewise her majesty's husband and his throne in 1871.

There were details, too, that did not show the amiable Napoleon III. in the best light, and so at last his widow set her imperial foot down on the idea of publishing any of her memoirs or her letters.

It was a trying time for the ex-empress after that decision. Personal friends, induced, some of them, by promises of goodly commissions, kept on approaching her with all sorts of arguments to prove that it was her duty to the world to open those precious safes at Farnborough, England, where she lives. Her personal secretary, M. Pietri, was kept busy answering letters and keeping off impoverished marquises with publishers' commissions in their pockets.

According to her own statement, not one line of the forthcoming "Memoirs" has she written, or read, or authorized, and it was undoubtedly at her personal request that M. Claretie has made the announcement that the "Memoirs" are bogus. They have been offered all over Europe, and came near being sold to at least one American publisher. Now that the facts have come out, probably they will be suppressed, although it is said that a huge French edition has already been printed.

Of course, the financial side of the offers made to the ex-Empress Eugenie did not appeal to her, for she is extremely rich—probably one of the richest women in Europe. Perhaps her own inclinations were not altogether in the way, either, for her final decision was reached only a short time ago, after a visit from her nephew and heir, Victor Napoleon, who, doubtless, would be Napoleon IV., emperor of France, at this moment, if the republic had not been declared.

He will inherit her millions. He has never given up hope of getting back to the throne of France, as soon as he can be reinforced with the wealth of his imperial kinswoman, and naturally he would not like to have the old scandals and discussions revived—as revived they would be if the ex-empress should tell a tithe of what she knows, however carefully that tithe might be edited.

The ex-empress has added to her house at Farnborough an immense annex of corrugated iron, in which many mementoes are stored, including two of the magnificent state coaches, lined with white silk, which were once used by her. Among other treasures is the beautiful little perambulator, a gift to the ex-empress soon after the birth of the Prince Imperial, from Queen Victoria and the Prince Consort. Pictures of the Bonaparte family abound, the most interesting, perhaps, of all being one of the great Napoleon as a youth, and another of the ex-empress herself, surrounded by the ladies of the court.

At Farnborough, Eugenie has been even as charitable as her great means will allow. In the gayest of her days she had thought for the poor. When she fled from the Tuileries, and rude hands were laid on her wardrobe, fifty parasols were found in one drawer, her furs were valued at $150,000, and the whole of her wardrobe at $1,000,000. Yet she has been lavish where charities were concerned.

She holds the highest record in sponsorship; for she is godmother to 3,600 children. When her only child, the late Prince Imperial, was born, Napoleon III. announced that he and his wife would stand sponsors to all children born in France on the same day; and, despite changed circumstances, the ex-empress still keeps an exact list of her godchildren, and has set aside a legacy for each one now living.

A Friendly Criticism.

On the occasion of an exhibition given at the Corcoran Art Gallery, in Washington, by the Art Students' league one youthful painter was endeavoring to impress upon a friend the merits of a work of his own.

"You would be amazed," announced the artist, "if you knew the amount of time expended on my 'Two Sisters.'"

"Oh, I don't know that I would," airily responded the friend, "inasmuch as I hear that people stand in front of it for hours trying to make out what it is."

CERM INOCULATION.

Late Nicholas Murphy, K.C., Tried Hard to Prove a Grave Charge.

Readers of the daily papers are aware that in one of the large American cities a doctor was recently on trial on a charge of murdering his wife's uncle by inoculating him with typhoid germs. Such charges, which seem fantastic but are not beyond the region of possibility, have been made not infrequently since the germ theory of disease became accepted by scientists. Over fifteen years ago the late Nicholas Murphy, K.C., had a case of the kind which he desired to have ventilated in the public prints. It may be said that he did not succeed, for the most sensational editor then would have shied at such a story and there would have to be a prima facie case of overwhelming strength before a Canadian newspaper would touch such a story to-day. The case in question was one that involved a politician long since dead, who was at that time very prominent in Ontario. Charges of disreputable conduct in his private life were made against him, and the chief witness against him was a young woman who lived in his home as a sort of companion to his wife. Her own character, which was good, was not involved, and she was apparently in good health also when she fell ill with some slight sickness and was treated by a physician who was related to the politician in question. She never rallied, and before the criminal charges and the libel actions arising from the charges came to trial she had succumbed to galloping consumption.

To his dying day Nicholas Murphy, who was counsel for the young woman and who was responsible for bringing the original charges to light, averred that she was a victim of tubercular inoculation at the hands of the physician, but he could obtain no credence for his theory in any quarter.

Lords.

Not being in sympathy with certain actions of the hereditary branch of the British Parliament, The London Chronicle has been speculating on the possible future of the word "lord." "So far it has resisted the democratization that has befallen 'lady.' No one talks of 'chorus lords' or begins a speech with 'ladies and lords.' In modern Greek, however, 'lordos' means simply 'Mr.,' and it would be rash to predict that our descendants will not all be 'lords' in the twenty first century."

Zam-Buk in 3 Accidents.

It would seem that Zam-Buk, the famous healing balm we hear so highly spoken of everywhere, is particularly useful in the family circle. A report sent by Mrs. E. Davey, 786 Ellice Ave., Winnipeg, will illustrate this. She says: "My little boy, of three, while playing, fell from a high verandah to the ground, cutting his forehead badly. Instead of calling a doctor who would undoubtedly have put in a number of stitches, I bathed the wound well, and applied Zam-Buk. The little fellow, although suffering keenly, soon had relief from his pain. In the course of three weeks by applying Zam-Buk daily, the wound in his forehead was nicely healed.

"Since then I have also used Zam-Buk for a boil which came on my cheek and which proved very painful and looked unsightly. Zam-Buk soon drew the boil to a head and it then quickly banished it.

"Another time my baby was scalded on her left thigh and calf of leg with boiling water. This was a severe scald and the child suffered cruelly, screaming from pain. Directly it was done I thought to use Zam-Buk, as we had a box in the house, and spreading some on lint I wrapped up the baby's limb. Next morning she rested much easier and I applied a fresh bandage with Zam-Buk. I kept this treatment up daily and was rewarded by seeing a great improvement each time I dressed the wound. In a very short space of time the scalds were all nicely healed.

"I cannot recommend this wonderful healing preparation too highly for family use, and I have such great faith in its healing powers that my house is never without a box."

For all skin injuries and diseases, piles, eczema, salt rheum and face sores Zam-Buk is absolutely unequalled. 50c. box all druggists and stores, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Refuse all substitutes.

Another Carrie!

An unrehearsed comedy, in which the chief actors were a slightly inebriated Italian, a quart bottle of whiskey and a disciple of Carrie Nation, took place in the Toronto Union Station recently.

While the native of Sunny Italy was inviting some companions to share in a bottle of rye, a representative of the W.C.T.U. arrived on the scene and at once took in the situation. Snatching the bottle from the hand of the astonished Italian, she ran to the track and dashed it on the rails.

When asked the reason for her action she replied that she was only doing her duty by removing temptation, adding that she wished she could break the neck of the saloonkeeper who had sold the whisky as easily as she had broken that bottle.

Mancuto, the Italian who got two fellow countrymen, was convicted of manslaughter at Cobourg, and sentenced to 10 years in penitentiary.
