McClure's Magazine.

Jeffry Farnol, the English novelist, has become the sensation of the literary world through his great story, "The Broad Highway." In the April number of McClure's begins a new novel by him, "The Amateur Gentleman." The scene is laid in England, and the period is the late Georgian. Owen Johnson's serial, "Stover at Yale," nears completion, and will be followed soon by another, "The Sixty-first Second." In "Great French Mysteries," Marie Belloc Lowndes writes of the strange case of Marie Lafarge. "Alexander's Masquerade," by Willa Sibert Cather, is concluded. "Matrimony—Our Most Neglected Profession," is a talk on the lack of training of girls for married life. "Why We Have no Army" is an interview with the Chief of Staff of the United States Army in which he enlarges on its inefficiency and how to make it what it should be. There are articles on American politics and politicians and complete stories.

Experimental French.

Following the laudable example of Speaker Sproule, David Henderson, the veteran from Halton, who has had a seat in Parliament for the past twenty years, has taken up the study of the French language. Wishing to test his prowess, David turned to his desk-mate, Dr. Eugene Paquet, of L'Islet, the other day, and said:

"Voulez-vous pretez moi votre canif?"

The man from L'Islet looked mystified for a moment, and then said politely:

"No, thank you. I never take anything so early in the day. Toronto Saturday Night.

Facts About Indigestion and Its Relief That Should Interest You.

Although Indigestion and Dyspepsia are so prevalent, most people do not thoroughly understand their cause and cure. There is no reason why most people should not eat anything they desire—if they will only chew it carefully and thoroughly. Many actually starve themselves into sickness through fear of eating every good-looking, good-smelling, and good-tasting food, because it does not agree with them.

The best thing to do is to fit yourself to digest any good food.

We believe we can relieve Dyspepsia. We are so confident of this fact that we guarantee and promise to supply the medicine free of all cost to every one who will use it, who is not perfectly satisfied with the results which it produces. We exact no promises, and put no one under any obligation whatever. Surely, nothing could be fairer. We are located right here and our reputation should be sufficient assurance of the genuineness of our offer.

We want every one troubled with Indigestion or Dyspepsia in any form to come to our store and buy a box of Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets. Take them home and give them a reasonable trial, according to directions. Then, if not satisfied, come to us and get your money back. They are very pleasant to take; they aid to soothe the irritable stomach, to strengthen and invigorate the digestive organs, and to promote a healthy and natural bowel action, thus leading to perfect and healthy digestion and assimilation.

A 25c. package of Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets furnishes 15 days' treatment. In ordinary cases, this is sufficient to produce a cure. In more chronic cases, a longer treatment, of course, is necessary, and depends upon the severity of the trouble. For such cases, we have two larger sizes which sell for 50c. and $1.00. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies in this community only at our store—The Rexall Store, F. B. Smith.

[illegible] Expedition

Starting Soon for the Island of New London, Conn.

Unless one can afford the time and expense of a whaling ship and a voyage into the Arctic, there is no sea hunting that excels sword-fishing off New London, Conn. Really you do not fish for the sword fish—you hunt him. When you find him, you fight him to a finish—his finish or yours. The season is the two adjoining weeks of June and July. In the dawn of morning you sail, or steam, or motor, into the open sea. By nine o'clock you are anchored in the Sword belt with two men aloft, in the look-out. They sight a fin, signal and the boat speeds ahead. If the fish is at rest on the surface, it is easy to approach him. He treats the boat with contempt. He dislikes meeting a boat head-on and he resents being followed, but if you get him crossing under your bow, the man in the "pulpit," away forward, usually drives a harpoon into him, and then the fight begins. There are 400 feet of cable attached to the iron, and a barrel at the other end. No, you do not make him fast to your boat. Maddened by the sting of the steel, he heads for the open sea. When in deep water, he goes down, taking the barrel with him. While this one is bobbing the barrel, you may spear another. In fact, there have been as many as four barrels afloat from the same boat at one time. When a barrel becomes comparatively quiet, two men put off in a small boat to fetch the fish. Often, at sight of the small boat, the fish revives and makes a last desperate fight for his life. One big fellow in these waters drove his sword through the boat and through the man who was handling it, killing him instantly. Usually the fighting boats are armored, having a thin piece of sheet iron along the water line. The average length of the sword fish killed there is 12 feet; the average time taken to kill one is three hours, and they are worth in the fish markets about fifty dollars each. A 50-foot boat with 15 ft. to 18 ft. beam is the usual thing for sword-fishing, and after a few cruises, following and fighting sword fish, the ordinary sports of the sea become tame.

A WONDERFUL DISCOVERY.

An eminent scientist, the other day, gave his opinion that the most wonderful discovery of recent years was the discovery of Zam-Buk. Just think! As soon as a single thin layer of Zam-Buk is applied to a wound or a sore, such injury is insured against blood poison! Not one species of microbe has been found that Zam-Buk does not kill!

Then again. As soon as Zam-Buk is applied to a sore, or a cut, or to skin disease, it stops the smarting. That is why children are such friends of Zam-Buk. They care nothing for the science of the thing. All they know is that Zam-Buk stops their pain. Mothers should never forget this.

Again. As soon as Zam-Buk is applied to a wound or to a diseased part, the cells beneath the skin's surface are so stimulated that new healthy tissue is quickly formed. This forming of fresh healthy tissue from below is Zam-Buk's secret of healing. The tissue thus formed is worked up to the surface and literally casts off the diseased tissue above it. This is why Zam-Buk cures are permanent.

Only the other day Mr. Marsh, of 101 Delorimier Ave., Montreal, called upon the Zam-Buk Company and told them that for over twenty-five years he had been a martyr to eczema. His hands were at one time so covered with sores that he had to sleep in gloves. Four years ago Zam-Buk was introduced to him, and in a few months it cured him. To-day over three years after his cure of a disease he had for twenty-five years he is still cured, and has had no trace of any return of the eczema!

All druggists sell Zam-Buk at 50c. box, or we will send free trial box if you send this advertisement and a 1c. stamp (to pay return postage). Address Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

Facts About the Chinese Famine.

Area of affected districts, thirty to fifty thousand square miles.

Number of people who may meet death by starvation before next harvest, two to four million. In some districts the famine is the worst in forty years.

$1.00 will provide for one person for one month; $3.00 may save a life; $15.00 may save a family from starvation.

The following is an extract from the report of Mr. J. D. Jameson, the engineer sent out by the Red Cross Society of America to make a survey of the famine district in China:

"As to the condition of the people, the suffering, starvation, cannibalism, robbery, etc., have been described each year for many years by the missionaries who live and work amongst them, but to me, worse than all the acute and actual suffering, is the mental and moral effect these years of want and discouragement are having upon the sufferers. Amongst a people with years of good harvests at their backs, although a terrible flood is a dreadful calamity, when the shock passes there is a rebound and a vitality which makes for strenuous work in repairing the damage and building guards for the future, which is the normal recuperative power of a healthy people; but in North Anhui and North Kiangsu this vital recuperative power is entirely lacking, killed by continuous years of failure and starvation. Year after year the crops are a failure by what appears an act of God, then the farm animals are eaten, then there is no seed for new crops, then the small farm is sold and the money soon expended and the choice comes between begging and stealing, and often not even this choice, as there is but little to steal, and the strong take that."

It is suggested that all Canadian relief funds will be remitted through Canadian channels direct to China. The Bank of Toronto will be pleased to forward subscriptions from any part of Canada. Joseph Henderson, Vice-President of that bank, being Hon. Treasurer of "Canadian National Fund," seerted for the relief of the famine. "He gives twice who gives quickly."

CANADA THE PLACE

A Lecturer Advises Young Londoners To Come to This Country

Mr. Thomas Sedgwick who is responsible for the emigration of young people within the Empire addressed two thousand young Britons in South London recently. They plied him with questions as he held out to them the prospect of an open-air life, a thousand times more profitable and more fascinating than an existence spent in the poorer suburbs of London. The lecturer, drawing on his experiences in New Zealand, made the vast gulf between life in London and in the Oversea territories more vividly apparent by displaying on a screen typical pictures of the slums, in which many of them spend their lives, and following them with slides showing first the vast untenanted areas of Canada, and then the preparation for farm life, draining, dairying, fruit, sheep, and cattle farming, ploughing, and harvesting. He was frequently loudly applauded, particularly for the statement that it had been proved up to the hilt that town lads make the best farm laborers, settlers, and colonists.

SIX GENERATIONS

The Remarkable Longevity of a French Family

Writing to the "Echo de Paris," a correspondent declares that his wife who is twenty-one, has a little daughter of eighteen months. The baby's grandmother is forty-five, and this lady's mother is seventy-four and her grandmother ninety-five. These five generations are all Paris-born and bred, except the junior sprig, who saw the light in the suburbs.

From Libourne, however, another correspondent hastens to inform the world that a baby girl has just been born to him by his young sixteen-year-old wife. The following is the ascendant family tree in the feminine line of this newcomer into the world: Grandmother 33, great-grandmother 53, great-great-grandmother 71, and gerat-great-great-grandmother 88, whilst the mother of this last old lady died at the age of 105, just three months too soon to allow of her being one of the greatest of all great-great-grandmothers.

FACILITIES FOR WHEAT

The New Hudson Bay Route is Selected to Revolutionize Transportation

"Is the Hudson Bay route feasible for general communication with Europe?" This question was addressed to a member of the firm that will build docks at Fort Churchill. He replied: "Certainly! I believe it is open nine months in the year to suitable ships. Only three boats have been lost, so far as is known, in navigating the straits. The only risk is that of encountering ice from Baffin Bay, but engineering may overcome that difficulty once it is seriously faced. At present there are millions of bushels of wheat held up in Canada owing to the congestion on the St. Lawrence. Anything of this kind will be obviated by the development of the new scheme."

An experienced projector possessing an intimate knowledge of the northern Canadian Provinces, also interviewed upon the scheme, stated that it promised the development of the whole of Northern Canada. "It will create such a boom," he added, "that the Dominion Government won't know where they are. There are thousands of miles of country practically unexplored yet abounding in natural wealth. My friends who have traversed the Peace River state that nugget gold is in abundance, whilst I myself know that the Indians get their coal upon the surface. If I am not mistaken, Fort Churchill may eventually prove the eastern terminal of a line penetrating right into the heart of Athabasca and the richest grain country in the dominion."

POOR ON $5000 A WEEK

Adventures of Prince Jamsetjee

Prince Jamsetjee, the eldest of the Gaekwar of Baroda, married an American while he was at Harvard University, where he had been sent by his father. The Prince did not take a degree, but it was said that he had finished his studies and was going home to take up his position in his father's court. It is learned, however, that the young Indian Prince recently had his allowance cut in half and was unable with the smaller amount to "hold his end up" with the millionaire set with which he was associated. The Gaekwar had been allowing his son $5000 a week, but when this was cut to $2500 the young man decided that he would return to India. The incident is a revelation to a great many people of how expensively one may live at Harvard.

How a Woman Assists her Husband by Tact and Thought.

Quite recently I attended a debate at a women's club where there was a discussion on "How a woman can develop her own individuality in order to attain success. One of the most prominent speakers said to me: "What process do you adopt to develop your individuality?"

I fear she was not entirely pleased with my answer when I replied, "I have always been too busy helping my husband to develop his individuality in order that he might attain success in his career, and my personal gifts have all been used in my duties as a wife."

As a matter of fact there has been no sacrifice on my part to help my husband by every means in my power to realise success in his career was the ideal life I set before my eyes even on the first day we were engaged, and I consider that there is more joy and happiness in serving the man I love than in working entirely to develop my own particular individuality.

And my husband has been fortunate enough to attain success, and though he tells all his friends that he would never have got to the summit of his career without my help I do not think he quite realises that the real value of my services has all in the constant attention to what are generally considered but the trifling attentions of domestic life.

Perhaps the maternal elements must play the largest part if a wife really wishes to keep her husband in such mental and physical trim that he can fully develop all his faculties, and she must watch over him as a mother watches over her child, thinking nothing too small to escape her attention and planning out her daily routine always with the idea that the house must be run with a view to his comfort and interest.

For instance, it may seem a trifling matter to many women who are absorbed in some great artistic career that I made it my first business to study my husband's digestion. When I had discovered the diet that suited him I learned to cook the meals myself in order that I might always be able to instruct any servant to serve them in the right way.

To look after a husband's physical health means incessant attention and care, but to worry and fidget a man about his muffler and overcoat and to suggest continually that he will catch cold if he omits certain wifely precautions is a great mistake.

Silence is a wonderful minister to a tired man: all the little attentions to his physical comfort could be offered without any great flow of words and I found that such a small service as quietly leaving a cup of tea in readiness when my husband was at work was more likely to be accepted than if I had spent ten minutes in imploring him to drink it and expatiating on the benefits it would do him later.

Domestic worries were never even breathed to him, and I have no doubt that to this day he thinks the whole household machinery goes on oiled wheels because he has never been permitted to hear any of its creaking.

But there are other ways in which a wife can materially help her husband. She must make him feel that she is the comrade as well as the wife.

There are two kinds of women—the one who takes the heart out of a man and the one who puts it back—and the wife must be the one who restores the heart and energy when the fight against obstacles has been fierce and exhausting.

She must therefore learn, as I learned, to wear a smiling face when disaster threatens to engulf her husband's schemes. It may seem a trifling thing to refuse to appear disheartened when a man pouring out tales of loss and disappointment but I am not naturally a heroine, and I confess that many a time I would gladly have burst out weeping at the recital of cruel disappointments had I not proved by experience that my husband would have been trebly distressed by the sight of any tears or expression of grief.

I was resolved, too, that there should be no open disparity of tastes and sympathies, and I learned to interest myself in my husband's hobbies as well as in his actual profession.

"All the applause you get is second hand and comes by way of your husband," was the remark of another friend to me when someone was speaking of my husband's distinguished career.

But I am more than contented. My husband and I are true partners. I can only give the small services and ministrations of daily life, and my reward is to see that his career has been built upon this foundation and that I have had a hand in his success.—Exchange.

PROMOTING CHILD EMIGRATION

The Rev. Mr. Whalley, secretary of the Child Emigration Society, in addressing a representative meeting at Stirling, Scotland, emphasized the two great needs of the present day—the need of the Dominions for trained agricultural populations to cultivate the vast tracts of unoccupied land, and the need for the removal of thousands of children in Great Britain from their sordid environment in order that they might live healthy and useful lives.
