ON LOVE AND FRIENDSHIP.

To Young Ladies:

The luxury and dissipation that prevail in genteel life, so it corrupts the heart in many respects, so it renders it incapable of a warm, sincere, and steady friendship. A happy choice of friends will be of the utmost consequence to you, as they will assist you by their advice and good offices. But the immediate gratification which friendship affords to a warm, open and ingenuous heart, is of itself a sufficient motive to court it. In the choice of your friends, have your principal regard to goodness of heart and fidelity. If they also possess taste and genius, that will still make them more agreeable and useful companions.

You have particular reasons to place confidence in those who have shown affection for you in your early days, when you were incapable of making them any return. This is a kind obligation for which you cannot be too grateful. If you have the good fortune to meet with any who deserve the name of friends, unbosom yourself with the utmost confidence. It is one of the world's maxims never to trust any person with a secret, the discovery of which could give you any pain, but it is the maxim of a little mind and a cold heart, unless where it is the effect of frequent disappointments and bad usage. An open temper, if restrained but by tolerable prudence, will make you, on the whole, much happier than a reserved, suspicious one, although you may sometimes suffer by it. Coldness and distrust, are the two certain consequences of age and experience; but they are unpleasant feelings, and need not be anticipated before their time.

But, however open you may be in talking of your affairs, never discover the secrets of one friend to another. These are sacred deposits, which do not belong to you, nor have you any right to make use of them.

There is another case in which I suspect it is proper to be secret, not so much from motives of prudence as delicacy; I mean, in love matters. Though a woman has no reason to be ashamed of an attachment to a man of merit, yet nature, whose authority is superior to philosophy, has annexed a sense of shame to it. It is even long before a woman of delicacy dares avow to her own heart that she loves; and when all the subterfuges of ingenuity to conceal it from herself fail she feels violence done both to herself and to her modesty.

This, I should imagine, must be always the case, where she is not sure of a return to her attachment. In such a situation, to lay the heart open to any person whatever does not appear to me consistent with the perfection of female delicacy. But perhaps I am in the wrong. At the same time I must tell you that in point of prudence, it concerns you to attend well to the consequences of such a discovery. These secrets, however important in your own estimation, may appear very trifling to your friend, who possibly will not enter into your feelings, but may rather consider them as a subject of pleasantry. For this reason love secrets are of all others the worst kept. But the consequences to you may be very serious, as no man of spirit and delicacy ever valued a heart much hackneyed in the ways of love. If, therefore, you must have a friend to pour out your heart to, be sure of her honor and secrecy. Let her not be a married woman, especially if she live happily with her husband. There are certain unguarded moments in which such a woman, though the best and worthiest of her sex, may let hints escape, which, at other times, or to any other person than her husband, she would be incapable of; nor will a husband, in this case, feel himself under the same obligations of secrecy and honor as if you had put your confidence originally in himself, especially on a subject which the world is apt to treat so lightly.

If all other circumstances are equal, there are obvious advantages in your making friends of your brothers and sisters. The ties of blood, and your being so much united in one common interest, form an additional bond of union to your friendship. If your brothers should have the good fortune to have hearts susceptible of friendship, to possess truth, honor, and delicacy of sentiment, they are the fittest and most unexceptionable confidants. By placing confidence in them you will receive every advantage which you could hope for from the friendship of men, without any of the inconveniences that attend such connections with our sex.

Beware of making confidants of your servants. Dignity, not properly understood, very readily degenerates into pride, which enters into no friendship, because it cannot bear an equal, and is so fond of flattery as to grasp at it even from servants and dependants. The most intimate confidants, therefore, of proud people, are valets de chambres and waiting women. Show the utmost humanity to your servants; make their situation as comfortable as possible; but if you make them your confidants, you spoil them, and debase yourselves.

Never allow any person, under the pretended sanction of friendship to be so familiar as to lose a proper respect for you. Never allow them to lense you on any subject that is disagreeable, or where you have once taken your resolution. Many will tell you, that this is inconsistent with the freedom which friendship allows; without it, you may be liked as a child, but never will be loved as an equal. The temper and disposition of the heart, in your sex, make you enter more readily into friendship than men.

Your natural propensity to it is so strong that you often run into intimacies which you soon have sufficient cause to repent of, and this makes friendship so very fluctuating. Another great obstacle to the sincerity, as well as steadiness of your friendship, is the great clashing of your interest in the pursuit of love, ambition, or vanity. For these reasons, it would appear at first sight more eligible for you to contract your friendship with the men. Among other obvious advantages of an easy intercourse between the two sexes, it occasions an emulation and exertion in each to excel and be agreeable; hence their respective excellencies are mutually communicated and blended. As their interests in no degree interfere, there can be no foundation for jealousy or suspicion of rivalship. The friendship of a man for a woman, is always blended with a tenderness which he never feels for one of his own sex, even where love is in no degree concerned. Besides, we are conscious of a natural title you have to our protection and good offices; and therefore we feel an additional obligation of honor to serve you, and to observe an inviolable secrecy, whenever you confide in us. But apply these observations with great caution. Thousands of women of the best hearts and finest talents have been ruined by men who have approached them under the suspicious name of friendship. But, supposing a man to have the most undoubted honor, yet his friendship to a woman is so near akin to love that, if she be very agreeable in her person, she will probably very soon find a lover where she only wished to find a friend. Let me here, however, warn you of that weakness so common among vain women, the imagination that every man who takes particular notice of you is a lover. Nothing can expose you more to ridicule than the taking up of a man on the suspicion of his being your lover, who perhaps, never once thought of you in that view, and giving yourselves those airs so common among silly women on such occasions.

Police Court News.

Brampton Banner

A seventeen year old youth was before P. M. Crawford charged with being drunk, a condition in which minors are not lawfully indulge. He was charged $5 for his indiscretion.

The goal keeper of the invincible Excelsiors H shipped a small boy for stealing candles from a baby. This sort of thing is scaled up in the Police Court as common assault and the goal tender was assessed $5.75 for his hasty temper.

Another young man, of age, who was on a drunk, was remanded to the jail for a week. He was the only prisoner and the lonesomeness of it seemed to have had such a good effect that the P. M. believed his promises never to get drunk again and let him go.

MOOSE PLENTIFUL NEAR RUEL.

Best Moose Country in Ontario Reached in a Day.

The impression seems to prevail that moose hunting is synonymous with hardship and that it is necessary to go a long distance from civilization in order to shoot this monarch of the forest. While this may be the case in regard to many districts, the northern territory traversed by the Canadian Northern Ontario Railway forms the great exception. Hunters may now go to Ruel by rail and there transfer to Clemows launches, which run from that point down the Opickinimicka River and to Dechene Lake. Hunters can make camp right on the shores of these waters in the centre of the best moose country in Ontario. Guides can be secured and all hunting supplies purchased at this point.

The service of the Canadian Northern Ontario Railway to these hunting grounds is almost too well known to require any introduction to the sportsman. Solid vestibuled trains are operated, exclusively, and special rates will be in effect good going October 7th to November 9th, returning up to December 12th.

Before making your annual pilgrimage to the woods this fall, investigate the hunting possibilities of the territory along the lines of the Canadian Northern Ontario Railway, and be assured of a good season's sport.

A postcard to R. L. Fairbairn, General Passenger Agent, Canadian Northern Ontario Railway, Toronto, will bring you folders and all information.

WOMAN'S MOST SUCCESSFUL MEDICINE

Known All Over The World—Known Only For The Good It Has Done.

We know of no other medicine which has been so successful in removing the ailments of women or received so many testimonials, as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. In nearly every community you will find women who have been restored to health by this female medicine. Almost every woman you meet knows of the great good it has been doing among suffering women for the past 30 years.

Fox Creek, N. B.—"I have always had pains in the abdomen and a weakness there and often after meals a soreness in my stomach. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me much good. I am stronger, digestion is better and I can work with ambition. I have encouraged many mothers of families to take it as it is the best remedy in the world. You can publish this in the papers."—Mrs. William S. Bourque, Fox Creek, N. B.

In the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., are files containing hundreds of thousands of letters from women seeking health, in which many openly state over their own signatures that they have regained their health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, many of whom state that it has saved them from surgical operations.

Extensive Scheme of Irrigation Recommended for Australia

N. R. W. Nicken, formerly Minister of Lands for Australia, who conducted an investigation into the irrigation methods of North America, has issued a report in which he says that the eastern coast of Australia can be made quite as productive as any similar area in Canada. He recommends the Government undertake extensive irrigation works, declaring that the cost of the work would be amply repaid.

Mr. Nicken also recommends the organization of a general scheme of immigration from Canada, the New South Wales Government undertaking to pay a proportion of the fares of those persons possessing a certain amount of capital.

Red Tape Keeps Patients Out.

Although the new county house of refuge at Dundas has been opened for more than a month, it was learned this morning that not a single inmate has yet been admitted to the institution. Warden Mullen explained this morning that the reason for this was because the printed admittance papers have not yet been secured by the committee. Under the regulations, the superintendent of the house of refuge cannot admit any inmate without the necessary legal documents being produced, and as these have not been yet received, the new building is standing empty without any inmates.—Hamilton Spectator.

DIVINE REWARDS ARE ETERNAL LIFE

Eternal Death the Divine Punishment for Incorrigible.

Pastor Russell, in Eloquent Discourse, Yesterday at Columbus, Ohio, Brought Comfort and Satisfaction to Many Who Listened to His Exposition of a Text Misapplied by Many.

PASTOR RUSSELL

Columbus, Ohio, Sept. 8. — Pastor Russell chose for his text to-day one that has doubtless been misapplied by many theologians. It was the last verse of the Parable of the Sheep and the Goats. "These shall go away into everlasting punishment: but the righteous into life eternal." —Matt. 25:46.

Pastor Russell proved on this occasion, as he usually does, that he has a clear line on many of the theologians of the past and present. He posit on with respect to this Parable is that the application of it is not to this Age, but to the future one. This is distinctly shown in the opening verse of the Parable itself: he said, "When the Son of Man shall come in His glory, and all the holy angels with Him, then shall He sit upon the Throne of His Glory." (V. 31.)

And besides, the Pastor said, When the Son of Man shall sit on His Throne and have before Him all nations, it is evident from Scripture that the True Church will sit with Him; that the nations will be the remainder of humanity. As proof of this he quoted Scripture: "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with Me in My Throne." (Rev. 3:21.) Another, "To him that overcometh will I give power over the nations" (Rev. 2:26.) And again, "Know ye not that the saints shall judge the world,"—"all nations."—I. Cor. 6:2.

That this work of judging and reigning over the nations of earth is not to be during a day of twenty-four hours, he said, is evident from Scripture also. For instance, "They shall be priests of God and of Christ and shall reign with Him a thousand years." (II. Peter 3:7, 8; Rev. 20:6.) It is plainly shown also, he said, that this exercise of world-wide power will be during Satan's imprisonment when his influence for evil, exerted for six thousand years previously, will be absolutely restrained until the thousand years shall have ended.

There is no doubt that the correct view of the doctrine of Election has much to do with clarifying the theological atmosphere of the miasma of the past. If everybody could get the Bible focus upon this important doctrine, every other theological question would become as clear as noonday. If everybody could see clearly that the true Church is being elected, or selected, in this Age, according to faithfulness and character-development, by way of preparation for the great service to be rendered the world in the next Age, there would be few problems remaining to be cleared up.

The Sheep—the Goats—the Fire.

The Parable proceeds to show the separating work that will progress throughout the thousand-year exercise of Divine power and authority on earth. At its conclusion all the peoples of the nations will have taken their places, either as sheep or goats. To the sheep class will be said, "Come, ye blessed of My Father, inherit the Kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world."

The sheep class of the Parable represent all of Adam's race brought back to perfection by the process of Restitution during Messiah's reign of a thousand years. (Acts 3:19-21.) To them will come the dominion which Adam lost and which Jesus redeemed at Calvary. Next the fate of the goat class is stated—not in literal language, but in symbol. It should be borne in mind that "without a parable spake He not to the people." In other words, everything which Jesus said to the people was figurative, to the end that only those of the right condition of heart might be able to understand, as this was the character of the class that God designed should be accorded the honor of reigning with Messiah over the earth. To these "it is given to know the Mysteries of the Kingdom of Heaven."—Matt. 13:11.

The message of the great King to the goat class, the Parable proceeds to show, will be, "Depart from Me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the Devil and his angels." There is a large class of short-sighted people who while thinking that the goats represent an incorrigible class, insist that the fire is real, and not symbolic. But there is an increasingly large class of Bible students who recognize, said Pastor Russell, that "fire" throughout the Bible is used figuratively to represent destruction. He pointed to St. Peter's summing up of the fate of the incorrigibly wicked as follows: "These, as natural brute beasts, made to be taken and destroyed, speak evil of the things that they understand not; and shall utterly perish in their own corruption."—II. Peter 2:12.

The world, continued Pastor Russell, never lost heaven and is nowhere promised heaven. Adam's loss was an earthly Eden and human perfection. Jesus declares that He "came to seek and to save that which was lost." Among other things, the work of His Kingdom, for a thousand years will be the bringing of earth to a Paradise condition. And He, together with Him, will restore all the willing and obedient of mankind to all that was lost. He will bring them back again to the image and likeness of God in the flesh.
