No Frightfulness in the United States.

(New York "World")

If the nations of the earth ever reach an understanding as to neutral rights, one of the first to be asserted will be freedom from nagging and bedevilment by belligerents.

The energy exhibited by Germany in the United States since the beginning of the war has been as pronounced in its way as its activity in the theatre of strife. Our mails are cluttered with partizan circulars. Our bill-boards are plastered with misleading posters. Our public discussion is perverted by the fulminations of spurious peace societies and neutrality leagues. Our politics is debauched with a foreign issue. Our industry is corrupted by conspiracy and probably bribery. Our Government is traitorously assailed by lying orators and writers. On all sides our police are engaged in preventing or detecting crimes by misguided men against life and property.

A propaganda of this kind in time of peace would lead straight to war. Carried on as it has been during a year of strife, nothing but the good nature and poise of the American people has enabled them to escape complications of the most serious character. We have been attacked in our honor, in our occupations, in our opinions, in our commerce and in our peace by every art known to intrigue and by every consideration known to bribery. The whole German campaign in this country has been an insult to decent German-Americans and an outrageous affront to Americans of every other descent or affiliation.

Of the effect of this enterprise upon the sane elements of our population we need have no fear. Wherever in such circles it is not met with smiles, it is ignored with disgust. But the fact that it appeals specially to the unstable and violent, the demented and vicious, cannot be overlooked.

We must not permit hired agitators in this country to instigate murder, arson or any other form of terrorism. We must let Germans in America as well as Germans in Europe know that what they call frightfulness is not safely to be employed against a friendly and neutral people.

To Prevent Loss.

Thousands of farmers have lost thousands of dollars this year through smut in wheat, oats and barley.

This loss can be prevented in ONE WAY ONLY, and that is by treating the seed. Be sure therefore that your fall wheat is properly treated before being put into the ground this fall.

There are two methods of treating the seed, as follows:—

1. Mix one-half pint of formalin in 21 gallons of water. Place the seed to be treated in a course sack; a bran sack is excellent for the purpose. Fill the sack about three parts full and immerse in the formalin solution for twenty minutes. During the treatment raise the sack up and down several times in the solution to insure wetting every grain that it contains.

After treating spread the grain out thinly on a clean floor or canvas where it can be stirred and allowed to dry sufficiently to be sown. The sooner it is sown after treatment the better. Twenty gallons of the solution will treat about 20 bushels of grain. Several treatments may be made with the same solution, each lot will require to be immersed for twenty minutes.

2. Mix one pint of formalin with 40 gallons of water. Place the grain to be treated in a heap on a clean canvas or floor. Sprinkle the formalin solution over the grain, then shovel the grain over into another pile so as to mix it thoroughly, then sprinkle and shovel again. Repeat this until every grain is moistened by the solution, then cover the pile with sacking and leave for 3 or 4 hours. At the end of this time spread the grain out thinly to dry, shovelling it over three or four times will hasten the drying. Forty gallons of the formalin solution is sufficient to sprinkle between thirty and forty bushels of grain, smaller amounts in proportion.

Soldier's Swagger Cane.

(Leader Advertiser)

It is one of the regulations of the British Army that every soldier when walking out must carry in his hand a stick or cane. To preserve a soldierly appearance and prevent anything like shouldering it he must. The rule applies to all ranks and should any one seek to evade it he would find his progress barred by the sentry at the barrack gate or entrance to camp. Privates generally carry light canes or "swagger sticks," non-commissioned officers favorite sticks and officers invariably seem for the more expensive kind. It is a question that has often been asked "Who first suggested the idea?" But nobody seems to know. From the earliest times drill sergeants and drum majors have carried sticks, and the fashion may have come from that fact. Soldiers as a rule buy their own sticks, but in one or two regiments a recruit is presented with one when he gets his uniform. If this gets lost, however, he has to buy the next and subsequent ones. There is a story told of a soldier one day who couldn't find his cane, and knowing he would be challenged if he didn't have something in his hand quietly picked up a poker, and passed through the gate all right with it in his fist.

SUFFERED EVERYTHING

For Years, Restored To Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Canadian women are continually writing us such letters as the two following, which are heartfelt expressions of gratitude for restored health:

Glanford Station, Ont.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and never found any medicine to compare with it. I had ulcers and falling of womb and doctors did me no good. I suffered dreadfully for years until I began taking your medicine. I also recommend it for nervousness and indigestion."—Mrs. HENRY CLARK, Glanford Station, Ont.

Chesterville, Ont.—"I heard your medicines highly praised, and a year ago I began taking them for falling of womb and ovarian trouble.

"My left side pained me all the time and just before my periods which were irregular and painful it would be worse. To sit down caused me pain and suffering and I would be so nervous sometimes that I could not bear to see any one or hear any one speak. Little specks would float before my eyes and I was always constipated.

"I cannot say too much for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills, for there are no medicines like them. I have taken them and I recommend them to all women. You may publish this testimonial."—Mrs. STEPHEN J. MARTIN, Chesterville, Ontario, Canada.

THE PREACHER'S FRUIT

(By Peter McArthur)

Once upon a time—you see I know how to begin a story in the right way—a barefoot boy danced by the roadside and shouted gleefully. It was in Canada, back in the nineteenth century, in the pioneer days. The little boy was healthy and freckled and what he lacked in clothes he made up in the kind of body one would have inside of clothes. And he was very, very happy. In fact he was so happy that a passing friend stopped to ask him the cause of it all.

"Hurray!" shouted he of the freckles.

"Why so happy?" asked the friend.

"The preacher is coming to dinner!"

"I didn't think you were so fond of him."

"I ain't, but whenever the preacher comes to dinner we always have peach preserves."

It really is not much of a story and I am giving it on account of its arch-e-o-log-i-cal interest and not because it is so very funny. It dates back to the days when people merely knew that peaches are the best of fruits and had not discovered that Canada is the best place to raise the very best of them. The woman who was fortunate enough to get some from a sheltered orchard or from a lone tree that was so fortunately situated that it escaped the frost put up a few to have for such special occasions as the visit of the preacher. In those days the minister was a much more welcome visitor on the farm than the agent of get-rich-quick concerns and mining promoters and there is a moral to that if I only had time to work it out. Because peaches were saved for such extra special occasions a tradition has grown up about them in many parts of the country. Some housewives, otherwise very bright, and a credit to the Farmer's Institutes to which they belong, consider it an extravagance to preserve peaches unless they get them at sacrifice prices. Yet these same women will pay from ten to fifteen cents a quart for currants and berries that need far more sugar to do them up than the already sweet peaches. As peaches usually come in eleven-quart baskets you will find if you divide the price by eleven that peaches cost less per quart than any other fruit. But because they were once so great a luxury housewives are slow to realize that they should have more of them than of any kind of fruit, for they are both the cheapest and the best. There is no reason why every farmer's wife in the districts where peaches cannot be grown should not buy them as freely as they do other fruits and have them not only when the preacher comes to dinner but when the boys and girls come home from the city and at all other times when they want to have something luxurious on the table.

Also it should be remembered that for eating from the hand the peach is the best fruit of all, but you should use for this purpose only the peaches that you buy in the full light of day. Once upon a time, or perhaps I should say "Once upon another time," a newly arrived Irishman went out with a friend to steal peaches. It was dark and Pat had been told to grope along the branches for the fruit. Presently he whispered, "Moike!" His friend answered "Phwat!" "Has paiches got legs?" "Naw." "Then begobs I've swallowed a straddle bug."
