Walking on Railway Tracks.

Editor of the Champion

Toronto, Ont., Sept 14, 1915.

Dear Sir,—

During the six months ended June 30th, 1915, thirty-eight (38) persons were killed and thirty-four (34) were injured on the Grand Trunk Ry. while trespassing on its property. All but a small percentage of such persons were citizens of the communities in which they were killed and injured, business men, laborers and people generally using the Company's tracks and yards as walk ways for their own convenience.

The experience of the Grand Trunk in this respect during this period is typical of the experience of all roads in Canada and the United States year in and year out, as shown by the fact that almost 6000 persons are killed and about the same number injured in the two countries every year while trespassing on railways. In fact, more than 50 per. of all persons killed on railways from all causes are trespassers.

If 6000 persons should be killed in one accident, people would be horrified and would rise as one man determined to prevent a similar occurrence, yet here is a practice, unnecessary and preventable, which every year kills and injures more than twice as many persons as the Titanic, Empress of Ireland, Lusitania, Iroquois and Eastland disasters combined, and we are doing practically nothing to prevent it. Are we logical or sentimental? Do we really value human life and try earnestly and persistently to conserve it, or do we merely rise to fitful action when some great horror stirs our sentiments and passions?

The Railway Act makes trespassing on railway property an offence punishable by fine or imprisonment, but the trouble is that no one pays any attention to the law because it is so seldom enforced. In fact, a considerable proportion of the public seem to regard it as their perfect right to walk on railway tracks and through railway yards whenever they please and resent even a polite request to keep off the company's property. The dangerous practice of walking on railway tracks has been indulged in so long and so generally that it will be difficult to break it up, but that it should be stopped, a mere reference to the serious results clearly proves.

Aside from the protection to life and limb which would result from the enforcement of existing laws on this subject, there are other considerations of great importance involved in this problem. The presence of persons on tracks, especially in great numbers, detracts attention of engineers on approaching trains from the performance of their proper duties, the injuries and deaths which they witness, and the narrow escapes from same, place upon them an unnecessary mental strain all of which propardises, to a material extent, the safety of the travelling public.

We hear a great deal about the tramp problem. If walking along railway tracks and unlawfully riding on trains were topped the tramp problem would be to a considerable extent eliminated. Railways are compelled each year to submit to losses by killing nearly a hundred dollars, from pilfering and the hidden, like other placed upon commodities, moved by freight indirectly by the public. The enforcement of the law would materially reduce the burden.

The solution of the problem is one of the most problems of the educational public sentiment to the point where the necessity for drastic action will be appreciated, and we venture to send the information to your attention in the belief that the public interest involved makes it a proper subject for your serious consideration and in the hope that you may find it convenient to lend your efforts towards a proper solution.

Yours truly,

GEO. BRUCE STAVERT,

How Animals Prefer Bath

Pigeons larks and cockatoos like their baths in the rain. Game birds and poultry take dust baths. The common sparrow likes a dry shampoo in the dust and plunge in the water. Reptiles soak themselves, elephants bath their calves with mud, then wash it off. Rhinoceroses, buffaloes, dogs, bears and tigers like to wallow, the equine tribe favor a roll in the sand, cats lick and their respective relatives lick themselves clean, bats lick and scratch, and it is said that the cold hard scratching of monkeys is not so much in the search of parasites as a kind of self curry combing.

A Unique Postoffice

Along Canada's thousands of postoffices there is one that is said to be the only double postoffice in the world. The office is half in Canada and half in the United States, with Beebe, Quebec, on the one side and Beebe, Vermont, on the other.

An iron post in the middle of the front porch marks the international boundary line. Aside from its location the building is of interest on account of the material from which it is built, which is granite, native to the locality, and on account of its age.

Dancing was originally a religious observance.

OLDER BUT STRONGER

To be healthy at seventy, prepare at forty, is sound advice, because in the strength of middle life we too often forget that neglected colds, or careless treatment of slight aches and pains, simply undermine strength and bring chronic weakness for later years.

To be stronger when older, keep your blood pure and rich and active with the strength-building and blood-nourishing properties of Scott's Emulsion which is a food, a tonic and a medicine to keep your blood rich, alleviate rheumatism and avoid sickness. At any drug store.

ORIGIN OF THE PEACH

(By Peter McArthur)

It is sometimes a mistake to consult the Encyclopædia before writing an article. The misinformation in the world is much more picturesque than the facts. Facts have a tendency to make one prosy and commonplace.

I am moved to make these observations because for some time past I had been meditating a little essay on the peach, and I remembered a story I had heard or read somewhere about the origin of this most delicious fruit. According to the best of my information and belief up to fifteen minutes ago the peach originated in Spain after the Moorish invasion. The African conquerors brought with them bitter almonds with which to poison their arrows and planted the pits in the newly conquered country so that they might have an unfailing supply of this method of spreading Moorish Kultur. As they had no Hague Tribunal in those days there were no international agreements against using poisoned weapons—and it probably wouldn't have mattered much if there had been.

But to resume. According to the pretty tale I remembered, the bitter almond developed in the salubrious climate of Spain and lost its ancient character, ceased to be poisonous and became a peach. With this as a text I had proposed to show that the peach is the one really good thing that the world has ever derived from war, but alas, I needed a few more facts and I consulted the Encyclopædia where I found no mention of my pretty Spanish tale. I found both Greek and Latin references to the peach and a learned discussion as to whether the fruit had been first developed to perfection in Persia or in China. The only reference to the bitter almond was a note to the effect that Darwin regarded the peach as a relation of the almond. It seems that in China they not only raise peaches of excellent quality but also of unusual shapes. They have a flat peach in which the ends of the pit are merely covered by the skin while the sides have a thick layer of fruit pulp. They also have another kind which is long and crooked and as nearly as I could learn from the dictionary all kinds of peaches are good eating. It is pleasing to know that even the Encyclopædia gives Canada the credit for raising the best peaches of all, and now they are at their best.

AILING WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

Mrs. Doucette Tells of her Distressing Symptoms During Change of Life and How She Found Relief.

Belleville, Nova Scotia, Can.—"Three years ago I was suffering badly with what the doctors called Change of Life. I was so bad that I had to stay in bed. Some friends told me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it helped me from the first. It is the only medicine I took that did help me and I recommend it. You don't know how thankful and grateful I am. I give you permission to publish what your good medicine has done for me."—Mrs. SIMON DOUCETTE, Belleville, Yarmouth Co., Nova Scotia, Canada.

Such warning symptoms as sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, backaches, dread of impending evil, timidity, sounds in the ears, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness and inquietude, and dizziness, are promptly heeded by intelligent women who are approaching the period in life when womah's great change may be expected.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound invigorates and strengthens the female organism and builds up the weakened nervous system. It has carried many women safely through this crisis.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

Scotch Moonshiners Blamed For Strange Unquenchable Flames

A fire which raged for thirty years and defied all attempts to extinguish it sounds like a fantastic romance, yet this phenomenon actually took place some ninety or one hundred years ago. Some illicit whiskey distillers had set up their plant in the workings of a disused coal mine, on a lonely part of the South Souchie Coalfield in Scotland, but an accident, entirely independent of the activity of the revenue officers, compelled them to change their quarters. They discovered that one of their furnaces had caused a smouldering fire in the abandoned coal-seam, and, failing in their efforts to extinguish it, the "moonshiners" left the place in a hurry, needless to say, without reporting the occurrence to the authorities.

The fire in the old pit continued to smoulder, until at night the flames issuing from the mouth of the shaft, attracted the attention of the inhabitants around; but it was found that the fire had reached such a point that all attempts to put it out proved futile.

Worn Out By Paper

A steel screw, which for 20 years helped to hold together the guide board of a wallpaper trimmer, was worn completely in two merely by paper rubbing against it. During that time approximately 400,000 rolls of paper were trimmed by the machine. The screw was cut as smooth as could have been done by any instrument.

VIOLENT ATTACKS OF DYSPEPSIA

Suffered Tortures Until She Tried "Fruit-a-tives"

ST. JEAN DE MATHA, Jan. 27th, 1914.

"After suffering for a long time with Dyspepsia, I have been made well by "Fruit-a-tives." I suffered so much that at last I would not dare to eat for I was afraid of dying. Five years ago, I received samples of "Fruit-a-tives" and after taking them I felt relief. Then I sent for three boxes and I kept improving until I was well. I quickly regained my lost weight—and now I eat, sleep and digest well—in a word, I am fully recovered, thanks to 'Fruit-a-tives.'

GERMAN FIRE BOMBS

A description of incendiary bombs and how to deal with them, prepared by the British Fire Prevention Committee, is posted throughout Britain in public institutions or private houses alongside instructions for using fire extinguishers. A sketch shows what an incendiary bomb looks like, and a diagram shows its exact construction and what is inside it. The usual fire bomb dropped by a Zeppelin is conical in shape, the diameter at the base being about ten inches. It is wrapped round with inflammable cord, which gives it rather a nautical appearance, enhanced by a handle at the apex for lowering it over the gunwhale of the airship. The base is a flat cup, and from this to the handle runs a hollow metal funnel forming the centre and business part of the bomb. This central funnel is filled with thermite. Thermite is the preparation which on ignition produces a heat so intense as to melt steel. The ignition of thermite creates a tremendous glare of light, and the heat melts the metal funnel. The molten metal spreads when the bomb strikes. It sets up at once a fierce fire if it strikes anything combustible, but at the beginning it is only a small fire, and if it is tackled at once with water, it can be put out before it does much damage.

British and German Gold.

(New York "Times")

As one studies the continuing revelations of the conduct and character of the people in this country who have been talking so long and so loudly about "British gold" and its effectiveness in influencing the American press and through it American public sentiment, there gradually assumes form in the mind something between a suspicion and a conviction. The chief, if not the only object of this talk, may have been to start flowing toward certain empty pockets here a stream of German gold.

It is evident that the German gold has come, and in large quantities. It has produced a sudden and hitherto inexplicable prosperity among the German propagandists, except their own fortunes, but what they have propagated, seems to be merely a few little plots, some of them sufficiently annoying and irritating, but not one affecting public sentiment in the slightest degree or the press to any measurable extent.

Day and Night Service

Kindel Divanettes

For the small bed-sitting room or to give that "extra bed for emergencies" the Kindel Divanette has been especially made. A [illegible] comfortable davenport by day, made to match most of the popular signs, and a roomy, comfortable bed at night. It converts from the other quickly and easily.
